VII. SELECTING AND IMPANELING THE TRIAL JURY. — A.

IN GENERAL. — In a strict sense the jury is impaneled when the sheriff has entered their names into the panel,⁹ and the term "impaneled" simply means making a list of those who have been selected.¹⁰ In American practice the word "impaneled" is used of a jury drawn for the particular case as well as of the general list returned by the sheriff,¹¹ and has been applied to jurors accepted by both parties though the jury is not complete.¹² The use of the word in the record of the case does not imply that the jury has been sworn,¹³ and strictly 9. State v. Potter, 18 Conn. 166, citing Co. Litt. 158b and other common law authorities.

[a] Common Law Practice as Indicating Meaning of Term.—"The jury was originally formed by the selection of twelve men by the sheriff, their names were neither on a schedule and the jury was then said to be 'impaneled' and that of 'twelve men' was to try the case. Therefore a jury in the strict sense of the word, is said to be 'impaneled,' when it is ready to be charged with the case." State v. Cardoza, 11 S. C. 195, 258.

10. Zapf v. State, 35 Fla. 210, 17

So. 225. See Rich v. State, 1 Tex. App. 206.

[a] "'To empanel,' says Bouvier, is 'the writing the names of a jury on a schedule by the sheriff or other officer lawfully authorized.'" Lyman v. People, 7 Ill. App. 345.

11. State v. Mitchell, 199 Mo. 105, 97 S. W. 561; Rich v. State, 1 Tex. App. 206.

13. Conn.—State v. Potter, 18 Conn. 166. Fla.—Zapf v. State, 35 Fla. 210, 17 So. 225. Ill.—Lyman v. People, 7 Ill. App. 345, applied grand jury. Mo.

the jury is impaneled before it is sworn.¹⁴ The general rule is that in the absence of any statutory regulation the manner of impaneling will be left to the trial court's discretion.¹⁵

It is not necessary that any foreman be appointed by the court.¹⁶

The names of the jurors need not be set out in the record,¹⁷ nor that there were twelve jurors,¹⁸ nor need it be recited that they were "good and lawful men."¹⁹

B. DRAWING AND SELECTING.²⁰ — 1. Drawing by Lot. — In many jurisdictions, the names of the jurors are written on separate slips of paper which are folded, or rolled up and then placed in a box, or some substitute therefor, are shaken together and the slips drawn out one by one until the jury is completed.²¹ Provisions of the statute

State v. Mitchell, 199 Mo. 105, 97 S. W. 561. Tex.—Rich v. State, 1 Tex. App. 206.

[a] "The word impaneled means the final formation by the court, of the jury. It is the act that precedes the swearing of the jury, and which ascertains who are to be sworn," State v. Ostrander, 18 Iowa 435, quoted with approval in State v. Hurst, 123 Mo. App. 39, 99 S. W. 820. Both cases are relative to grand juries but the discussion seems to apply the rule to petit juries also.

14. State v. Potter, 18 Conn. 166; State v. Cardoza, 11 S. C. 195.

[a] Under statute requiring jurors to be kept together after impanelment (1) it was held reversible error to permit them to separate, though only part of the jury had been selected and they had not been sworn in chief. Grissom v. State, 4 Tex. App. 374. (2) But compare State v. Squaires, 2 Nev. 226, which holds that under a statute forbidding such separation "after the impanelment of the jury shall be completed," the impanelment is not complete until the jury are sworn and charged with the case. To same effect is Gerald v. State, 128 Ala. 6, 29 So. 614. And see generally as to the right or duty to keep jurors together before and after they are sworn, infra, IX, D.

20. Failure to properly draw or select as ground for challenge to the array, see infra, VII, E, 3, b, (X); as ground for discharge of particular juror, see infra, X.

21. Ala.—Brazier v. State, 44 Ala. 387. But note Acts Special Session, 1909, §32, p. 318, which abolishes use of box in criminal cases. Cal.—People v. Scoggins, 37 Cal. 676. Ill.—Walker v. Collier, 37 Ill. 362. Me.—Davis v. Bangor & P. R. Co., 60 Me. 303. N. J. State v. Lapp, 84 N. J. L. 19, 86 Atl. 62. N. Y.—Becker v. Sitterly, 58 How. Pr. 38. S. C.—State v. Campbell, 35 S. C. 28, 14 S. E. 292. Tex.—Gulf C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Keith, 74 Tex. 287, 11 S. W. 1117.

[a] Statute Does Not Apply to Sheriff's Jury.—Davis v. Bangor & P. R. Co., 60 Me. 303.

[b] Where the statute provides for a panel of twenty-four from which sixteen competent jurors are to be selected, it is not contemplated that twenty-four competent jurors shall first be obtained and the sixteen then determined by lot. Honesty v. Com., 81 Va. 283; Richards v. Com., 81 Va. 110.

as to the folding and drawing of the ballots are merely directory,²² but it is reversible error to refuse to choose, or draw by lot, as the statute requires,²³ though by some authorities the complaining party must show some resulting prejudice.²⁴ The drawing should be in open court.²⁵ Names of additional jurors summoned on special order of the court, to serve for the term, should be drawn from the box the same as regular jurors,²⁶ but where jurors have been summoned to serve in the particular case they may be presented without resorting to lot.²⁷

22. Cole v. Perry, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 584.

[a] Preparation of Slips.—A statutory requirement that the residence and occupation be noted on the slips is sufficiently complied with where the street and number of the juror's house is given and the word "Liquors" as indicating his occupation. Com. v. Bacon, 135 Mass. 521.

[b] Two Jurors' Names on One Slip. It was not a substantial compliance with the statute to write the name of two jurors on one slip. The slip was drawn and the name of one juror read. Brazier v. State, 44 Ala. 387.

[c] An error in placing names on the box which should not have been so placed, is harmless where none of those names were drawn. The result is just the same as if the slips upon which the names were written were blank pieces of paper. Kimbrell v. State, 130 Ala. 40, 30 So. 454.

Irregularity in drawing by lot as ground for challenge to the array, see infra, VII, E, 3, b, (X), (D).

23. Cal.—People v. Johnson, 104 Cal. 418, 38 Pac. 91, if properly objected to. Miss.—Steele v. State, 76 Miss. 387, 24 So. 910. N. Y.—Becker v. Sitterly, 58 How. Pr. 38.

[a] Where statute requires first twelve to be taken as jurors, the juror's place on the list, whether near the top or bottom, is important sometimes and so it is reversible error to fail to draw the names by lot. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Keith, 74 Tex. 287, 11 S. W. 1117.

[b] The rule that the right to challenge is one of rejection and not of selection does not go to the extent of doing away with the orderly procedure of drawing the individual jurors from the hat, wheel, or box. State v. Tidwell, 100 S. C. 248, 84 S. E. 778.

[c] Peremptory Challenges Exhausted.—"No one as a right to say by what particular jurors he shall be tried, but he has a right . . . to say by what particular jurors he shall not be tried, and this right is taken from him if after he has exhausted his challenges new names are for the first time put in and drawn out of the box." State v. Lapp, 84 N. J. L. 19, 86 Atl. 62.

24. State v. Kennedy, 11 La. Ann. 479.

[a] Where the juryman was absent on the first call but appeared later, defendant's attorney asked that he be called prior to the issuance of a special venire. This was refused but on the whole record the defendant was not harmed. Steele v. State, 76 Miss. 387, 24 So. 910.

25. Walker v. Collier, 37 Ill. 362.

26. State v. Green, 20 Iowa 424; State v. Brooks, 36 La. Ann. 334.

[a] Right of defendant to see list of regular jurors does not affect this rule. Defendant objected to the putting of the additional names in the box as it affected his right of peremptory challenge, based upon the knowledge he had gained from the publication of the list. But the court says that the publication is a purely statutory right and the operation of the statute is not to be extended by construction. State v. Brooks, 36 La. Ann. 334.

[b] A distinction is made between jurors drawn by commissioners under the court's order and talesman summoned directly under the judge's order without being so drawn. State v. Bordelon, 113 La. 690, 37 So. 603, approving State v. Brooks, 36 La. Ann. 334.

27. State v. Ryan, 70 Iowa 154, 30 N. W. 397; State v. Green, 20 Iowa 424; State v. Dorsey, 40 La. Ann. 739, 5 So. 26.

The statutory requirements as to the receptacle to be used are merely directory.²⁸ In the absence of a statutory requirement any method may be used which leaves the matter wholly to chance.²⁹ Where a juror's name has been inadvertently omitted the court may have the same placed in the box as soon as the mistake is discovered.³⁰ Jurors are, in some jurisdictions, called in the order in which their names appear on the list,³¹ and under this practice it has been held not necessary to call the names in the exact order in which they appear on the list.³² In other jurisdictions the names of jurors on special venire are placed in the box as they come in.³³

2. Drawing To Be From Regular Panels Generally. — Parties have

[a] Though the order is not to select from bystanders but from persons in any part of the parish remote from the scene of the crime. State v. Bordelon, 113 La. 690, 37 So. 603.

[b] Analogous to Summoning Bystanders.—Since the sheriff might have summoned bystanders to fill the jury he may after having summoned them from the body of the county under formal process call them in consecutive order or otherwise to make up the jury. State v. Green, 20 Iowa 424.

[c] Where names had been drawn from a talesman's box there was clearly no necessity for again drawing by lot and they are properly presented as they appear. State v. Wolf, 112 Iowa 458, 84 N. W. 536.

28. State v. Montgomery, 121 La. 1005, 46 So. 997.

[a] Drawing From Box Instead of Envelope.—The envelope containing the names was opened and slips shaken out into the box and drawing made therefrom. There is nothing objectionable in this. State v. Montgomery, 121 La. 1005, 46 So. 997.

[b] "A barrel is a 'box' within the purpose and requirement of the statute." Com. v. Bacon, 135 Mass. 521.

29. Benaway v. Conyne, 3 Pin. (Wis.) 196, 3 Chand. 214.

[a] "That clerk held slips in hand is a substantial compliance where it is clear that the names were 'drawn out fortuitously.'" Benaway v. Conyne, 3 Pin. (Wis.) 196, 3 Chand. 214.

[b] "While the statute is not clear as to the exact method to be pursued, its purpose is to provide for a chance drawing from the box, and since this was accomplished, no prejudice resulted to the appellant." Mercereau v. Maughlin Mill Co., 53 Wash. 475, 102 Pac. 232.

30. Stone v. State, 137 Ala. 1, 34 So. 629; Morrison v. State, 84 Ala. 405, 4 So. 402.

[a] Where jurors were "accidentally omitted" their names may be restored after the drawing has commenced. The circuit court rule is merely directory as to the requirement that all names be in the receptacle before the drawing. Where prisoner's legal rights were not impaired he cannot complain. State v. Campbell, 35 S. C. 28, 14 S. E. 292.

31. State v. Woodson, 43 La. Ann. 905, 9 So. 903; following State v. Kennedy, 11 La. Ann. 479; and distinguishing State v. Brooks, 36 La. Ann. 335; Code Crim. Proc. (Tex.) art. 677; Clark v. State, 8 Tex. App. 350.

[a] English Practice.—Reg. v. Frost, 9 Car. & P. 129, 38 E. C. L. 87.

[b] Procedure Where Discrepancy Discovered.—The statute provides that the names be called "in the order in which they appear on the list furnished the defendant." There being found to be a discrepancy between the lists served and the original the court properly required the defendant to call off the names from his list or submit to their being called from the original. Clark v. State, 8 Tex. App. 350.

32. Mansell v. Reg., Dears. & B. 375, 8 E. & B. 54, 4 Jur. N. S. 432, 27 L. J. M. C. 4, 92 E. C. L. 52, 120 Eng. Reprint 20, they may be called in a different order where the convenience of the court requires.

[a] Need Not Begin With First Name on List.—There was no prejudice shown nor any pretense that the jury chosen was not fair and impartial. State v. Kennedy, 11 La. Ann. 479.

a right to demand that they be tried by jurors selected from the regular list so far as it is practicable to do so,³⁴ and to that extent other persons should not be resorted to before the regular venire has been exhausted.³⁵ Also a panel regularly drawn and summoned for the trial of a particular case cannot be capriciously discharged and another panel summoned.³⁶ If successive special venires become necessary to complete the jury, each venire in turn must be exhausted before recourse can be had to the jurors summoned on another.³⁷

3. Number Present Before or During Impaneling.—The general rule is to draw twelve men before either side is obliged to examine the jurors.³⁸ Under the statutes of some states one is entitled to have a full panel of a specified number present before the impaneling of the jury is commenced,³⁹ but in the absence of such a statute this is not essential.⁴⁰ Except in so far as it may be necessary to have a full panel before requiring challenges,⁴¹ it is not necessary to keep the panel filled to any particular number by summoning new jurors to take the place of those excused,⁴² though it may be done as a matter of favor, in the court's discretion.⁴³

5. Members of Panel Engaged in Another Case.—When members of the regular panel having been impaneled in another case are discharged or excused therefrom, their names should be immediately restored to the jury box, though the drawing therefrom has commenced,⁵⁶ and this is the rule even after the names in the box have been exhausted and the regular jurors come in while talesmen are being examined,⁵⁷ and, it seems, even after some of the talesmen have been sworn on voir dire.⁵⁸ However, the court is not required to suspend proceedings until the jury engaged in the other case shall so report and be discharged,⁵⁹ and there is authority for the proposition that the court having made a lawful order for a special venire is entitled to complete the jury therefrom, though the regular jurors come in during the drawing.⁶⁰ Also the talesmen called having been qualified and accepted by one side, the court has a discretion as to completing the jury without resorting to the jurors who have just returned.⁶¹

C. STANDING JURORS ASIDE. — 1. History and Nature of Practice. At common law there existed a practice of standing jurors aside, by which the prosecution reserved its challenge until the whole panel was gone through.⁶³ The right does not extend to private prosecutors in libel cases,⁶⁴ and is never permitted to the defendant.⁶⁵ This practice extends to prosecutions for misdemeanors as well as felonies,⁶⁶

[c] That names are not being properly drawn from the box must be called to the court's attention at the time. Moss v. Appanoose, 109 Iowa 671, 81 N. W. 159.

[d] Names Improperly Written on Scrolls.—One who fails to object to putting on the scrolls the surnames only of persons summoned on a special venire cannot subsequently challenge those persons when their names are drawn out, merely because their Christian names were not also written on the scrolls. State v. Simmons, 51 N. C. 309.

[e] That clerk wrote out lists beforehand to expedite business, is an irregularity, but is waived by failure to object. McMahon v. State, 17 Tex. App. 321.

[f] That jurors were withdrawn from list and others substituted by clerk without authority should be brought to court's attention as soon as learned. It cannot be raised after verdict where known before. Kellam v. State, 17 Ga. App. 401, 87 S. E. 158.

[a] History of Practice.—This practice grew out of the fact that under statute 33 Edw. I, the prosecution had no right to peremptory challenge. It then became the custom to permit the crown not to show cause until the whole panel was gone through with. There seems to be some doubt as to whether the crown had to interpose a formal challenge and then not assign the cause until later. But however this may have been, the practice, at least in Pennsylvania, did not require any challenge, the prosecuting attorney merely directing the juror to "stand aside." See Com. v. Brown, 23 Pa. Super. 470, citing 2 Bac. Abr. and other English authorities. See also United States v. Marchant, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 480, 6 L. ed. 700; Com. v. Todd, 1 Pa. Co. Ct. 416; *Com. v. [b] Object of Practice.—The crown put juror aside until the end of the panel that it might be seen whether the prisoner could not get a jury of his choice from persons unobjectionable to the crown. State v. Bone, 52 N. C. 121.

and applies to jurors brought in on special venire, as well as to those of the regular panel.⁶⁷ The court may stand aside jurors of its own motion.⁶⁸

2. Present Status.—Standing aside has been in vogue in some jurisdictions,⁶⁹ and has been recognized even after the commonwealth has been given the right to peremptory challenges,⁷⁰ but it has been abolished in some states by construction, on the theory that the giving of peremptory challenges to the state, has done away with the reason for the right,⁷¹ and in other states it has been abrogated by direct legislation.⁷² Where the practice is allowed it is reversible error not to permit the commonwealth to stand jurors aside,⁷³ but it is harmless error to exclude the juror at once instead of standing him aside, where the complaining party had peremptories remaining when the jury was completed.⁷⁴ Where the practice is not permitted it is reversible error to allow the commonwealth to exercise the right in a manner prejudicial to defendant's rights;⁷⁵ but harmless error to permit it, where the jury was completed without exhausting the panel and recalling the juror.⁷⁶

3. Procedure. — a. In General. — The orderly practice is to call the regular panel first, standing aside those challenged by the state, before turning them over to the prisoner for examination.⁷⁷ But the state's challenge for cause need not be first determined.⁷⁸ The prisoner must then be given an opportunity to accept, or challenge for cause or peremptorily, the jurors so turned over to him.⁷⁹ The jurors are stood aside only until the entire panel is so examined,⁸⁰ and are then recalled in the order in which they were stood aside.⁸¹

b. Time To Exercise Right. — Standing aside may be after the box is filled as well as before.⁸² The right may be exercised after the juror has been examined on his voir dire, and challenged by the commonwealth for cause,⁸³ or after the defendant has exhausted his peremptories.⁸⁴

juror stood aside is not ground for a new trial where the juror remarked, as he was being stood aside, that he was called as a witness for the prisoner, and the clerk understanding that he was thereupon excused by consent, failed to recall him at the end of the panel. The prisoner and his counsel having heard the clerk state to the court that the panel was exhausted, acquiesced in that statement by failing to demand the juror's recall and waived the right to examine him. *State v. [a] Compare State v. Ward, 61 Vt. 153, 17 Atl. 483, where it is said that the court had unlimited power to return any number of jurors for the trial of a particular case, and so the crown practically was never deprived of the right to peremptories, since it could stand any number aside.

can be had unless the court abuses its discretion,⁸⁶ nor can the prisoner object to the number if he has not exhausted his peremptories on his acceptance of the jury.⁸⁷

D. REJECTION ON COURT'S OWN MOTION.⁸⁸ — 1. Power of Court Generally. — Excusing a juror on the court's own motion is largely a matter within the court's discretion.⁸⁹ Provisions of the statutes that the court may examine the jurors on the party's motion do not take away the court's right to excuse on its own motion,⁹⁰ nor does a provision that a certain number of jurors shall be selected and those not drawn as grand jurors shall form the petit jury panel.⁹¹ The court may summarily excuse talesmen not summoned according to his orders.⁹²

2. Grounds in General.⁹³ — Generally the court may excuse any juror who is found to be incompetent or disqualified,⁹⁴ or physically when the person says on oath he would have rendered a verdict for the party complaining of his exclusion had he been permitted to serve. Burch v. Hylton, 89 Va. 441, 16 S. E. 342.

10. State v. Lartigue, 29 La. Ann. 642.

[a] Juror in Conference With Defendant's Friends in Court Room. Court excused a juror who had been in the court room on previous day and apparently in conference with relatives and friends of the accused. The court had also been informed that the juror was a close personal friend of accused and his relatives. State v. Kennedy, 133 La. 945, 63 So. 476.

[b] Inhabitant of Town Whose Books Involved.—A juror was properly excused by the court who was an inhabitant of the town whose books defendant was charged with having secreted. If found guilty part of the penalty would go to the town, and the juror might be interested. State v. Williams, 30 Me. 484.

[c] Juror who states he is hostile to all landlords, the case being one by a landlord for treble rent and restitution, is properly excused. Lawlor v. Linforth, 72 Cal. 205, 13 Pac. 496.

[d] Juror who has been by mistake bound as a witness for the defense, may be excused. State v. Malloy, 95 S. C. 441, 78 S. E. 995, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 1053.

[e] Shown by Actions Amounting to Misconduct.—It was proper to discharge a juror who after being seated in the box "by motions of the head and other significant modes" indicated to a brother-in-law of prisoner's, seated beside counsel, what jurors to accept or reject. Lewis v. State, 3 Head (Tenn.) 127.

[f] Indicted for Similar Offense. That juror stood indicted and untried for a similar offense was sufficient to raise a reasonable suspicion that he would be biased and disinclined to find a verdict against accused, and hence is good reason for excusing after he had been sworn. McGuire v. State, 37 Miss. 369.

[g] One who had been advised "not to cut himself off of the jury" be- found to have conscientious scruples against the death penalty, in a capital case,¹¹ or will not convict on circumstantial evidence.¹²

It is neither necessary to challenge nor to examine the jurors on oath, the facts being known. United States v. Cornell, 2 Mason 91, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,868.

12. State v. Pritchard, 16 Nev. 101.

[a] Juror Who Will Not Convict on Circumstantial Evidence.—Court may excuse on its own motion a juror who says, "I have no fixed opinion against capital or penitentiary punishment, or that a conviction should not be had on circumstantial evidence, but I would not hang a man on circumstantial evidence." Griffin v. State, 90 Ala. 596, 8 So. 670.

[a] Persons Employed by Corporations Owned by Defendant.—It having been ascertained that certain persons were employes of another mill and a certain store which were owned by distinct corporations but of which the president of the defendant corporation was president, there is no abuse of discretion in the court's excusing them, though strictly they are not subject to challenge therefor. Tucker v. Buffalo Cotton Mills, 76 S. C. 539, 57 S. E. 626, 121 Am. St. Rep. 957.

[b] Juror whose brother has suit pending against the same defendant is properly excused. This would not necessarily bias the juror but would have a tendency to do so. Shellman v. Louisville Ry. Co., 147 Ky. 526, 144 S. W. 1060.

14. People v. Lee, 1 Cal. App. 169, 81 Pac. 969.

[a] Under a statute reading "if it shall appear to the court that the juror does not stand indifferent to the cause, or is otherwise incompetent, another shall be called in his stead for the trial of that cause," the court may exclude a qualified juror. Walsingham v. State, 61 Fla. 67, 56 So. 195. See also Ellis v. State, 25 Fla. 702, 6 So. 768, where an assessor, though qualified, was excused.

[b] Relationship Not Within Prohibited Degree.—The court might excuse juror because of embarrassment growing out of his relationship with defendant not within the prohibited degree. Boyd v. State, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 161.

[c] Close acquaintanceship not within any disqualifying statute, but which might embarrass the juror, is good ground for excusing. Brennan v. O'Brien, 121 Mich. 491, 80 N. W. 249.

from jury service.¹⁵ At the same time the rule is that the court cannot capriciously set aside jurors as incompetent whom the law declares are competent.¹⁶

5. Disclosure of Reason for Excusing.—The court need not disclose his reasons for excusing jurors prior to their acceptance on a particular jury,¹⁷ or even after acceptance according to some cases.¹⁸

6. Peremptory Challenges as Affecting Right.¹⁹—The court may discharge a juror, in his discretion, even when the complaining party's peremptories are exhausted.²⁰ or when the opposite party's are.²¹ The court in ordering a talesman to stand aside upon the coming in of the regular panel is not giving an additional peremptory to the party who requested that the regular panel be used.²² Nor is the court bound to restore defendant's peremptories on excusing a juror before the jury is completed,²³ but on excuse during the progress of [d] Unable To Read English. Where the statute did not make a want of sufficient knowledge of the language in which the proceedings were had, an absolute disqualification in a certain county, it was a reasonable use of the court's discretion to excuse such jurors in that county to the end that all the jurors on the panel might understand the same language. People v. State, 102 Ala. 135, 15 So. 264, 48 Am. St. Rep. 22.

the trial, the peremptories should be restored,²⁴ though where defendant had exhausted his peremptories on the organization of the jury it has been held that to restore peremptories on beginning the trial anew amounts to increasing the number.²⁵ A party is clearly not prejudiced by the excusal where the court gave him an additional peremptory,²⁶ or restored his peremptories,²⁷ especially where he did not peremptorily challenge the substituted juror.²⁸

7. Time To Excuse.—a. In General.—The statute is not mandatory as to the time when the court may excuse jurors.²⁹

b. Before Acceptance.—Before a juror is accepted, the court may of its own motion excuse a juror at his request and as a favor to him.³⁰ And where jurors do not appear on call the court may expedite its business by proceeding to draw other jurors without compelling attendance of the absent jurors.³¹ For a sufficient cause appearing at the time the juror is called in regular order, he may be excused although he has not taken advantage of an earlier opportunity.³² For good cause the court may excuse a juror although he

24. People v. Stewart, 64 Cal. 60, 28 Pac. 112.

[a] Where Defendant Insists on Reimpanelment.—On excusing juror after he was accepted and sworn but before the jury was completed, the defendant, insisting upon his right to have the jury impaneled anew, is entitled to his full number of peremptory challenges. People v. Zeigler, 135 Cal. 462, 67 Pac. 754, 56 L. R. A. 882, following People v. Stewart, 64 Cal. 60, 28 Pac. 112.

[b] Reason for Rule.—"Admitting that there may be challenges, there is no mode of proportioning the number so as to meet the case of the particular juror or jurors withdrawn; it ceases to become a matter of calculation; and as the right remains, it remains to the whole extent." *Garner v. [a] On Excusing Juror During Trial. Where the right to challenge the jurors retained was expressly accorded to defendant, he is not prejudiced by the court's action in filling the jury by calling an additional juror rather than by discharging those who had been selected and beginning de novo. People v. Brady, 72 Cal. 490, 14 Pac. 202.

28. Heskey v. State, 17 Tex. App. 161.

[a] On Non-appearance of Juror After Acceptance.—Defendant was clearly not prejudiced by the substitution of another juror on the non-appearance of a juror previously accepted, where the court gave him three additional peremptories, none of which he used on the selection of the substitute. State v. LaCroix, 8 S. D. 369, 66 N. W. 944.

[a] Duty To Discharge as Soon as Discovered.—Neb. Rev. St., §8158.

[b] May Receive Excuse Prior to Call.—That the judge received a juror's excuse outside the courthouse and before the juror is called is not error. The juror was accepted and sworn and then reminded the judge of the excuse previously offered. Vaughan v. State, 58 Ark. 353, 24 S. W. 885.

[a] May discharge person over age who did not offer excuse till his name was called, in regular order, though an opportunity had been given him has been called on a special venire to try that particular case,³³ but cannot so discharge, without cause, and over the defendant's objection.³⁴ Where it appears to the court that a juror may not be qualified he may be excused without being presented to the prisoner,³⁵ or after being presented but before the prisoner has completed his examination.³⁶

c. After Acceptance.—After a juror has been accepted some courts hold he may be excused, though he fails to appear after adjournment,³⁷ but others say that his attendance should be compelled and the party not forced to accept a substitute.³⁸ The court may discharge a juror for his persistent refusal to take the oath after he has been accepted.³⁹ Some courts hold that the court cannot, of its own motion, discharge a juror accepted by both parties, where the only ground of challenge is for favor,⁴⁰ but other courts permit it.⁴¹

37. Rice v. Sims, 3 Hill (S. C.) 5; State v. La Croix, 8 S. D. 369, 66 N. W. 944.

[a] Misconduct Amounting to Contempt.—Where juror had been accepted but failed to appear on the next day and was found playing pool in a hotel the court not only fined him for contempt but discharged him from the case and panel. The supreme court held this a proper exercise of the court's discretion, as the juror had shown himself unfit. People v. Barker, 60 Mich. 277, 27 N. W. 539, 1 Am. St. Rep. 501.

[a] Juror had expressed opinion as to guilt of defendant. Van Blaricum v. People, 16 Ill. 364, 63 Am. Dec. 516.

[b] Not Error Not To Excuse. That jurors in their examination express opinion that accused is guilty furnishes no reason for their discharge where they are accepted by the parties. It was not error to fail to discharge the jury. Penman v. Com., 141 Ky. 660, 133 S. W. 540.

[c] Reason for Rule.—"A juror has no right to challenge himself, and we have no power to reject him on account of an objection which the law allows a party to make for his own benefit, but which, if he refuses, no other can offer." Den ex dem. Bickham v. Pissant, 1 N. J. L. 220.

[d] Error To Reject After Withdrawal of Challenge.—Twelve jurors having been accepted, the district attorney over defendant's objection was permitted to ask whether any were biased or prejudiced in favor of or against defendant. Four said they were, and were stood aside on state's challenge, but, defendant objecting, the district attorney withdrew the challenge, the jurors were again placed on the panel and accepted by both parties. It was reversible error for the court to then excuse them on its own motion. Greer v. State, 14 Tex. App. 179.

41. Robinson v. State, 33 Ark. 180.

The mere fact that the parties might be willing to take an incompetent juror does not prevent the court from excusing him,⁴² even after defendant has exhausted his peremptories, and objected to taking a person called thereafter,⁴³ though a distinction has been drawn between jurors who are disqualified at common law and those who are not.⁴⁴ Some courts hold that after acceptance a juror who was entitled to an exemption cannot be excused;⁴⁵ others hold he can be excused at any time before he is sworn.⁴⁶

d. Before Juror Sworn.—After the juror is accepted, but before he is sworn, many courts hold he may be excused without challenge, for good cause shown,⁴⁷ and permit an excusal for good cause at any time

[a] Bias by Business Relationship. The court properly excused a juror after acceptance who stated that upon further reflection he had come to the conclusion he was biased because defendant had been trading with him. Robinson v. State, 33 Ark. 180.

[b] Juror Incompetent Because of Views on Capital Punishment.—State v. Vick, 132 N. C. 995, 43 S. E. 626.

[c] Juror Related to Defendant and Deceased.—Juror who discloses, after he has been passed and accepted by both sides, that he is related to the prisoner and to deceased whom the prisoner is charged with killing, is properly stood aside by the judge under his duty to see that a fair and impartial jury is impaneled. State v. Boon, 80 N. C. 461.

[a] Juror With Fixed Opinion Distinguished From One Called as Witness. At common law one who had a fixed opinion as to the merits of the controversy was considered unfit to be a juror. Hence in such a case the trial judge may excuse a juror though both parties consent to his serving. Underwood v. State, 179 Ala. 9, 60 So. 842, distin- guishing Bell v. State, 115 Ala. 25, 22 So. 526, in which it was held error to so stand aside a juror who was to be a witness in the case, since that was not ground of incompetency at common law, nor did it follow that he was biased as between the parties, simply because he was to testify as to some fact.

[b] If the parties withdraw their challenges and the cause is not one for which the juror is ipso facto disqualified to act, it is reversible error for the court to stand the juror aside on his own motion. Greer v. State, 14 Tex. App. 179.

before the jury is completed,⁴⁸ and charged with the case.⁴⁹ Some courts extend these rules to matters merely personal to the juror.⁵⁰

e. After Juror Sworn.—After swearing a juror some courts permit him to be excused before the jury has been completed, on good cause being shown therefor,⁵¹ or before further proceedings.⁵² Some authorities hold that the court may in its discretion excuse a juror who does not return after adjournment, where he has been sworn but has not heard evidence,⁵³ but others say the proper practice is not to excuse the juror but to permit the parties to show he has done nothing to disqualify himself.⁵⁴

f. After Jury Sworn.—After the jury has been sworn the court has sometimes been held to be without jurisdiction to excuse one juror and substitute another, though the ground of objection to him was not previously known to court or parties,⁵⁵ but other courts permit the juror to be excused for cause before the trial commences,⁵⁶ or before the indictment has been read,⁵⁷ or during the reading of the indict-

[c] Permitted Where Counsel Refused To Challenge, or Elect To Proceed.—Upon refusal of counsel for defendant to either challenge the juror for cause, or go on with the trial, it having been discovered that the juror is disqualified and under the circumstances neither the court nor the counsel are to blame for the discovery not having been made earlier, the court may of its own motion excuse the juror and impanel a new jury. Stewart v. State, 15 Ohio St. 155.

[e] News of death of son communicated to juror is good ground. State v. Davis, 31 W. Va. 390, 7 S. E. 24.

[f] Not for Mere Distress of Mind. The right of the judge to discharge a juror and order the trial to proceed under the constitutional provision that such may be done when the juror is "disabled from sitting," does not apply to mere distress of mind occasional in the juror on hearing of illness in his family and the feeling that duty to the sick demanded his presence elsewhere. Houston, etc. R. Co. v. Waller, 56 Tex. 331.

[g] Discharge Refused Though Juror Said He Could Not Serve in Capital Case.—United States v. Randall, 2 Cranch C. C. 412, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,117.

[h] Not for Misconduct.—That an accepted and sworn juror during the progress of the trial announced to court and counsel that he had personal knowledge of the locality where an accident was alleged to have occurred, and that he did not believe certain witnesses, though possibly misconduct, does not warrant his discharge. Mahoney v. San Francisco, etc. R. Co., 110 Cal. 471, 42 Pac. 968, 43 Pac. 518.

[a] Under a special statute aimed at certain unlawful organizations, as "white caps," the trial court is given express power to make such examination as he deems proper to determine whether a juror belongs to such an organization and is hence disqualified, "when he shall be informed or shall have reason to suspect" such a state of affairs. *Jenkins v. [a] Court's Duty To Question When He Discloses Statement of Opinion. It is the court's duty as well as proper practice to question a juror after he has been sworn, where he makes a statement in open court that he has formed and expressed an opinion. Zimmerman v. State, 56 Md. 536.

[b] Even after the jury have been impaneled and sworn, but before the trial has been entered upon, the court may, of its own motion, examine a juror as to his having expressed an opinion that the defendant should be either acquitted or convicted. Robinson v. State, 5 Ala. App. 45, 59 So. 321.

[c] As to Effect of Association With Excused Jurors.—On excusing part of the jury for having expressed a disqualifying opinion the court properly re-examined the other jurors to see whether they had been in any manner affected by their association with the excused jurors prior to the time they were excused. Ellis v. State, 92 Tenn. 85, 20 S. W. 500.

contradiction to the juror's statement.⁷⁰ The court may consider other evidence than the juror's statements.⁷¹

9. Effect of Error.—a. *In General.*⁷²—Where the decision of the trial court only involves a question of fact as to the sufficiency of the excuse offered, there is nothing to review.⁷³ The presumption always being that the trial court acted from sufficient reasons,⁷⁴ it will be presumed that the power to excuse was not exercised arbitrarily, but only upon the facts having been properly ascertained by the court.⁷⁵ Reversal cannot be based on the court's action in excusing a juror unless it appears that there was an abuse of discretion,⁷⁶ and some showing of prejudice arising out of that abuse.⁷⁷ It follows that

[c] Cannot Amount to Legal Injury. The judge may excuse a juror when there is no real and substantial cause for that cannot legally injure the objecting party so long as an unobjec-tionable jury is finally obtained. Snow v. Weeks, 75 Me. 105.

[d] Qualified and Disqualified Jurors Distinguished.—If the court rejects a person qualified to sit as a juror, how is the prisoner prejudiced? If disqualified juror sits the case is different. But if he is tried by an impartial jury he has sustained no injury. State v. Marshall, 8 Ala. 302.

[e] Unimpeachable Juror Chosen as Substitute.—Where it is not claimed that the juror selected in the place of one excused on the court's motion was not qualified, was not selected as provided by law, or was biased or prejudiced, the defendant cannot complain. Cochran v. United States, 14 Okla. 108, 76 Pac. 672.

[f] Juror Set Aside on Counsel's Misrepresentation.—In Walker v. Kenison, 34 N. H. 257, reversal was sought because the opposing counsel had induced the judge to set aside a juror drawn on the regular panel, and to substitute a talesman, on the false assertion that such juror was an important witness in the case. The supreme court held that the formation of the jury is under the direction of, and within the discretion of, the trial judge; and no change he may think proper to make in such formation is ground for reversal so long as the jury appears to have been fair and impartial.

b. Exhaustion of Panel.—Where the regular panel was exhausted and the juror excused was a member of that panel it has been held that prejudicial error appears,⁸² but other courts say the matter is one within the court's discretion and the exhaustion of the regular panel does not affect the rule.⁸³

c. Waiver of Error.—There is clearly no error where the parties consented to the court's action,⁸⁴ even in criminal cases.⁸⁵ One who

[b] Consent to Excuse After Jury Sworn.—Where counsel consented to the excusing of a juror, because of sickness in his family, after the jury had been sworn but before evidence taken, and another juror served in his place without objection, the court said it could conjecture no prejudicial error. Catron v. State, 52 Neb. 389, 72 N. W. 354.

[c] Sick Juror Excused by Consent of Both Parties.—There was no error in excusing a juror who had been accepted by both parties, but who asked to be excused because he was suffering from a headache and was physically unable to sit on the jury, where he had not been sworn and both parties consented. Collins v. State, 47 Tex. Crim. 303, 83 S. W. 806.

[d] *Objection waived (1) where none made on court's question if there was any objection to excusing a sick juror, after the jury was partially completed. State v. Johnson, 48 La. Ann. 437, 19 So. 476. (2) Even where the cause for which the court discharged the juror was not sufficient, prisoner cannot complain, the court having asked counsel "what step they proposed to take," and they replying that they "had nothing to say." This amounted to leaving the matter to the court's discretion, and it would be trifling with the court to permit defendant to subsequently question the discharge. Norfleet v. [f] Right to demand challenge is waived where one does not object to the court's excusing a juror without challenge. It is obvious that on such objection the other party would challenge for cause. People v. Decker, 157 N. Y. 186, 51 N. E. 1018.

d. Curing Error by Recall of Juror.—Error in excusing may be cured by the recall of the juror,⁸⁹ especially if thereafter the restored juror is peremptorily challenged.⁹⁰ The proper practice on so recalling the juror is to retain on the panel those who were called before the juror was excused.⁹¹

E. CHALLENGES. — 1. Nature, Definitions and Classification.

a. In General.—The right to challenge has always been considered essential to the fairness of trial by jury.⁹²

b. Is a Right To Reject, Not Select.—The fundamental principle is that the right to challenge is a right to reject and not a right to select.⁹³ The rule applies to all challenges whether to the array or from the county,⁶ and raises the question of the regularity, or proper organization, of the panel.⁷

"Challenge to the panel" is the name given by many statutes to an objection to all the jurors returned,⁸ but, under such statutes, there is no distinction between a "challenge to the panel," and a "challenge to the array."⁹

An "objection to the venire" is, also, in effect the same as a challenge to the panel.¹⁰

Challenge to the poll is an objection to a particular juror,¹¹ and is called in some statutes "challenge to individual juror."¹²

A challenge for cause is one based upon some ground of objection created by statute or otherwise.¹³

Peremptory challenges are challenges to particular jurors for which no reason need be assigned.¹⁴

d. Common Law Classification Generally.—At common law challenges to jurors were of two kinds—to the array, or panel; and to the poll.¹⁵ Challenges to the poll were either for cause, or peremptory,¹⁶ or, as it is sometimes stated, they were for “principal cause,” “for favor,” and “peremptory.”¹⁷ There were also certain technical classifications which retain little more than their historical interest, but which are nevertheless not infrequently referred to by modern cases.¹⁸

e. “Principal Challenge” and “Challenge to Favor.”—(I.) In General.—Challenges to juries, based upon an allegation of bias, favor, or partiality, were, at common law, divided in two classes: “principal challenges,” and “challenges to the favor.”¹⁹ The distinction between the grounds for challenge for principal cause and to the favor, as they anciently existed, is hard to mark,²⁰ and in most instances the difference is purely technical and arbitrary.²¹ A principal challenge was grounded on such manifest presumption of partiality, that if the fact alleged was proved to be true, the disqualification followed as a legal conclusion, incapable of being rebutted.²² In a challenge to the favor, the disqualification arises as a conclusion of fact to be determined, the evidence in support of the challenge leading to no presumption which may not be overcome by other evidence.²³

Applied to Challenge to Array. — Technically there may be a division of challenges to the array into principal challenges and challenges to the favor, but both challenges go to the partiality or defect of the officer summoning the jury.²⁴

(II.) How Far Abolished by Modern Legislation. — While the common-law refinements between principal challenges, and challenges to the favor, have not been kept up,²⁵ and the distinction has lost most of its importance where triers have been abolished,²⁶ the distinction is still met with.²⁷ Some courts hold that their statutes have abolished the distinction,²⁸ but generally modern legislation has not changed the real distinction between the two classes of challenges,²⁹ and changing the mode of trial is only abolishing the form and not the substance.³⁰ For the distinct and wholly different nature of the two grounds of challenge still exists, and is not only of importance in de-jurisdictions there is no statutory definition of either "implied" or "actual" bias.³⁸ In others "implied bias" is defined as the existence of a state of facts which, when ascertained, disqualifies the juror in judgment of law,³⁹ while "actual bias" is the existence of a state of mind which leads to an inference that the juror is not impartial.⁴⁰ In other words "implied" bias is the same as "principal cause" at common law;⁴¹ while "actual bias" is substantially what was known at common law as a cause for challenge to the polls for favor.⁴²

2. Order of Interposing.—a. In Absence of Statute.—The common-law rule was that all challenges of the same class must be taken at one time.⁴³ In the absence of some statutory regulation the order in which challenges shall be interposed is a matter within the discretion of the trial court,⁴⁴ but that discretion must not be exercised

[a] Actual Bias Defined.—(1) "Existence of a state of mind on the part of the juror, in reference to the case, or to either party, which satisfies the court, in the exercise of a sound discretion, that such juror cannot try the issue impartially, and without prejudice to the substantial rights of the party challenging." N. Y. Code Crim. Proc., §376, subd. 2. See People v. Carpenter, 102 N. Y. 238, 6 N. E. 584. in an arbitrary manner and so as to deprive a party of his right to challenge by compelling him to challenge at a time when he could not do so.⁴⁵ Ordinarily a challenge for favor is presented after the court has decided that there is no ground for principal challenge.⁴⁶ The peremptory challenge may be either before or after the challenge for cause has been made or overruled.⁴⁷

b. Statutory Rules Generally.—The statutes usually provide for alternating the challenges between the parties, prescribing which party shall challenge first.⁴⁸ The precise order in which the various challenges shall be made is regulated by statute in many states,⁴⁹ often with a provision that "each party must exhaust all his challenges before the other begins,"⁵⁰ or that each party "shall complete his challenges for cause.⁵¹ The statute is mandatory as to the order of interposing so far as it can be made applicable without actually invading the substantial rights of the parties,⁵² but the provisions, read together, only prescribe that the different classes be taken up in the order specified, and each party be required to exhaust challenges as to that class.⁵³

c. *Number of Jurors Presented.*⁵⁴—(I.) In Criminal Cases.—At the common law each juror was presented to the prisoner for acceptance or rejection as he was called.⁵⁵ In criminal cases in some jurisdictions, as each juror is called, he is examined, passed first by one party and then by the other for cause, and then each party either exercises a peremptory or accepts him.⁵⁶ In other jurisdictions the challenges of both kinds are exhausted by one side or the other as to each juror

[b] Proper To Permit Challenges for Cause To Be Exhausted.—It is the proper practice to permit the district attorney to exhaust his challenges for cause to each juror before passing him to the defense. State v. Gordon, 5 Idaho 297, 48 Pac. 1061.

[c] General Cause Waived.—A disqualification not going to the juror's mental capacity is clearly waived where called to the defendant's counsel's attention, and he refuses to interpose a challenge for general cause, and subsequently challenges for actual bias. *People v. [b] Discretionary With Court To Require.—The court might in a criminal case require all challenges to be taken by both parties as to each juror before another was drawn from the box, or he may in his discretion permit them to make peremptory challenges to particular jurors after others were examined. The statute, Lord's Laws, §126, applies only to civil cases. State v. Caseday, 58 Ore. 429, 115 Pac. 287.

[c] Further Examination.—It is discretionary with the court whether he will compel the prosecuting officer to determine finally as to acceptance of the juror on conclusion of voir dire, or permit further examination after defendant's counsel has examined. So long as defendant was allowed a re-examination after the state's re-examination he could not have been prejudiced. State v. Posey, 137 La. 871, 69 So. 494.

as he is called and before he is passed to the other side.⁵⁷ In some jurisdictions the peremptory challenge may be made either before or after examination of the juror, and before or after one's challenge for cause has been made or overruled.⁵⁸ Some statutes provide that a full panel of lawful men must be in the jury box before either party is called upon to exercise any challenge for cause or peremptory.⁵⁹ In other jurisdictions a full panel of twelve being drawn the parties examine all and challenge any for cause; and then, either accept those who have not been excused for cause, or exercise peremptories against any of them,⁶⁰ and the panel is then filled by substituting

[a] In Pennsylvania practice has been sanctioned, but is not always followed. After the first juror is examined by defendant he is turned over to the commonwealth who may accept or reject. If accepted, defendant may challenge peremptorily. As to the second juror the defendant must first challenge for cause or peremptorily after examination. If accepted the commonwealth may challenge peremptorily. As to the third juror the commonwealth again first exercises its right to accept or challenge peremptorily, and so on alternately, until the jury is made up. The word "respectively" as used in Act of July 9, 1901, P. L. 629, is synonymous with the word "alternately," as used in the Act of March 31, 1860, P. L. 427. Com. v. Conroy, 207 Pa. 212, 56 Atl. 427. See also Com. v. Brown, 23 Pa. Super. 470. But compare Com. v. Marion, 232 Pa. 413, 81 Atl. 423, which states the act of 1901 has not fixed any established rule as to the order of challenging.

[a] This was the common-law rule and the statute has only changed the number allowed and not the mode of exercising. It was reversible error to compel the defendant to first exhaust his peremptories before challenging for cause. State v. Fuller, 39 Vt. 74.

[b] The Right May Be Reserved Until After the Challenge for Cause Has Been Decided.—The very overruling of the challenge for cause may be the reason for exercising the peremptory where the party fears the juror may be prejudiced because he was challenged for cause. Hooker v. State, 4 Ohio 348.

[c] At any time before the right to challenge ceases, that is, it may be as soon as the juror is called to the box and before examination, or the order of examination may be interrupted and the challenge interposed before the examination is completed, or for good cause the court may permit challenge afterwards, and before the number of the jury has been completed. Hawkins v. United States, 116 Fed. 569, construing Alaska Crim. Code, §130, prescribing the order of challenges and providing "either party may take peremptory challenges at any time before his right of challenge ceases."

[a] Rule arises out of statutory construction of clauses in the Practice Act now carried into the codes which in effect provide (Penal Code, §1046) that trial juries in criminal actions shall be "formed in the same manner" as in a number equal to those excused, before any more peremptories are required,⁶¹ but upon one of the substituted jurors being excused for cause the panel may be again filled without first examining the other substituted jurors.⁶² By still another practice the peremptory challenges are not required to be made by either party until the jury box is filled with competent jurors,⁶³ the rule applying more particularly to defendants in some states.⁶⁴ As each new juror is introduced he may be challenged for cause or peremptorily under some statutes,⁶⁵ and some statutes require the panel to be kept filled on request before civil actions (Code Civ. Proc., §600), requiring the clerk to draw names "until the jury is completed;" and (Penal Code, §1068), requiring the challenge to an individual juror to be taken before the juror is sworn, but permitting the court to allow "after the juror is sworn but before the jury is completed." See People v. Scoggins, 37 Cal. 676.

[b] Similar rule in Utah construing Comp. Laws, §§4826, 4828, and specifically following the California rule. State v. Riley, 41 Utah 225, 126 Pac. 294; State v. Thorne, 41 Utah 414, 126 Pac. 286, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 90; People v. Callaghan, 4 Utah 49, 6 Pac. 49.

[a] May Be Filled by Jurors Drawn for Another Department.—The rule that the defendant is entitled to a full jury in the box before being compelled to make his peremptory challenges justifies the court in filling the box from the panel of jurors drawn for another department. People v. Loomer, 13 Cal. App. 654, 110 Pac. 466.

62. People v. Lee, 1 Cal. App. 169, 81 Pac. 969.

[a] Eight jurors having been accepted and sworn and four others drawn from the box, one was examined and excused on challenge for cause. It was proper practice to then fill the box by drawing another juror without first examining the remaining three. All that is required is that the panel be completed before the defendant is required to exercise his peremptories. People v. Lee, 1 Cal. App. 169, 81 Pac. 969.

[a] Reason for Rule.—There is a certain advantage to him in having all the jurors before him when he challenges. This was the common-law rule and usage and statute in this state have continued it in force. Lamb v. State, 36 Wis. 424.

[a] The defendant is not only entitled to have a full panel tendered him in the first instance before being required to exercise any of his peremptories but after he has challenged all that he may desire he is entitled to have a full panel tendered, and this course repeated until the jury is finally secured. Gammons v. State, 85 Miss. 103, 37 So. 609; Tunderburk v. State, 75 Miss. 20, 21 So. 658; Gibson v. State, 70 Miss. 554, 12 So. 582; State v. Mitchel (Miss.), 12 So. 710.

[b] This has been the custom "from the earliest history of this state," and the practice promotes the constitutional guaranty of a fair trial before an impartial jury, since the mere searching questions of counsel on the voir dire examination may have the effect of arousing a feeling of resentment on the part of a juror which can only be relieved against by the use of peremptories." Rutherford v. State, 32 Neb. 714, 49 N. W. 701.

any further challenge is made,⁶⁶ but others have been construed not to contemplate that the panel must be filled as each substituted juror is excused for cause.⁶⁷

In some states the "full panel" rule is further extended and neither party is required to challenge peremptorily until there shall be in the jury box qualified men to the number of twelve plus the number of peremptory challenges allowed to both sides.⁶⁸ Under this statute the right to the complete panel usually applies to both defendant⁶⁹ and the prosecution.⁷⁰ Generally reversal will follow the failure to present defendant with a full panel in the statutory manner, the defendant having made timely objection.⁷¹ Compelling the defendant to exercise his peremptories before the panel was filled, he having exhausted his peremptories, is reversible error,⁷² but if it appears that defendant was in no manner prejudiced, reversal will not follow,⁷³ nor can there be any reversal where he has voluntarily challenged without a full panel being present.⁷⁴

[a] The court commends the practice in capital and other cases exciting great public interest, of the trial judge after having conducted a searching inquiry with questions suggested by counsel, to pass on all challenges for cause before the juror takes his seat. When a full panel of qualified jurors is thus found, present to the state for peremptory challenge. When full panel has been accepted by the state, present to defendant for peremptory challenge. So repeat until the challenges are exhausted or both sides announce themselves content. Gammons v. State, 85 Miss. 103, 37 So. 609. Compare Story v. State, 68 Miss. 609, 16 So. 47.

[b] Where the practice is to have sixteen competent jurors from which the defendant strikes four, it is not proper practice to examine the whole venire but as soon as sixteen are obtained the court must stop and permit the prisoner to exercise his peremptory rights. Honesty v. Com., 81 Va. 283; Richards v. Com., 81 Va. 110.

[a] No prejudicial error occurs where but seven of the regular panel appeared and the court having over defendant's objection, compelled him to examine before the full number of twelve had been drawn, four of the seven were excused on defendant's challenge for cause and three on the state's peremptories. The defendant lost no challenges and so was not harmed. State v. Caseday, 58 Ore. 429, 115 Pac. 287.

(II.) In Civil Cases.—The same rules are prescribed in civil, as in criminal, cases in some states,⁷⁵ but in others a distinct procedure is provided,⁷⁶ and that a rule is provided less liberal in criminal than in civil suits is no reason for construing the statutes to mean the same thing.⁷⁷

The practice in some states requires that a full jury be present before the parties are required to exercise their peremptories,⁷⁸ and the proper practice is to fill the panel each time a juror is excused.⁷⁹ In other states there must be a full panel of competent jurors before either party need exercise a peremptory,⁸⁰ and as jurors are called to fill the panel they are subject to challenge either peremptorily or for cause.⁸¹ In still others the panel must consist of twelve plus the total number of peremptories.⁸² In some states the party is not entitled to a full jury when exercising his peremptories.⁸³

In close cases it has been held reversible error to compel a party to challenge when the box was not filled in the statutory manner.⁸⁴

86. Ullman v. State, 124 Wis. 602, 103 N. W. 6.

[a] Though the statutes do not specifically provide for a challenge to the array in the common law sense, trial courts have inherent authority, and it is their duty, to consider objections seasonably and properly made to the entire panel of jurors for departure from the statutory method of selecting the jurors. This objection has commonly been denominated in this state a "challenge to the array," but it may be made not only in the form of that set phrase, but in the form of an objection to the entire panel, or a motion to quash the return thereof. Ullman v. State, 124 Wis. 602, 103 N. W. 6.

87. Jones v. Woodworth, 24 S. D. 583, 124 N. W. 844, construing Civ. Code, §6, providing that the common law is in force "except where it conflicts with the Codes or the Constitution."

times provide that the challenge may be taken by either party,⁸⁸ but the further provision is also sometimes added, that there can be but one such challenge on a side.⁸⁹ Where the objection is to the regularity of the petit jury, the statutory challenge to the panel is the proper method, and not plea in abatement, or motion to quash the indictment.⁹⁰

Failure to properly draw the jurors can only be raised by challenge to the array,⁹¹ or a motion to quash or set aside the whole panel or venire.⁹² Even where the validity of the statute under which the drawing is made is in issue, the question cannot be raised by habeas corpus to determine the legality of the imprisonment.⁹³ Irregularity in mode of summoning jurors can only be questioned by a challenge to the array,⁹⁴ and where the defect appears on the face of the writ

[a] Right Questioned in Absence of Statute.—In the absence of a statute expressly giving the right to challenge the array in a civil case the right has been questioned, on the theory that the statutes were merely directory to the officers charged with the duty of selecting and returning jurors, and the right to challenge individual jurors for cause, is unlimited. *Settle v. [a] Qualifications Determined as Names Drawn.—Assuming that it was an error for the trial court to determine the qualifications of persons drawn on special venire, at the time they were drawn, and to reject from the venire facias such as he then found disqualified, the only way to raise the question is "by a challenge to the array or motion to quash and set aside the entire panel." State v. Moore, 120 N. C. 570, 26 S. E. 697.

[b] By Motion To Quash Venire. The proper way to reach a venire not drawn in accordance with law, is by a motion to quash the venire. Hornsby v. State, 94 Ala. 55, 10 So. 522.

[c] But a mere ex parte motion to quash may not be made. Heitman v. Morgan, 10 Idaho 562, 79 Pac. 225, no case was on trial, or called, or set for trial but the prosecuting attorney moved to quash the panel. The court had no jurisdiction.

of venire facias the proper mode of taking advantage thereof is by motion to quash the writ.⁹⁵

Where the practice requires the service of a list of the jurors, or a copy of the venire, upon the defendant before trial,⁹⁶ the proper practice on service of an incorrect list is to move to quash the venire.⁹⁷ Objections to a special venire are properly raised by challenge to the array.⁹⁸

(II.) Abolished by Statute.—The right to challenge the array has been specifically abolished, in whole or in part, in some jurisdictions.⁹⁹ The right to challenge is abrogated, though the ground alleged be clearly one for which the challenge would lie at common law,¹ nor can a challenge be made to the individual jurors on a ground which amounts to a challenge to the array.² The party's right to a fair and impartial jury is preserved by examination and challenge of individual jurors for cause.³ But a statute providing that challenges are to

[b] Statute Unconstitutional Under Which Drawn.—To object to each juror individually as his name is drawn from the box on the ground that the law under which the jury was drawn was unconstitutional, is in effect a challenge to the panel and not to the poll and such challenge has been abolished by statute. *State v. [c] Irregularities in Drawing, Listing and Summoning.—A motion to quash the panel for alleged irregularities in drawing names and in listing same and in summoning the jurors is in effect a challenge to the array. Freeman v. McElroy (Tex. Civ. App.), 149 S. W. 428.

[d] Service by Person Not an Officer.—It is not a cause for challenge that individual jurors were served by some other person than the sheriff. That amounts to a challenge to the array which is forbidden by the statute. State v. Caseday, 58 Ore. 429, 115 Pac. 287.

3. State v. Caseday, 58 Ore. 429, 115 Pac. 287.

[a] Where no constitutional or substantial right of defendant was affected by the manner in which the jurors were drawn, and the particular jurors were competent and qualified, the

(III.) Discharging Panel on Court's Own Motion.—The court may discharge the entire panel on its own motion, where it discovers that the panel is illegal,⁸ or that irregularities have been committed which may affect the legality of the panel,⁹ or where, under the circumstances, it believes another panel would be more free from bias or prejudice.¹⁰

The matter is one largely within the trial court's discretion.¹¹ But the court must not arbitrarily discharge the entire panel by a mere journal entry and without any investigation.¹²

(IV.) Purging the Panel.—Where the objection is to individual jurors who are clearly incompetent or disqualified the court may purge the panel by striking off the names on his own motion.¹³ This, in effect, cures the error and it is then proper to disallow the challenge to the array.¹⁴

This is the rule both at common law and under the statutes providing a different method for choosing jurors.¹⁶ The mere presence on the panel of names of persons who should not be thereon is no ground for the challenge, where only accident or oversight is involved,¹⁷ and not fraud or misconduct on the part of the officials charged with selecting and summoning,¹⁸ and where the effect is not to reduce the number drawn below that required by the statute.¹⁹ That one or more of the individual jurors are disqualified in the particular case is no ground for challenge to the array,²⁰ nor can the general dis-

[c] Objection to All From One Certain Locality.—Under a statute whereby the venires are addressed to different towns and cities in the county, it is no ground for challenge to the array that the list from which the jurors were drawn in a particular city was prepared and posted by the city clerk and aldermen. Com. v. Walsh, 124 Mass. 32.

b. Grounds.—(I.) In General.—At common law any unfairness in selecting the jury panel may be met by a challenge to the array,²⁴ and by statute in some states it lies for any unfairness,²⁵ or for failure to proceed as prescribed by law.²⁶ But by other statutes the right to challenge is limited to certain specified grounds,²⁷ which are exclusive of all others.²⁸ That the regular panel has been discharged on challenge to the array is not ground for challenge to the special venire.²⁹

It is no ground for challenge to the array that the jury panels for two distinct courts are drawn at the same time,³⁰ nor that the term jurors in the separate trial of one jointly indicted with defendant is no ground for challenge to the array on the ground that they are disqualified as a whole. The proper procedure is to determine the qualification of each individual juror upon his voir dire examination. Whitehead v. State, 97 Miss. 537, 52 So. 259.

[b] Service on Another Jury That Tried Defendant.—That jurors had all served upon another jury which found against defendant on a similar state of facts, is a challenge to the poll and not to the array. Baker v. Harris, 60 N. C. 271.

[c] Mere pecuniary interest as taxpayers in the fine, which if defendant be found guilty, might be imposed is not ground for challenge to the array, though it applies to each and every juror. State v. Lynn, 3 Penne. (Del.) 316, 51 Atl. 878.

[d] That all of the jurors are disqualified to act and that hence no legal jury can be in attendance, is no ground for challenge to the array, even under the rule that there must be at least one member of the regular panel present to enable the court to organize a jury by means of summoning bystanders. Whitehead v. State, 97 Miss. 537, 52 So. 259.

24. State v. Cartright, 20 W. Va. 32.

[a] Even though there was no statutory method provided for drawing juries, since the constitution guarantees the right of trial by jury, and that means a jury as it existed at common law, any unfairness in selecting the jury panel could be met by a challenge to the array. State ex rel. Murphy v. Superior Court, 82 Wash. 284, 144 Pac. 32.

25. Ga. Pen. Code, §998.

26. Mont. Rev. Code, §6740.

[a] The Ohio statute, Gen. Code,

§1436, providing for a challenge to the array when the jury "was not selected, drawn, or summoned, or when the officer who executed the venire did not proceed as prescribed by law," probably applies to criminal as well as civil suits. McHugh v. State, 42 Ohio St. 154.

[a] By these statutes there are only two grounds. There must be either "a material departure from the forms prescribed in respect to the drawing and return," or "an intentional omission of the sheriff to summon one or more of the jurors drawn." Further, as to "material departure" from the statutory forms, see infra, VII, E, 3, b, (VIII) to (XI); and further as to "intentional omission" of sheriff to summon jurors, see infra, VII, E, 3, b, (XI), (D).

30. Crane v. Dygert, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 675.

[a] The fact that the grand and petit jury were drawn at the same time, the names being placed alternately on the respective lists as drawn, is not ground for challenge to the array, nor for motion to quash the petit jury. Dotson v. State, 62 Ala. 141, 34 Am. Rep. 2.

of service for which jurors were drawn has expired.³¹ If the jury was drawn under the law in force at that time, a change in the law subsequent to the drawing,³² or to the offense on trial,³³ does not afford ground for challenge to the array. But the drawing of the jury under a non-existing law is ground for challenge.³⁴

(II.) Previous Knowledge of or Remarks to Jury.—It is no ground for challenge to the panel that the jurors have heard the case discussed on preliminary motions,³⁵ or that statements have been made in their presence by persons on trial for a like offense, about matters involved in the case about to be tried.³⁶ Nor are unauthorized remarks by the judge to the jurors on their assembling at the beginning of the term,³⁷ or improper remarks made by him in open court immediately before trial,³⁸ nor are such remarks by the prosecuting attorney.³⁹ So far as such matters are believed to have influenced the jurors, the question must be raised on challenge to the poll.⁴⁰ Prejudicial newspaper articles, printed during the impaneling of the jury, are no ground for the challenge.⁴¹

31. People v. Richards, 1 Cal. App. 566, 82 Pac. 691.

[a] Reason for Rule.—The purpose of the challenge to the panel is to protect the defendant against any improper selection of jurors and it is not to protect the jurors from too long attendance upon the court. Hence it is a mere irregularity, for which the challenge will not lie that the jurors regularly drawn, summoned and returned were from a panel which had "expired by limitation" upon the listing of a new panel. People v. Collins, 6 Cal. App. 492, 92 Pac. 513.

39. Thompson v. State, 109 Ga. 272, 34 S. E. 579.

[a] Prejudicial Remarks in Presence of Whole Panel Before Trial.—The prosecuting attorney made prejudicial statements regarding the case on the day before the trial, in explaining the case upon defendant's application for a postponement. This was in open court and the general panel was present. The supreme court assuming prejudicial remarks so made would be ground for the challenge held, the particular statement was not shown to have been prejudicial. State v. Shupe, 86 N. J. L. 410, 92 Atl. 53.

40. Thompson v. State, 109 Ga. 272, 34 S. E. 579; Harrell v. State, 11 Ga. App. 407, 75 S. E. 507; Gordon v. State, 7 Ga. App. 691, 67 S. E. 893; State v. Dusenberry, 112 Mo. 277, 20 S. W. 461.

41. State v. Crane, 202 Mo. 54, 100 S. W. 422 (holding that the mere publication of prejudicial articles is not sufficient though it might be a basis for further examination of the jurors already impaneled to see whether they had read the articles and had become biased thereby); State v. Hottman, 196 Mo. 110, 94 S. W. 237, is explained as not requiring the court to re-examine on its own motion.

(III.) Disqualification or Misconduct of Part of Jurors as Affecting Others. That some of the jurors have been excused as being disqualified because of bias or otherwise, does not subject the remainder of the panel to a challenge to the array.⁴² But it has been held that the fact that a party is himself a member of the regular panel may be ground for challenge to the array, on the theory that the whole panel may be affected thereby,⁴³ and that it is proper to discharge all the panel where some were guilty of misconduct.⁴⁴

(IV.) Excusing Some Jurors as Affecting Entire Panel.—Where the court improperly strikes the names of jurors off the list, the proper practice is to challenge the array,⁴⁵ but generally the mere fact that some of the jurors were excused is not ground for the challenge.⁴⁶

[a] That jurors have expressed an opinion which disqualifies them and for which they are properly excused by the court after acceptance does not so disqualify the other jurors because they have associated with them, that they also should be excused. Ellis v. State, 92 Tenn. 85, 20 S. W. 500. See also Taylor v. State, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 708.

[b] Juror Excused Because of Relationship.—Where juror has been excused because of possible prejudice growing out of relationship to defendant, the other jurors should not be discharged merely because of their association with the excused juror. Boyd v. State, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 161.

[c] Service on Jury Within Prescribed Time.—Assuming that service of part of the jurymen at a previous term was ground of individual challenge, it would not affect those on the panel who did not so serve and so is not ground for challenge to the array. Conkey v. Northern Bank, 6 Wis. 447.

[a] Reason for Rule.—The statute provides a regular method and to permit the judge to depart therefrom by discharging some and substituting others, makes him responsible for the personnel of the jury which would be not only exceedingly embarrassing, but a dangerous practice. Cunneen v. State, 96 Ga. 406, 23 S. E. 412.

[b] Where the trial judge has exceeded his discretionary power in excusing the entire regular panel arbitrarily, and for no sufficient reason, challenge to the array lies. Deiter v. State, 12 Ohio Cir. Ct. (N. S.) 97.

[a] Where Court Excuses All Jurors.—Having a right to excuse individual jurors, the court may excuse all, and his so doing is not ground for challenge to the array of a new panel called to take their place. People v. Jackson, 111 N. Y. 362, 19 N. E. 54.

[b] That the court retained part of the regular panel and combined with it talesmen summoned on special venire, is no ground for challenge to the panel. State v. Lundgren, 124 Minn. 162, 144 N. W. 752, Ann. Cas. 1915B, 377.

[c] Though not done according to the code provisions, excusing jurors could not prejudice defendant. It is purely speculative whether the excused jurors would have rendered a different verdict. People v. Schmidt, 168 N. Y. 568, 61 N. E. 907.

[d] Fraud or Prejudicial Error Must Appear.—It is no ground for quashing the venire that the trial judge had on his own motion quashed a previous venire, there being no showing of fraud or prejudicial injury to accused in respect to the jurors selected to try the

(V.) Partiality or Misconduct of Officers Selecting or Summoning.⁴⁷ The common law required that everyone who took part in the selection of jurors should stand indifferent as between the parties.⁴⁸ Hence challenge to the array was allowed on account of the partiality or default of the sheriff or other general officer of the court, in selecting and summoning the jurors.⁴⁹ The common-law rules have not been changed by statutes which have merely substituted some other method of selection,⁵⁰ and the general rule is that in so far as the officers charged with selecting or summoning have any direct interest in the litigation,⁵¹ or their relationship to parties in interest is such as to

Switzer*, 38 Nev. 108, 145 Pac. 925.

[f] Excuse Before Term.—That the court excused members of the panel by order made before the term and entered on the first day of the term, is not ground for challenge to the panel, being neither a material departure from the forms prescribed by law for drawing nor an omission of the summoning officer to summon. State v. Bates, 25 Utah 1, 69 Pac. 70.

[a] "As the entire office of summoning the panel of jurors was at common law committed to the sheriff or other summoning officer, a right of challenge to the array on the ground of partiality or other disqualification of the officer was of the greatest importance to litigants." State v. Ju Nun, 53 Ore. 1, 97 Pac. 96, 98 Pac. 513.

[b] Common Law Rules Exemplified. At common law if the sheriff returned a juror at one party's nomination, or knew he was prejudiced against one party it was called "unindifferency" on the sheriff's part. If he failed to summon a knight in a case in which the law required a knight to be one of the jury, it was a default on the part of the sheriff. If he or his bailiff or under officer returned persons not within the franchise, it was misconduct in the sheriff. And all these were grounds for challenging the whole array. If a bailiff returned some jurors at the nomination of a party it was ground for challenge to the array, provided the bailiff returned the whole array, but not if the array was made by divers bailiffs. But if all the jurors were of affinity to a party it was only ground for challenge to the polls. For a more extended discussion of the reasons for these distinctions, see Com. v. Walsh, 124 Mass. 32.

It has been held, however, that the mere fact that one interested in the case is one of the officers whose duty it is to make up the list of jurors, is no ground to quash the array.⁵⁴ Nor is it ground for the challenge rect Control of Complainant.—That the jury was summoned by an officer connected with the police department and under the direct control of complainant who was chief of police, seems to be considered good ground of challenge. People v. Wilber, 61 Hun 620, 15 N. Y. Supp. 435, 39 N. Y. St. 743.

[c] Sheriff Who Is Party Plaintiff. Jones v. Woodwarth, 24 S. D. 583, 124 N. W. 844.

[d] Sheriff's Interest As Taxpayer. The sheriff being a taxpayer was interested in the outcome of the suit, and therefore in a sense a party to it. This is good ground for challenge to the array. Peck v. Essex, 21 N. J. L. 656, reversing 20 N. J. L. 457.

[b] Sheriff Whose Deputy Was Defendant.—That talesmen were returned by sheriff in case in which his deputy was defendant is good ground for challenge. Walker v. Green, 3 Me. 215.

[c] Commissioner Related to Deceased.—That the commissioner who drew the jury was a blood relation of the deceased, is ground for challenge to the array. State v. McQuaige, 5 S. C. 429.

[d] That the sheriff was the son of the prosecuting attorney would not of itself be sufficient ground to challenge the array. State v. Cameron, 2 Pin. (Wis.) 490, 2 Chand. 172.

[e] That a brother of the sheriff instituted the prosecution is no ground to challenge the array thus summoned. Brown v. State, 14 Ga. App. 21, 80 S. E. 26; Kelly v. State, 14 Ga. App. 20, 80 S. E. 24.

[a] Corruption or bad faith on the part of the commissioners in the drawing and selection of the jury would always be ground for sustaining a challenge to the array. Moore v. Navassa Guano Co., 130 N. C. 229, 41 S. E. 293.

[b] Extreme partisanship of the jury commissioners would more properly be raised by motion to quash the array than by motion for change of venue. It was claimed that the difficulty which resulted in the murder of which defendant was charged, grew out of a political campaign and that the commissioners selected jurors prejudiced against defendant on political grounds. State v. Pruett, 49 La. Ann. 283, 21 So. 842.

[c] That juror was member of county court which selected the regular panel from which the jury was drawn can only be presented by challenge to the array. Boteler v. Roy, 40 Mo. App. 234.

[d] Partial Struck Jury Selected but Sheriff Not Intentionally Unfair. If the sheriff selects a partial or unfair list for a struck jury it is the duty of the court to set it aside on motion in the nature of challenge to the array, or to quash the panel, although there is no showing that he was intentionally unfair. Riley v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 67 Minn. 165, 69 N. W. 718.

54. Clark v. Com., 123 Pa. 555, 16 Atl. 795, officer who made information.

[a] Sheriff Who Assisted Was Owner of Property Stolen.—It is no cause for challenge to the array that the sherthat the clerk who issued the order to summon the jury is a party to the suit.⁵⁵ Also, a mere error or omission not arising out of any improper motive is not ground for the challenge;⁵⁶ neither is a mere irregularity without any purpose on the part of the officers to neglect or refuse to comply with the statute.⁵⁷ So even where the officer charged with the selection has a direct interest, it has been held that some partiality in the selection must appear;⁵⁸ though, on the other hand, some courts say that it is sufficient if the opportunity for fraud, bad faith or corruption is present,⁵⁹ and that it is not necessary to show any misconduct if, in fact, the officer is disqualified to act by reason of his interest or relationship.⁶⁰

iff who assisted in summoning the original venire was one of the owners of the slave alleged to have been stolen and that he assisted in drawing the jury. Prince v. State, 3 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 253.

[b] Change of Venue May Be Remedy.—Where plaintiff was one of the judges whose duty it was to select jurors in co-operation with the commissioners, defendants who thought themselves in danger from a jury drawn from such list should have applied for a change of venue. Wallace v. Jameson, 179 Pa. 98, 36 Atl. 142.

56. Johnson v. State, 59 N. J. L. 271, 35 Atl. 787, where, assuming that the omission of colored persons was ground for challenge to the array, it must be shown that the sheriff designedly omitted them and in some manner different from the way in which white persons not called to serve were omitted.

[a] Where the clerk made an error in making up the tickets but there was no showing that his action was intentional or done from any improper motive, the array will not be quashed. Green v. State, 40 Fla. 191, 23 So. 851.

[b] Failure to summon juror resulting from mistake on part of sheriff and no fraud or collusion appearing is not ground for challenge to the array. State v. Dozier, 33 La. Ann. 1362.

[c] Design, Collusion or Prejudice Must Be Alleged.—Where one jurymen was dead, another exempt, and another not summoned, there being no allegation of any design or collusion for the purpose of affecting the trial, nor any prejudice to the parties, the challenge was not allowed. Smith v. Smith, 52 N. J. L. 207, 19 Atl. 255.

[a] Commissioner Had Case To Be Tried.—Though the proper course for a commissioner, who has a cause pending, to be tried before a jury drawn from the names selected by the board of county commissioners, is to take no part in the selection of the names and to have that fact appear upon the commissioner's record, it is not ground for quashing the panel that the commissioner did act in the absence of some showing that there was an attempt at partiality in the selection. Northeastern Nebraska R. Co. v. Frazier, 25 Neb. 42, 40 N. W. 604.

59. Moore v. Navassa Guano Co., 130 N. C. 229, 41 S. E. 293, need not be proved as to commissioners. See also Boyer v. Teague, 106 N. C. 576, 11 S. E. 665, 19 Am. St. Rep. 547, where the challenge was sustained, though there was no finding of fraud on the part of the sheriff, but the opportunity for fraud was present.

[a] Where the prosecuting attorney selected the names of the jurors the motion to quash should have been granted though there was no evidence of unfairness on his part nor improper motive, nor any showing that the jury was unfair or prejudiced against defendant. State v. Austin, 183 Mo. 478, 82 S. W. 5.

60. State v. McQuaige, 5 S. C. 429.

The statutes in some jurisdictions have specifically abrogated the common-law right to challenge the array because of the officer's interest or relationship,⁶¹ or provide that it is a ground for challenge to a panel, formed from persons not drawn as jurors, that the officer summoning the jury would be disqualified to act as a juror, because of his bias.⁶² The latter statute has been held to be the only ground for challenge to a special venire.⁶³ Under it the test is would the officer summoning be qualified to sit as a juror.⁶⁴ Thus if he be a party to the cause he is clearly disqualified,⁶⁵ but prejudice is not shown merely because he has faithfully performed his duty in apprehending accused.⁶⁶

Under some statutes it must appear that the officer summoning jurors not regularly drawn has acted corruptly, or wilfully summoned jurors known to him to be prejudiced or biased for or against a party,⁶⁷ and the challenge is not allowed except for the grounds stated in the statute.⁶⁸ These statutes do not forbid questioning

[a] No Improper Motive Need Appear.—It is not necessary to show an improper motive nor that the sheriff actually used his power improperly. [b] Lies for Either Actual or Implied Bias.—"The statute is so plain that no room is left for interpretation." If the officer would not himself be qualified as a juror because of actual or implied bias, as defined by the statute, he is also disqualified to summon the jury in whole or in part, and challenge to the panel should be allowed. *Koontz v. the power of the court to order a special venire to be substituted for the regular panel,⁶⁹ but the mere ordering of the sheriff to summon jurors is not of itself ground for quashing the venire.⁷⁰

(VI.) Summoning Officer's Opinion.—The mere opinion of the summoning officer as to the guilt or innocence of defendant is no ground to quash the array where there is no showing that he attempted to influence or prejudice the jurors he summoned,⁷¹ but under the statute he may be incompetent as having an opinion which would disqualify him to act as a juror,⁷² the distinction being drawn as between an opinion of guilt and an opinion as to an undisputed fact.⁷³

the motion to quash the panel is properly overruled. Freeman v. McElroy (Tex. Civ. App.), 149 S. W. 428.

[b] Only one or both of these causes can be urged to support a challenge to the array. Hayward Lumb. Co. v. Cox (Tex. Civ. App.), 104 S. W. 403, following Roundtree v. Gilroy, 57 Tex. 176.

[c] Criminal Cases to Contrary Criticised.—"There is really only one ground for challenge and that is the corruption of the officer summoning the jury and we believe that . . . no other cause of challenge to the array exists. The Court of Criminal Appeals has held differently in the cases of White v. State, 45 Tex. Cr. R., 597 [78 S. W. 1066], and Hurt v. State, 51 Tex. Cr. R., 338 [101 S. W. 806], under arts. 661, 696, Code Cr. Proc. [1895], which are similar in their provisions to those provided for in civil cases. We feel constrained, however, to follow the plain language of the statute, and the construction placed on such statute by the supreme court." Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Worth, 53 Tex. Civ. App. 351, 116 S. W. 365, following Roundtree v. Gilroy, 57 Tex. 176.

[d] The fact that defendant was charged with shooting the sheriff and he would necessarily be an important witness for the state, does not furnish any reason for sustaining a challenge to the array, there being nothing to show that he did anything to influence the jurymen nor in fact did anything at all about their summoning except that his deputies made the service. Forrester v. State, 73 Tex. Crim. 61, 163 S. W. 87.

[e] Jurors Members of Society To Enforce Law.—It is not ground for challenge to the array that the jurors were members of a society to enforce the law and were all "local option-ists," though the prosecution was for violating the local option law. There was no evidence of corrupt practice by the officer summoning, and the jurors who had voted the local option ticket testified there was no agreement of theirs or the society regarding jury service. Deadweyler v. State, 57 Tex. Crim. 63, 121 S. W. 863.

[a] Expression of Opinion Not Coupled With Any Wrongful Act. The fact that the sheriff who had summoned the jurors had expressed an opinion as to the guilt of the prisoner is not sufficient ground to challenge the array of jurors, unless he has done some act or omitted some duty by reason of which a juror called is disqualified. People v. Ferris, 1 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 193.

72. People v. Coyodo, 40 Cal. 586.

See preceding section.

[a] Question Held Proper.—On challenge to the panel for the bias of the officer it is proper to ask the officer: "If you were impaneled and sworn as a juror to try this cause, could you, and would you, give the defendant a fair and impartial trial?" It is not necessary as a foundation for that question to show that the officer had formed an opinion testified to by him, upon public rumor or newspaper reports. People v. Ryan, 108 Cal. 581, 41 Pac. 451.

(VII.) Summoning Officer Witness.—That the summoning officer was liable to be called as a witness, is not, of itself, ground for challenge to the array.⁷⁴ But under the statute it may be a ground where he would be disqualified from becoming a juror.⁷⁵

(VIII.) Formal Defects and Substantial Departure From Statutes.—The general rule is that a challenge to the array does not lie for a mere formal or technical defect,⁷⁶ nor for a mere mistake,⁷⁷ nor for failure to follow directory provisions of the statute, not resulting in prejudice to the challenging party.⁷⁸ The challenge does lie for violation of those provisions of the statutes which are mandatory,⁷⁹ and where iff had no opinion as to defendant's defense of justification.

[a] Rule in Texas as to Civil Juries. Provisions as to summoning and formation of civil juries are merely directory and a substantial compliance is all that is required. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Jessee, 2 Wills. Civ. Cas., §403.

[a] Rule Not Affected by Statute Forbidding Setting Aside Verdict for Irregularity.—Gen. St., §664, providing that "no verdict shall be set aside on account of any irregularity in summoning the jury," applies only in cases where no challenge or exception to the array was made. Where mandatory

there has been a substantial departure from the statutory method provided for the purpose of securing impartial jurors, there must be a reversal though no actual prejudice be shown, if the objection was properly made.⁸⁰ By statute in many states the challenge to the panel lies for a material departure from the forms prescribed by law in respect to the drawing and return of the jury.⁸¹ Under these statutes the challenge does not lie where there has been a "substantial compliance" with the statutory regulations.⁸² So mere irregularities and slight deviations from the statute are not ground for the challenge where no prejudice results.⁸³ The statutory rule in some states also calls for a "substantial irregularity" in selecting, summoning or drawing the panel as ground for the challenge.⁸⁴ An additional provisions of the statute are disobeyed, and the matter is properly brought to the court's attention, reversal will follow a wrong ruling thereon. State v. McGee, 80 Conn. 614, 69 Atl. 1059.

[a] Rule Applied Where Statute Practically Nullified.—In Healey v. People, 177 Ill. 306, 52 N. E. 426, after an exhaustive review of the cases the court concludes that where the statute merely directs certain acts or procedure in order to accomplish the result, a trivial or slight departure which does not appear to have prejudiced defendant will not be ground for reversal. But in the case at bar every requirement of the statute was omitted and the jurors selected in a manner which it was the very purpose of the statute to supersede. This was a violation of both the letter and spirit of the statute and to hold it not ground for reversal would be to nullify the statute."

provision of some statutes is that the departure shall be to the prejudice of the defendant,⁸⁵ or that it shall appear the complaining party was injured by the irregularity.⁸⁶ Under such statutes there must be not only an irregularity or departure, but the injury therefrom must affirmatively appear.⁸⁷ By still other statutes there must have been some fraud practiced,⁸⁸ or some great wrong committed that would work irreparable injury.⁸⁹ Under these statutes actual disobedience of the law may not be ground for the challenge,⁹⁰ or, at least, the disobedience must have been so flagrant as to amount to a fraud in law,⁹¹ and it must appear not only that there was an opportunity to commit a fraud, but that a fraud was actually committed.⁹² The statutes sometimes provide that an irregularity in making lists, drawing or summoning must be intentional or prejudicial or a new panel will not be ordered.⁹³ Under such a statute an officer acting under an unauthorized order acts intentionally and challenge will lie.⁹⁴

It is difficult to lay down any general rule as to what is, and what is not, a sufficient compliance with the statutory requirements,⁹⁵ but the true rule has been said to be that violation of those provisions

It follows that the clerk in acting under such an unauthorized order acts "intentionally" and hence his is not an irregularity, error or failure which comes within the curative provisions of §4018. *Patrick v. which are designed to secure impartial jurors is ground for the challenge, but violation of those designed merely to distribute jury duty fairly among the citizens is not.⁹⁶ The courts sometimes say that the provisions of the statutes as to the selection of jurors are mandatory and that challenge to the array will lie unless they are strictly followed,⁹⁷ but this rule goes no further than to presume prejudicial error when the statute is violated.⁹⁸ Other courts have stated in general terms that the statutory methods of drawing, summoning and impaneling are merely directory,⁹⁹ but this does not warrant the absolute disregard of essential provisions of the statutes,¹ even where the court says they are merely directory.² So the rule has been stated

1. State v. Austin, 183 Mo. 478, 82 S. W. 5.

[a] Distinction Between Irregularity and Unauthorized Act.—So far as the action of the commissioners pertains to the time and place, the statute is considered directory, and provided they are properly done at another time and place they will be treated as irregularities. But where the commissioners assume to do things that they have no right or authority to do, whether at the time appointed by law or at any other time, such acts are not a mere irregularity but are officious unauthorized acts on their parts which will vitiate the panel if properly objected to. Moore v. Navassa Guano Co., 130 N. C. 229, 41 S. E. 293, reviewing many North Carolina cases and showing that the expression "the statute is only directory" so far as it seems to go beyond this rule, is dictum.

2. Zininam v. State, 186 Ala. 9, 65 So. 56.

[a] Even Where Statute Says Its Provisions Are Directory.—Though the Jury Act specifically states the intention to make the provisions thereof in relation to selecting, drawing, summoning and impaneling jurors, "directory merely and not mandatory," some of the provisions thereof are clearly mandatory. If they are not they are "insensible and of no effect." Zininam v. State, 186 Ala. 9, 65 So. 56. See also Odom v. State, 1 Ala. App. 68, 55 So. 546.

that irregularities are to be deemed immaterial unless it appears probable that the objecting party may have been prejudiced thereby.³ On the other hand, an intentional disregard of the provisions of the statute, cannot be deemed a substantial compliance therewith.⁴

(IX.) Acts Not Performed at Statutory Time.—The time fixed for the appointment of jury commissioners is directory, and failure to so appoint at that time is not ground for challenge to the panel.⁵ Provisions as to the time for drawing the jurors are usually directory only, and so not ground for challenge.⁶ But where the defendant is entitled to be present, a drawing previous to the time set is ground for the challenge.⁷ Failure to prepare the lists on the date required

[b] Irregularity and Unfairness Distinguished.—Under the statute mere irregularity must be distinguished from invasions of those provisions which are intended to prevent unfairness of selection. The former are not ground for quashing—the latter are. Cook v. State, 90 Miss. 137, 43 So. 618; Posey v. State, 86 Miss. 141, 38 So. 324.

[a] Failure To Give Notice to Officers To Attend Drawing.—The prescribed three days' notice to the sheriff and justices of the peace is merely directory and for their benefit. If in fact they attend, though on shorter notice, the purpose of the statute is fulfilled in that the disinterested persons are present as witnesses to guard against the county clerk's favoring anyone as juror. So it is no ground for challenge that the shorter notice was given. State v. Yordi, 30 Kan. 221, 2 Pac. 161.

[b] Drawing for Other Than Ensuing Month.—State v. Leroy, 61 Wash. 405, 112 Pac. 635.

[c] That summons to the commissioners was not issued at the time prescribed by law is a mere irregularity for which the venire will not be quashed. "Time is not of the essence" of the statute. State v. Clark, 51 W. Va. 457, 41 S. E. 204.

E. 889, where it seems drawing on an unauthorized day would be good ground for challenge, but the court held the drawing was on an authorized day.

by statute is not ground for challenge to the array,⁸ nor is failure to file the list by the clerk within the time prescribed.⁹ Provisions as to issuing the venire a specified time before trial are not ground for quashing unless the party was prejudiced thereby,¹⁰ nor is it where the copy was not served "forthwith" as the statute required.¹¹ The provision as to the time when a special venire must be returned is merely directory, and so no ground for challenge.¹²

(X.) Irregularities in Drawing or Selecting the Veniremen.—(A.) WRIT OR ORDER FOR DRAWING.—Errors in the order for drawing of the jurors which are merely clerical or non-prejudicial do not furnish grounds for challenge to the array.¹³

(B.) BOARD OR COURT IRREGULARLY CONSTITUTED.¹⁴—That the court before whom the general panel was drawn was not legally constituted is ground for challenge to the array,¹⁵ as it is that the judge who

[a] May Be Ground To Postpone Trial.—Failure to serve the venire on the defendant at the proper time is not good reason for quashing the suit. [b] Wrong Term.—A mere clerical mispision by which the jurors are ordered for the wrong term, if in fact they appear at the right time, is not ground for challenge. Peters v. State, 100 Ala. 10, 14 So. 896.

[c] Special Venire.—The mere fact that jurors were on a special venire ordered to be summoned for the term instead of for the particular case is no ground for the challenge where the statute permitted them to be retained for the term. Barr v. People, 103 Ill. 110.

19. King v. Kahele, 7 Hawaii 388.

[a] Deputy Sheriff.—Absence of sheriff when names are drawn is not ground for quashing venire as his presence is merely to perform a ministerial duty and he may be represented by a deputy. State v. Aspara, 113 La. 940, 37 So. 883. See also State v. Bohan, 19 Kan. 28.

[b] Deputy Clerk.—State v. Gay, 25 La. Ann. 472.

20. State v. Aspara, 113 La. 940, 37 So. 883.

[a] Clerk of Auditor Furnished

Names From Auditor's Books.—That the clerk of the auditor was present when jury commissioners made up list and furnished names of persons liable to jury duty from the auditor's books is no ground for challenge to array where he did not in any manner participate in the selection of names. State v. Merriman, 34 S. C. 16, 12 S. E. 619.

21. State v. Lee, 35 S. C. 192, 14 S. E. 395.

[a] Failure to take his oath is not ground for quashing the venire, since the commissioner by virtue of his appointment is a de facto officer and his act is the performance of a public duty and so valid so far as litigants are concerned. State v. Medley, 66 W. Va. 216, 66 S. E. 358.

[b] Bond Not Properly Approved. It not being claimed that the commissioners had not given a sufficient bond but only that the clerk had not properly manifested his approval thereof, the commissioners were qualified and the panel will not be quashed. State v. Bokien, 14 Wash. 403, 44 Pac. 889.

[c] That a jury commissioner was not a freeholder, assuming that he should be one, is but an irregularity for which the refusal to sustain a challenge to the array would be non-prejudicial. Ickes v. State, 16 Ohio Cir. Ct. 31, 8 Ohio Cir. Dec. 442, judgment affirmed, 63 Ohio St. 549, 59 N. E. 233.

22. State v. Vance, 31 La. Ann. 398, clerk not having taken oath as commissioner he was not qualified to act and the venire should have been quashed as drawn without any warrant of law.

23. State v. Skinner, 34 Kan. 256, pliance with the statute a mere non-prejudicial irregularity will not support a challenge,²⁴ and the same is true where the irregularity affects only the individual juror.²⁵ Mere failure to revise the list from which the statute directs names to be drawn is not ground for challenge unless prejudice results,²⁶ nor are irregularities in marking, locking, or custody of the wheel or box unless the same has been tampered with.²⁷

Irregularity as to List Drawn.—Mere technical defects in the form of the jury list is not ground for challenge.²⁸ That names were copied

8 Pac. 420; State v. Jenkins, 32 Kan. 477, 4 Pac. 809; Brown v. Maltby, 20 N. Bruns. (Can.) 92.

24. State v. Rhoderer, 82 Wash. 618, 144 Pac. 914, obtaining names from other sources than tax rolls and poll books.

[a] Names Not All on Assessment Roll.—A substantial compliance with the statute requiring the jurors to be selected from the assessment roll is necessary, but this does not mean that every name on the roll which might be put on the list, must be there, nor that the mere presence on the list of a name not on the roll would vitiate the list. State v. Bolln, 10 Wyo. 439, 70 Pac. 1. See also People v. Searcey, 121 Cal. 1, 53 Pac. 359, 41 L. R. A. 157.

[b] That names were drawn from the wrong assessment roll is not ground for challenge where a majority were names of persons admittedly eligible. Niles v. Circuit Judge, 102 Mich. 328, 60 N. W. 771.

25. State v. Merriman, 34 S. C. 16, 12 S. E. 619, where the summoning of additional jurors from the tales box was unauthorized there is no ground for challenge to the array, but the challenge should be to such individual jurors as are drawn from the tales box.

26. State v. Smarr, 121 N. C. 669, 23 S. E. 549; State v. Hensley, 94 N. C. 1021. See also State v. Johnson, 116 La. 856, 41 So. 117 (as to method adopted for striking names off of the list); State v. Stanton, 118 N. C. 1182, 24 S. E. 536.

[a] That the list has not been revised each year as the statute directs is not good ground for challenge to the array where there were several hundred names still on the list, and the only effect of the revision would have been to increase that number. Wood v. McAlpine, 55 Kan. 657, 118 Pac.

1060, distinguishing State v. Jenkins, 32 Kan. 477, 4 Pac. 809, where the list itself was other than required by statute.

[b] Failure To Supplement List. Venire will not be quashed "because the jury commissioners did not repair to the clerk's office and there supplement the jury list and draw the jurors as required by law." It was not shown that this failure resulted in the selection of any incompetent juror. State v. Bradley, 120 La. 248, 45 So. 120.

27. Klemmer v. Mount Penn Gravity R. Co., 163 Pa. 521, 30 Atl. 274, custody of wheel. See also Rolland v. Com., 82 Pa. 306, 22 Am. Rep. 758.

[a] Box Not Marked Nor Proper Keys Thereto.—Mere fact that the box was not marked strictly according to the statute, and that there was but one key to the two compartments therein, is an immaterial matter where there was no showing of tampering with the box, and the special venire was drawn from the proper compartment. State v. Potts, 100 N. C. 457, 6 S. E. 657.

[b] Box Not Locked Nor Kept in Safe Place.—Culpable negligence on the part of the commissioners in not keeping the jury boxes properly locked, and in a safe place, is no ground for challenge to the array where there is no suggestion that the boxes were in fact tampered with. State v. Hensley, 94 N. C. 1021.

[c] That the box itself was not in all respects like that required by statute is immaterial and not ground for quashing where it substantially fulfills the requirements as to secrecy and measures for keeping it from being tampered with. Cook v. State, 90 Miss. 137, 43 So. 618. See also Campbell v. State (Miss.), 17 So. 441.

28. Giebel v. State, 28 Tex. App. 151, 12 S. W. 591.

[a] Wrong Term Stated in Heading.

on the list by some one not authorized is no ground for the challenge.²⁹ Failure of clerk to certify the list is a mere irregularity and not ground of challenge,³⁰ and the same is true as to the mere failure to record the list.³¹ If there be a substantial compliance with the statutory requirement as to certification, the challenge will not lie.³² The mere failure to relist the names returned to the wheel, is not ground for challenge,³³ nor is failure of the summoning officer to keep a required list of jurors in his office,³⁴ nor of the county commissioners to enter the list in their minutes where it was properly certified and delivered to the clerk.³⁵

(D.) IRREGULARITY IN DRAWING BY LOT.—It is ground for the challenge that the officers, in drawing, have not taken names as drawn by lot, as the statute requires,³⁶ but the mere drawing in blocks of

By inadvertence the list of jurors was headed "April Term," instead of "May Term." There was no term in April. The statute does not require headings on the list and the error is at most a mere irregularity, and hence motion to quash venire was properly overruled. Giebel v. State, 28 Tex. App. 151, 12 S. W. 591.

[b] That the commissioners each made a list proposing names, which several partial lists were then approved and in that form handed to the clerk, instead of being all transferred to one list, is not a material departure from the statutory method. Ullman v. State, 124 Wis. 602, 103 N. W. 6.

29. State v. Lee, 35 S. C. 192, 14 S. E. 395, commissioners not being interfered with, it is a mere irregularity.

30. Cal.—People v. Young, 108 Cal. 8, 41 Pac. 281, there was no doubt as to identity of the list. N. Y.—Friery v. People, 2 Abb. Dec. 215, affirming 54 Barb. 319. Tex.—Coker v. State, 7 Tex. App. 83.

[b] Failure To State Date of Order. People v. Iams, 57 Cal. 115.

[c] Failure To State Lists Separately.—Assuming that the statute directs the keeping of separate lists of the jurors from the respective townships, the jurors having been properly selected a failure to so list them in the certification of the county clerk is not a material departure from the statute warranting a challenge to the panel. People v. Sowell, 145 Cal. 292, 78 Pac. 717.

33. State v. Aspara, 113 La. 940, 37 So. 883, it will be presumed the commissioners kept a correct record and no fraud appears.

35. People v. Sowell, 145 Cal. 292, 78 Pac. 717.

36. Moore v. Navassa Guano Co., 130 N. C. 229, 41 S. E. 293, commissioners, though with no corrupt motive, rejected names drawn and selected others.

[a] Though Statute Says Statute Is Directory.—Cook v. State, 90 Miss. 137, 43 So. 618.

[b] Officious Intermeddling by Sheriff.—A challenge to the array is properly sustained where the sheriff, who was a party to a proceeding to test his title to office and which was to be heard at the ensuing term, officiously intermeddled with the drawing of the names out of the box, by taking the scrolls from the hand of the boy who drew them, and reading off the names, without giving any other person a chance to see them. And the mere fact that the court was unable to find that there had been any actual fraud on the sheriff's part is not controlling. It is sufficient that there may have been fraud. Boyer v. Teague, 106 N. C. 576, 11 S. E. 665, 19 Am. St. Rep. 547.

several instead of one by one is not ground for the challenge,³⁷ nor is a mere technical error in preparing the ballots, box, or wheel used in choosing names.³⁸ But if the ballots, or box, are so manipulated as to interfere with the choice by chance, it is ground for the challenge.³⁹ According to the weight of authority challenge will not lie for mere failure of the designated officer to personally⁴⁰ draw the names

[a] Name in Box on Two Slips. Where by some clerical error the same name was put in the box on two slips, and both were drawn out, this is no ground for challenge to the array. Green v. State, 40 Fla. 191, 23 So. 851.

[b] Box Contained Less Than Statutory Number.—The fact that by inadvertence the box from which the jury list was drawn contained only 148 instead of 150 names is not ground to challenge the array. State v. Merri-man, 34 S. C. 16, 12 S. E. 619.

[c] That some names were improperly picked out of the box is no ground for quashing, on the theory that those jurors thereupon became disqualified and there was not left in the box the names of jurors whom defendant was entitled to have serve. This the court says is "good metaphysics but too refined to be applied to the practical administration of law." Cook v. State, 90 Miss. 137, 43 So. 618.

[d] Failure To Return Names to Box.—Mere failure to return to the box before drawing a special venire, the names of jurors on a venire which had been quashed is no ground for quashing the venire. Perry v. State, 177 Ala. 1, 59 So. 150.

[e] That two names were left in the box evidently by mistake. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Davis, 34 Kan. 199, 8 Pac. 146, distinguishing State v. Jenkins, 32 Kan. 477, 4 Pac. 809, where the essential provisions of the statute were palpably disregarded.

[f] Box Refilled.—That commissioners opened box, emptied it, and put in names of new jurors to full number required by law, constitutes no fraud or injury. Former commissioners had failed to properly revise the list. State

v. Riley, 41 La. Ann. 693, 6 So. 730; State v. Nockum, 41 La. Ann. 689, 6 So. 729.

[g] Jury box refilled without a formal order of the court so to do, is not ground for challenge. West v. State, 118 Ala. 100, 24 So. 48.

[h] Names Drawn from Box Rather Than Envelope.—Statutory requirement that names of the grand jury be drawn from the envelope does not apply to the petit jury. Where the custom has been to place all slips in the box so as to enable them to be well shaken, there is no possible prejudice which can result to defendant. State v. Montgomery, 121 La. 1005, 46 So. 997, following State v. Mitchell, 119 La. 374, 44 So. 132.

39. McGann v. Hamilton, 58 Conn. 69, 19 Atl. 376, good ground for challenge to array if slips are not folded.

[a] Where the clerk improperly withholds names from the box. Mel-drum v. State, 23 Wyo. 12, 146 Pac. 596.

[b] If names are removed from the box as part of a design to compel the drawing of certain names which had been selected purposely to comprise the jury, this is ground for quashing. Cook v. State, 90 Miss. 137, 43 So. 618.

Right of court to purge lists or panel, see supra, VII, E, 3, a, (IV).

[c] Refilling Before Exhaustion. Under a statute requiring that the names in the jury box be exhausted before it is refilled, it is ground for quashal of the venire to refill it before exhaustion, especially so where the requirements of the statute are mandatory. Steele v. State, 111 Ala. 32, 20 So. 648.

40. State v. McGee, 80 Conn. 614, 69 Atl. 1059.

[a] May Be by Another Under Direct Supervision.—Though the statute is mandatory that the jurors shall be drawn "by the presiding judge," this does not mean that he must himself perform the manual act of drawing the names out of the box. He may direct another to do so in his presence. Scott from the box, but this rule does not permit the delegation of the authority.⁴¹

(E.) DISCRETION AS TO SELECTING OR REJECTING NAMES. — At common law jurymen are named by the discretion of some person, and are not taken by some mode of chance or hazard.⁴² So an officer who is summoning talesmen, necessarily exercises some choice and the challenge will not lie merely because he has not taken them in order as he chanced upon them,⁴³ and he has a wide discretion in the matter of choosing only those whom he honestly believes are competent, according to some authorities,⁴⁴ but other authorities declare it to be misconduct for which the challenge will lie when the officer summons on the strength of his investigation.⁴⁵ The court may in ordering a special venire determine in advance that certain persons are not

41. State v. McGee, 80 Conn. 614, 69 Atl. 1059; State v. Payne, 6 Wash. 563, 34 Pac. 317.

[a] Distinction Between Deputizing and Delegating.—A reversal was had where an assistant clerk, deputy sheriff and a judge of the common pleas met, and, at the suggestion of the assistant clerk, the deputy sheriff drew the names out of the boxes. The statute provided that the clerk should draw the names in the presence of the other two. This statutory duty he could not delegate. In his absence the assistant clerk might have drawn. But the deputy sheriff's duties were different. State v. McGee, 80 Conn. 614, 69 Atl. 1059. See also People v. Labadie, 66 Mich. 702, 33 N. W. 806, following Gott v. Brigham, 45 Mich. 424, 8 N. 43. King v. Macfarlane, 7 Hawaii 352.

44. People v. Hampton, 4 Utah 258, 9 Pac. 508.

[a] Exclusion of Members of Particular Church.—Though the officer summoning a special venire must not exclude persons merely because they are of the same religious faith as defendant, it is no ground to quash the panel merely because no persons of that faith have been summoned. The officer has a wide discretion and in the exercise thereof may exclude members of a particular church whom he believes will not be impartial. People v. Hampton, 4 Utah 258, 9 Pac. 508.

[b] The fact that the sheriff made inquiries as to the bias or prejudice of special veniremen does not alone constitute ground for challenge. State v. McCarty, 17 Minn. 76.

[c] Where sheriff was clearly actuated by no bad motive in picking out names for a special venire, his only principle of selection being to avoid calling persons disqualified under the statute the accused was in no way prejudiced. West v. State, 80 Miss. 710, 32 So. 298.

[d] Sheriff Notified Persons To Attend Prior to Order.—The mere fact that the sheriff prior to an order of court, notified certain persons to attend court and then upon the court's ordering additional talesmen to be summoned, the sheriff summoned the men previously notified, does not constitute ground for challenge unless it appears that the sheriff acted from improper motives as partiality, or personal interest in the prosecution. Haddix v. State, 76 Neb. 369, 107 N. W. 781.

45. Com. v. Nye, 240 Pa. 359, 87 Atl. 585. Compare Com. v. Cleary, 148 Pa. 26, 23 Atl. 1110, where the court would have granted a new trial for such conduct but no prejudice had resulted to defendant.

[a] Inquiry as to attitude on cap-

qualified and omit them without laying the venire open to motion to quash,⁴⁶ but a venire is properly quashed which contains an illegal restriction as to the persons to be summoned.⁴⁷

It is not ground for the challenge that the selecting officers have chosen as jurors persons who did not have the required qualifications,⁴⁸ and their omission to exclude persons known to be entitled to exemption is but a technical irregularity for which the challenge will not lie,⁴⁹ nor can the challenge be based on a mere difference of opinion as to the qualification of the parties selected,⁵⁰ but the wilful omission of persons known by them to be competent and qualified is ground for the challenge,⁵¹ though the exclusion of certain classes of citizens, from motives of public policy, is no ground for the challenge if a sufficient number of unexceptional jurors is present.⁵² But the wilful and discriminatory exclusion of colored men from a panel drawn to try one of that race is ground for challenge to the array,⁵³ ital punishment and as to their opinions formed or expressed is ground for discharging the entire panel and not merely individual jurors. Com. v. Nye, 240 Pa. 359, 87 Atl. 585.

[b] Inquiries as to acquaintance with the attorney for the accused and rejection on that ground, amounts to contempt as well as ground for challenge. Harjo v. United States, 1 Okla. Crim. 590, 98 Pac. 1021, 20 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1013.

[a] Not Error To Exclude Those Who would Be Excused by Court.—It is no ground for challenge to the array that the jury commissioners have excluded certain classes of citizens, as doctors, lawyers, firemen, etc.; such exclusion not being the result of any class or race prejudice but because of their occupations they either were entitled to exemption or would have been excused by the court. Rawlins v. Georgia, 201 U. S. 638, 26 Sup. Ct. 560, 50 L. ed. 899.

but their mere absence from the list is not ground for the challenge.⁵⁴ Similarly it is no ground for challenge that a venire composed entirely of colored persons has been summoned where there is no showing of inclusion or exclusion of any person because of his color.⁵⁵

(F.) REPLACING SAME PERSONS ON PANEL AFTER QUASHING. — After quashing a venire because of disqualification of the judge who selected the veniremen the same persons may be selected on the new list,⁵⁶ nor will the challenge lie merely because the same persons have been again summoned after their discharge for the disqualification of the summoning officer.⁵⁷ The mere fact that the sheriff summons some of the same persons who were on a venire which has been discharged is not ground for the challenge,⁵⁸ even where the discharge was for the bias of the summoning officer,⁵⁹ though the contrary has been held where the second officer acted under direction of the first.⁶⁰

[b] Habeas Corpus Is Not the Proper Remedy.—Under the statute it is not a matter of right for any man to serve on the jury, but is a duty imposed upon him. All that can be required is that the law does not discriminate. The proper way to raise the question, if there has been any discrimination by the jury commissioners, is by challenging the panel, not by habeas corpus on the theory that the conviction is illegal. Haggard v. Com., 79 Ky. 366, 2 Ky. L. Rep. 356.

[a] Practice of Ordering Colored Men To Be Summoned Condemned.

While refusing to reverse because the judge had ordered colored men to be summoned on a special venire, since the party complaining had not exhausted his peremptories and so was not injured, the court severely criticises the practice as contrary to the spirit of the constitutional amendments intended to abolish race distinctions. [b] Venire having been quashed for failure to properly summon, there is no error in directing sheriff to summon anew veniremen who were on the former venire and who were not otherwise disqualified. Caperton v. Nickel, 4 W. Va. 173.

58. Arnold v. State, 38 Tex. Crim. 1, 40 S. W. 734, it is not a ground stated in the statute.

59. People v. Vincent, 95 Cal. 425, 30 Pac. 581, so far as it is an objection it lies to and must be taken against the jurors as individuals.

60. Shuford v. State, 4 Okla. Crim. 513, 113 Pac. 211.

(G.) NOMINATION OR SUGGESTING OF NAMES BY UNAUTHORIZED PERSONS. The challenge lies where jurors were put on the panel at their own request and not chosen by any authority whatever,⁶¹ as it does where names are suggested to commissioners by one who has no authority so to do,⁶² or where the public prosecutor unlawfully nominates some of the jurors.⁶³ But a party may, in good faith, notify the selecting officer of facts affecting the eligibility of various persons.⁶⁴

(H.) IRREGULARITY IN APPORTIONMENT. — Improper apportionment among the precincts or districts of the county is ground for challenge to the array.⁶⁵ Failure of a township to return a proper list is not ground for the challenge,⁶⁶ but arbitrarily leaving out townships is.⁶⁷ That the officer drawing a special venire did so from only part of the towns, cities and villages, is not ground for the challenge if done in good faith,⁶⁸ but it is ground for the challenge that the sheriff violated his instructions and only drew jurors from a single locality.⁶⁹

(I.) IRREGULARITY AS TO NUMBER OF JURORS. — Some courts hold that the failure to provide the full panel of jurors required by law is good ground for challenge to the array,⁷⁰ and that any error which has the effect of denying one the number of jurors allowed by the court's order is ground for quashing the venire.⁷¹ But on the other hand it has been held that the mere failure to select the full number designated by the court is no ground for challenge if no improper motive, or prejudice to the party, appears,⁷² and that the statutory pro-

[a] Omission Through Ignorance or Obstinacy. — Where the board of supervisors, through ignorance or obstinacy, disregarded the provisions of the statute apportioning the jurors to the supervisors' districts according to the number of electors in each, it is proper to quash the venire. Purvis v. State, 71 Miss. 706, 14 So. 268.

visions as to the number to be selected is a mere economic provision in the interest of the public which does not concern defendant.⁷³ Where the statute prescribes a certain number of qualified jurors are to be on the panel before peremptories are required the proper practice is to move to quash an incomplete panel.⁷⁴ That an excess in number has been selected is no ground for the challenge,⁷⁵ though it has been held to the contrary.⁷⁶

(XI.) Irregularities in Venire or Summons and Service Thereof.—(A.) DEFECTS IN THE VENIRE OR SUMMONS.—The challenge will lie when there is no legal venire issued as the law requires,⁷⁷ but will not lie merely because there was no formal summons if, in fact, the jurors do attend.⁷⁸ Mere errors in the wording of the venire which do not alter its legal effect, are no ground for the challenge,⁷⁹ nor does the failure of the clerk to sign the venire make it void, and so quashable.⁸⁰ That a juror's name appeared twice on the venire is not ground for quashing the writ;⁸¹ neither are mere mistakes in names on the venire.⁸²

(B.) IRREGULARITY IN SERVICE.—Challenge will not lie though the service was not made in a strictly legal manner.⁸³ So summoning by mail has been upheld where the jurors generally obeyed the summons,⁸⁴ and mere irregularities on the part of the summoning officers are not ground for quashing the venire.⁸⁵ That individual talesmen have not been properly summoned should be met by challenge to the poll directed against the particular juror.⁸⁶

(C.) SERVICE BY UNAUTHORIZED PERSON.—That the person who served the venire was not an officer authorized so to do is ground to quash the venire or challenge the array, according to some authorities,⁸⁷

but if he was at least a de facto officer, and the jurors attended there is no ground to quash the panel,⁸⁸ and if the objection be only to particular jurors it can only be raised by challenge to the poll.⁸⁹ The mere fact that an elisor has been appointed without sufficient cause is no ground for challenge to the panel,⁹⁰ nor is it ground for quashing a special venire that the court directed the sheriff to have it served by certain deputies selected for their fairness.⁹¹ Other authorities hold that the obtaining of an impartial jury is not affected at all by the question of who performed the ministerial duty of summoning so long as there was no bad faith or partiality.⁹²

(D.) JURORS NOT ALL SUMMONED.—That some jurors have not been summoned is no ground for challenge to the array, the sheriff having acted in good faith,⁹³ but it is ground for quashing the panel that the summoning officer failed to summon jurors named in the venire because he deemed them exempt, or unfit, for jury service.⁹⁴ By statute

in many states, an intentional omission of the summoning officer to summon one or more of the jurors drawn is ground for challenge to the panel.⁹⁵ Under these statutes the wilful omission of but one juror is clearly ground for the challenge,⁹⁶ but merely discarding names of persons who cannot be served, is no ground.⁹⁷

(E.) FAILURE TO OBEY SUMMONS. — That the whole panel summoned do not appear is not ground to quash the venire.⁹⁸

(F.) IRREGULARITIES IN SERVICE OF LIST ON DEFENDANT. — The service of a wrong list is no ground for quashing the venire where the correct list was subsequently and in due time served.⁹⁹ Imperfections in the list are not ground for quashing¹ unless the defendant was misled there-when serving a special venire, see supra, VII, E, 3, b, (X), (E).

[a] Use of “Ditto Marks” Not Misleading.—The list served on defendant should be a neat, legible copy without erasures, the use of “ditto marks,” etc. But it is no ground for quashing the venire unless the list is so imperfect that defendant and his counsel are misled thereby. Cole v. State, 105 Ala. 76, 16 So. 762.

[b] Juror’s name twice on copy is not ground for quashing the venire. McKee v. State, 82 Ala. 32, 2 So. 451.

[c] That the list served on defendant recited his name incorrectly in the caption is no ground for quashing. It is technically no part of the list, could not have misled defendant or his counsel and should have been objected to, if at all, at the time of service. Henderson v. State, 98 Ala. 35, 13 So. 146.

[d] Jurors on list by wrong name is not ground for quashing. Browning v. State, 33 Miss. 47; Bowen v. State, 3 Tex. App. 617; Swofford v. State, 3 Tex. App. 76, 88.

by, and a juror on the list by a wrong name may be stricken off on objection made.²

(G.) IRREGULARITIES IN RETURN OF SERVICE.—Informalities in the return of service are immaterial where the service was made and the jurors appeared.³ That the sheriff's return does not show service of a copy of the venire upon the defendant, is not ground for quashing the venire if the service was in fact made.⁴

c. Time To Challenge.—(I.) In General.—The common-law rule was that challenge to the array could not be made until the full jury was present,⁵ and it has been held that the making of the challenge is premature where the case has not been called for trial.⁶

State*, 190 Ala. 10, 67 So. 237; Morris v. State, 193 Ala. 1, 68 So. 1003.

[i] Under the former statute (1) it was no ground for quashing the venire that the list served on defendant did not designate which jurors were on the regular list, and which had been drawn on special venire (Cawley v. State, 133 Ala. 128, 32 So. 227), (2) or that it was not signed or certified (Phillips v. State, 162 Ala. 14, 50 So. 194), (3) or that residences of jurors were not stated (White v. State, 136 Ala. 58, 34 So. 177), (4) or their occupations (McClellan v. State, 140 Ala. 99, 37 So. 239); (5) or that jurors were named by initials of their Christian names (*Hall v. (II.) As Soon as Facts Known.—Generally the motion or challenge should be made as soon as the facts which warrant it are known, or it will be deemed to have been waived,⁷ and so far as the matters are of public record,⁸ or of a nature discoverable by the use of due diligence, the challenge is waived by not being made at the time the facts should have been discovered.⁹ This is undoubtedly the true rule that litigants have every opportunity to test the fairness and legality of the jury when case is called for trial. The court has no jurisdiction to consider an ex parte motion made before any case was on trial, or called or set for trial.

[a] Failure to discover that the jury commissioners did not select the names jointly, ought, by the exercise of due diligence on defendant's part, to have been discovered before trial. Inquiry should have been made of those who participated in the proceedings prescribed by the statute. State v. Jones (S. C.), 75 S. E. 449.

[b] By statute on first day of term, unless the facts could not, by due dili-

as to most grounds for quashing,¹⁰ but it is clear that for some grounds the court may quash whenever the matter is brought to its attention,¹¹ and one does not waive an irregularity by failing to object thereto at the time it was committed, if that was not at a time when he should have been in court.¹²

If grounds for quashing the panel appear upon the voir dire examination, the motion should be made at once.¹³

(III.) Before Trial.—Ordinarily a challenge to the array must be made before trial,¹⁴ and the right to challenge is waived by proceeding with the trial,¹⁵ though the motion to quash has been held to be in gence, have then been known to defendant. State v. Curtis, 44 La. Ann. 320, 10 So. 784; State v. Simmons, 43 La. Ann. 991, 10 So. 382; State v. Ashworth, 41 La. Ann. 683, 6 So. 556; State v. Coudier, 36 La. Ann. 291; State v. Vance, 31 La. Ann. 398.

[a] Illegality and Irregularity Distinguished.—A distinction was made between preparing a list in an illegal manner, by making selections from personal or political motives, for which the court would quash at any time, and mere irregularities as filing commissioner's oaths, which the parties might waive. Klemmer v. Mount Penn Gravit R. Co., 163 Pa. 521, 30 Atl. 274.

[b] Allowed After Jury Sworn. It was a proper exercise of the court's discretion to discharge the entire panel upon its being brought to its attention that the officer who summoned the jury was prejudiced, although the jury had been sworn, recess taken, and the court having reconvened, was about to take testimony when the motion to quash was made. Jones v. Springfield Traction Co., 137 Mo. App. 408, 118 S. W. 675.

12. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co. v. Strunk's Admr., 167 Ky. 340, 180 S. W. 528.

[a] Notice of Irregularity Not Presumed.—Where the panel was filled from persons called to serve at a criminal trial held just before the case at bar, instead of from the regular list, the parties cannot be presumed to have had any notice of the irregularity, and a new trial was ordered although there had been no challenge to the array. Haight v. Omaha & C. B. St. Ry. Co., 99 Neb. 56, 154 N. W. 836.

[b] Where the error consists in discharging the entire panel prematurely, an objection to the new panel is not waived, because no objection was made at the time the former panel was discharged. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. Ry. Co. v. Strunk's Admr., 167 Ky. 340, 180 S. W. 528.

[b] By Appearing and Moving for Continuance.—A venire which was irregular because issued before the return day in the justice's court, cannot be quashed, where defendant appeared on the return day, and took a continuance. time when made after indictment read, plea made and prosecution announces ready for trial.¹⁰

(IV.) Before Impanelling Begun.—In some jurisdictions the challenge is in time if made as counsel are about to start selecting the jury,¹¹ and should be made when the jury is first called upon the panel,¹² and before the jury is impaneled.¹³

The general rule being that a challenge to the polls waives a challenge to the array,¹⁴ one who does not challenge the array before entering upon the business of drawing a jury, waives his right.¹⁵

[g] In Kansas.—In State v. Jenkins, 32 Kan. 477, 4 Pac. 809, it is said the challenge must be made before jury

(VI.) Before Verdict.—Challenge to the array must be made before verdict rendered,²⁴ and cannot be raised for the first time on motion for a new trial,²⁵ or in arrest of judgment.²⁶ After verdict it is too late to question the drawing though it has been decided in another case to have been improperly made.²⁷

(VII.) Under Statutes Requiring Injury To Be Shown.—Some statutes provide a verdict shall not be set aside unless injury be shown or the objection was taken before verdict,²⁸ and a similar provision in some states requires the objection to be taken before the swearing of the jury.²⁹ These statutes have not changed the former rule that the sworn. But as explained in State v. Wright, 45 Kan. 136, 25 Pac. 631, this does not mean that it can be made at any time before jury sworn. It may be waived by not being made sooner.

[d] Order Improperly Limiting Selection.—Assuming that the court exceeded its powers in ordering the sheriff on a special venire to summon only freeholders, the prisoner by failing to object at the time the order was made and challenging the array upon the sheriff's return waives his right to object. *State v. or in summoning the jurors,³⁴ are waived by failing to make objection.

(II.) Failure To Make Timely Objection.—The failure to make a seasonable or timely objection or challenge to the panel or array is generally a waiver of the right thereafter to urge objections which might have been grounds of challenge.³⁵

(III.) Consent to Irregularity.—Right to quash the array is clearly waived where the court gives counsel an opportunity and they decline it,³⁶ or where consent is given to an irregularity before or at the time it is committed,³⁷ nor can the defendant object to action of

[b] No Waiver Where Counsel Expressly Refuse To Waive.—Where no formal array was put upon prisoner as required by statute, the trial court said if no objection to the array was made, it would consider it waived. Counsel replied: "We waive nothing." The court responded: "Some things are considered waived by silence." No objection to the array was made, and trial proceeded. This was held not to amount to a waiver, and a new trial was ordered. Cochran v. State, 62 Ga. 731. Compare Vaughan v. State, 88 Ga. 731, 16 S. E. 64; Schumpert v. State, 9 Ga. App. 553, 71 S. [a] Election Between Struck Jury and Continuance.—A party having, after disagreement of the jury, consented to a struck jury instead of one from the regular panel, the alternative being that the case go over the term, cannot after verdict insist upon his right

the court rendered necessary or proper by his previous challenges or objections.³⁸

(IV.) Going On With Trial After Objection.—After his challenge is overruled and he has taken an exception, one does not lose his rights by going on and attempting to secure as fair a jury as he can by the use of his challenges to individual jurors.³⁹ But it has been held that by unqualifiedly accepting the jury after it has been selected and impaneled, a party waives a previous challenge.⁴⁰ And where additional peremptories have been allowed a party who has failed to use them upon the jurors from the objectionable venire, he cannot thereafter claim to be prejudiced by the previous overruling of his challenge.⁴¹ So also one waives his challenge by failing to produce his proof and going on with the drawing of the jury;⁴² and after challenge to the array has been sustained, one waives it by going on with the trial.⁴³

[b] Counsel Failed To Elect as Between Statutes.—Where the judge offered to have the jury summoned either under an old statute or a new one, and counsel did not then make a choice, the defendant cannot afterward challenge the array on the ground that the court selected the wrong method. Mahon v. State, 127 Tenn. 535, 156 S. W. 458.

soon as the jury was called, and again objected to the array after thirty men had qualified, his first objection was a challenge to the array and not to the polls, and hence is not waived. State v. Weeden, 133 Mo. 7, 34 S. W. 473.

[b] Objection to Manner of Striking.—Where the statute provided that if defendant failed to strike names off the list, the judge should appoint some disinterested person to do so and the judge proceeded to strike off the names himself to which defendant excepted, it was not necessary to make a further objection in the form of a formal challenge to the array. *Gallagher v. [a] Allegations Must Be Definite. The assertion that the jury drawers "drew from the jury box some names that were not included in the list summoned to appear as jurors" is indefinite as it does not clearly appear whether the intention is to aver that all of the names drawn were not placed upon the list given the sheriff or that there was an omission to summon certain jurors. *State v. [a] The statutes frequently provide that the challenge must plainly and distinctly "specify the facts" or "state the grounds" of challenge. See the statutes.

[b] Mere statement by counsel that the accused demanded his legal rights, and would not waive anything, except a copy of the indictment and a list of the witnesses, is not sufficient to constitute a challenge to the array. Schumpert v. State, 9 Ga. App. 553, 71 S. E. 879. Compare Cochran v. State, 62 Ga. 731.

[c] Discrimination Against a Class. (1) An allegation that the venire list does not contain the name of a single colored man, is not a substantive allegation that the jury commissioners discriminated against negroes in making up the list. State v. Baptiste, 105 La. 661, 30 So. 147. (2) But an allegation is sufficient which states that the sheriff "did fail and refuse to select if it merely alleges conclusions of law demurrer thereto will be sustained.⁵³ The ground must be so stated that the opposite party can demur to its sufficiency in point of law,⁵⁴ or raise an issue with respect to the truth of the facts set forth.⁵⁵ The court has some discretion as to how specifically the grounds must be stated.⁵⁶

(IV.) Amendment of Challenge.—By statute amendment of the challenge on allowance of an exception thereto, is sometimes permitted,⁵⁷ and the amended challenge thereupon becomes a substitute for the original.⁵⁸

(V.) Demurrer or Exception to Challenge.—Where the facts are not questioned, but only their legal sufficiency as ground for the challenge, the adverse party demurs.⁵⁹ A demurrer to a challenge does not any colored men of African descent to serve on the jury as aforesaid, thus discriminating against all colored men of African descent. . . . That it has been the custom for many years . . . for the sheriff to refuse to select any names of persons of the African race to serve on the jury in this honorable court. . . . That the discrimination and refusal of the sheriff to select any men of the African race to serve on the jury is on account of their race, color and previous condition of servitude." This sufficiently sets out that there was a discrimination by the sheriff. Montgomery v. State, 53 Fla. 115, 42 So. 894.

admit the truth of the alleged cause for challenge, but only the truth of the facts stated in the challenge and on which the challenge is based,⁶⁰ and does not admit those facts unless they are sufficiently pleaded.⁶¹

The statutes sometimes provide for what is called an "exception" to the challenge where the sufficiency of the facts alleged as ground for challenge are denied.⁶² This is the equivalent of the common-law demurrer to the challenge,⁶³ and admits the truth of the facts alleged,⁶⁴ and the statutes usually so provide.⁶⁵ The exception need not be in writing but is entered on the minutes of the court or reporter.⁶⁶

(VI.) Denial of Challenge.—Where the opposite party disputes the facts alleged as ground of the challenge he should join issue thereon.⁶⁷ This pleading is usually termed a "denial."⁶⁸ It need not be in writing but is entered on the minutes of the court or reporter.⁶⁹

[a] Permitted Nunc Pro Tunc After Peremptory Used.—The court permitted counsel for the people to put in an answer and demurrer nunc pro tunc after the court had sustained an oral demurrer. Having at the same time offered to defendant the right to reply and to introduce evidence which was declined, there was no error, though defendant had meanwhile used one perlenger to reply,⁷² and the statutes permit the court to allow a denial after overruling an exception.⁷³

f. *Examination and Evidence.*⁷⁴ — (I.) Burden of Proof and Presumptions. — On challenge to the array the challenger must stand ready to prove his challenge by proof of the illegality,⁷⁵ and a challenge is properly overruled where no evidence is offered.⁷⁶ The burden of proving the facts alleged as ground of challenge is on the challenger,⁷⁷ and he must make it affirmatively appear that the grounds for challenge exist,⁷⁸ for in the absence of any showing to the contrary the presumption always is that the officials properly performed their duties.⁷⁹ But neglect or misconduct of the officer having been shown,

Presumptions in favor of court's rul-

the burden shifts to the other party to show facts which defeat the challenge.⁸⁰

(II.) Motion and Affidavits as Proof.—The averments of the motion or challenge are not themselves evidence of the truth of the facts alleged,⁸¹ and it has been held that the ex parte affidavit or verification in support of the motion or challenge, is not evidence.⁸² But the proof may be by affidavits or by oral evidence,⁸³ and it has been said that the better practice is to make the proof by affidavits,⁸⁴ and it is within the discretion of the trial court to order the proof to be made in that form.⁸⁵

(III.) Admissibility of Evidence.—Where the opposite party demurs the challenging party cannot introduce any evidence.⁸⁶ Otherwise, however, the challenger must be given an opportunity to prove the facts upon which his challenge is based,⁸⁷ except where no sufficient grounds are alleged.⁸⁸ So it is reversible error to refuse to receive evidence on the question of discrimination, when properly raised by ings on the challenge, see infra, VII, E, 3, h, (I).

80. State v. Groom, 49 Mont. 354, 141 Pac. 858, assuming that the good faith of the sheriff is a defense to his neglect the challenger need not prove the negative.

[a] Where the motion is not properly verified so that it may be used as an affidavit as well as a pleading, there is no evidence before the court on which it can set aside the panel. Weeping Water Electric Light Co. v. Haldeman, 35 Neb. 139, 52 N. W. 892.

[a] Verification of motion by defendant is not sufficient. Rivers v. State, 117 Tenn. 235, 96 S. W. 956.

[b] Verification on Information and Belief.—Challenge to array is not sustained by proof where there is nothing but defendant's verification and that is only on "information and belief." Forrester v. State, 73 Tex. Crim. 61, 163 S. W. 87.

[c] Reason for Rule.—The challenge is the pleading and its averments must be proved by evidence. So the defendant by merely incorporating his own affidavit into his statement of grounds of challenge cannot make it evidence of the facts averred. People v. Brown, 48 Cal. 253.

[a] Reducing Oral Testimony to Affidavit.—The challenge having been allowed on the sheriff's oral testimony showing his bias, the defendant is in no manner injured by the filing of an affidavit by the sheriff, acting under the court's order, recording his testimony, even if it be conceded that such filing was an irregularity. People v. Ebanks, 117 Cal. 652, 49 Pac. 1049, 40 L. R. A. 269.

challenge to the panel.⁸⁹ The evidence offered is not admissible unless it applies specifically to the selection of the panel which is sought to be quashed,⁹⁰ and is germane to the irregularity complained of.⁹¹ By statute in some states the officers whose irregularity is complained of may be examined,⁹² though their evidence be contradictory of the certificate.⁹³ Under these statutes the judge who ordered the drawing of the jury may be called as a witness when the regularity of the drawing is questioned,⁹⁴ and the clerk or other officers present at the drawing may be examined.⁹⁵ And where the challenge is based on the statute making the officer incompetent when he could not act as a juror, he may be examined as to his competency.⁹⁶ In some jurisdictions, however, the jury commissioners cannot be heard to testify in contradiction of their official return,⁹⁷ but the oral evidence of the clerk as to just what occurred may be received.⁹⁸

[a] Where discrimination against negroes was claimed, it was proper to refuse to receive the testimony of nine hundred negroes that they were in all respects qualified for jury service but had never been drawn. [a] Minutes of Secretary Are Not Conclusive.—The minutes of the secretary of the judges being admittedly incomplete the court not only has inherent power to correct them, but the minutes are not conclusive on the challenge to the panel and the court trying the challenge may examine the presiding judge who was himself an actor in the facts being tried. People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 179, 48 Pac. 75.

96. Koontz v. State, 10 Okla. Crim. 553, 139 Pac. 842.

[a] Should Not Be Confined to General Questions.—On the trial of the challenge to the panel based on the bias of the elisor who summoned it, it is reversible error to confine the questions to such general inquiries as "Have you formed or expressed an opinion," or "Have you a bias," but counsel should have been permitted to ask relevant questions bringing out the facts just as in an examination of a prospective juror. It is the judgment of the court upon the facts—not the elisor's opinion that is in issue. People v. Teshara, 134 Cal. 542, 66 Pac. 798.

[b] Improper Apportionment Among Precincts Not Shown.—A list of votes cast in the several precincts is not enough without an allegation that those voting were all the persons therein competent to serve as jurors. Clark v. Saline, 9 Neb. 516, 4 N. W. 246.

[c] That no jurors were selected from a certain township is not sufficiently shown by proof that the list does not contain names from a certain town which did not comprise the whole township. People v. Searcey, 121 Cal. 1, 53 Pac. 359, 41 L. R. A. 157.

[d] Must Show Presence of Qualified Jurors in Omitted District.—Showing qualified voters is not alone suf-

(V.) Re-examination.—After overruling a challenge to one panel based on the officer's partiality, the court, having permitted a full examination, will not permit a re-examination as to a second special panel unless further proof as to the officer's prejudice is offered.¹

g. Trial and Determination.—(I.) By What Tribunal.—At common law the challenge to the array, so far as it involved only a question of law, was tried by the court,² but if an issue of fact was formed the trial was by triers.³ The modern practice is for the court to try both the issues of law and fact,⁴ and it is frequently so provided by ficient. People v. Sowell, 145 Cal. 292, 78 Pac. 717.

[e] Evidence Conclusive That Commissioners Not Prejudiced.—Proof that the jurors were selected before the murder of which defendant was accused was committed is conclusive evidence that the commissioners were not prejudiced against defendant in their selection. Cavitt v. State, 15 Tex. App. 190.

[g] That negroes (1) were wilfully excluded is not sufficiently shown by the mere affidavit of defendant verifying his motion to quash. Rivers v. State, 117 Tenn. 235, 96 S. W. 956. (2) While in a close case the evidence that no negro had been selected or impaneled on either a grand or petit jury might have weight on motion to quash the special venire for race discrimination, where it is shown by the direct testimony of the officers who made up the list that there was no discrimination, such evidence cannot be given weight. Pollard v. State, 58 Tex. Crim. 299, 125 S. W. 390. (3) Affidavits of colored citizens to the effect that they have never seen or heard of colored men being called on juries for a specified number of years is not sufficient to show such were not drawn. Ransom v. State, 116 Tenn. 355, 96 S. W. 953.

[h] That the court selected colored men to the exclusion of white men, is not shown merely because on overruling the motion to quash the venire the court gave as one of his reasons the fact that both the prisoner and the prosecutrix were colored coupled with the additional reason that the venire was composed of intelligent colored men qualified to serve. *Coleman v. [a] Common-Law Practice.—(1) If the facts are denied two triers are appointed out of the panel or perhaps two persons named by the court. If triers pronounce the causes of challenge unfounded, the trial proceeds. If the facts are admitted, but are deemed insufficient, the court adjudgeth and either quashes the array or overrules the challenge. Gardner v. Turner, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 260, citing Coke Litt. 158. (2) Ullman v. State, 124 Wis. 602, 103 N. W. 6, it is said the triers were appointed by the court. But compare Lee v. Evalul, 1 N. J. [a] All issues, whether of law or fact, on an objection to the entire panel are now triable summarily by the court, whether the challenge is regulated by statute or is a mere matter statute.⁵ The judge is not disqualified to try the motion to quash merely because he was the one who selected the panel.⁶

(II.) Procedure at Trial.—The challenge to the array was tried publicly, at common law.⁷ The court should hear the matter on its merits,⁸ and it seems that counsel should ordinarily be permitted to argue.⁹ The issues should be tried summarily.¹⁰ Where the challenge is based on the officer's not having the qualifications of a juror the statutes frequently provide that the challenge shall be determined in the same manner as if made to a juror.¹¹

(III.) Decision and Procedure Thereupon.—Where there is a demurrer or exception the court should either overrule or sustain it.¹² The proper practice where there is a denial is for the court to hear testimony and try the question of fact presented,¹³ and the statute frequently so provides;¹⁴ but the mere fact that a denial is filed does not compel the court to try the question of fact where an exception would lie.¹⁵ If the evidence fails to show the existence of the facts on which the challenge is based, it is properly overruled.¹⁶ If the venire is found bad, the persons comprising it are no longer jurymen and should be discharged from further attendance,¹⁷ and notwithstanding an individual juror may have been examined and found qualified he should be discharged,¹⁸ and the proper practice is to set aside the whole panel and not merely the individuals to the improper summoning of whom the challenge was directed.¹⁹

By statute, in many states, on allowance of the challenge the jury is discharged as to that case while on disallowance the jury is impaneled,²⁰ but in other states if the irregularity was in selecting or summoning, the standing jurors are excluded and new jurors summoned, while if it is in the drawing, the names are replaced and redrawn.²¹ After the venire has once been quashed, it cannot be held good in another case.²²

The proper practice on quashing the venire is to continue the session for the transaction of such business as may not require a jury.²³

where the facts are undisputed the only question is one of law.²⁷ By statute the decision of the trial court has been made not subject to exception in some states.²⁸ On appeal the court will not consider objections which were not included in the challenge as made below,²⁹ but it may consider a challenge which was not in form sufficiently specific.³⁰ Where the parties have treated an exception as raising an issue of fact, the reviewing court will treat the matter as though issue had been joined by denial,³¹ and the fact that no exception was filed does not make it error for the court to pass upon the challenge as though it had been excepted to,³² nor is the summary overruling of a challenge which set forth no legal objection, prejudicial merely because no replication is filed.³³

The presumption is that the trial court had before it the proper evidence upon which it based its ruling on the challenge,³⁴ and that the circumstances warranted its ruling;³⁵ the party claiming error must make it appear from the record,³⁶ and unless it affirmatively appears otherwise, it will be presumed that the challenge was not made in time, where the court overruled it.³⁷

(II.) Prerequisites to Review.—Where the practice requires an exception to the court's rulings as a prerequisite to an appeal, the exception must be made to the ruling on the challenge,³⁸ and a bill of exceptions is also necessary in some states³⁹ where the challenge does not become a part of the record proper unless it is inserted in the bill of exceptions.⁴⁰ In others, a transcript of the record as to the proceedings on the selection of the jury, when properly certified, may be considered independently of any bill of exceptions.⁴¹

(III.) Decision on Review.—Though it has been held to be reversible error to overrule a proper challenge to the array,⁴² the more usual holding is that refusal to quash the panel is not ground for reversal in the absence of some positive injury sustained by the challenger,⁴³

[a] Statutory Rule.—N. Y. Code Crim. Proc., §455; S. D. Laws, 1913, ch. 280, §1.

[b] Error Harmless Where None of Panel Served.—Though the court erroneously overruled a motion to quash the regular panel the error is harmless where the jury was selected from a special venire called at defendant's request under the statute, and, pursuant to the court's order, no one of those called on the regular panel was called on the special venire nor permitted to serve on the jury. *Cook v. and the court's discretion in granting the motion to quash should not be interfered with unless the record shows prejudice to the appellant.⁴⁴

4. Challenge to Individual for Cause.—a. *Nature and Right.*⁴⁵
(1.) In General.—The right to participate in the selection of a jury by interposing challenges for cause is an indispensable element of the right to trial by jury.⁴⁶ The right exists in condemnation proceedings,⁴⁷ and where a struck jury has been demanded.⁴⁸ It exists in misdemeanor as well as in capital cases,⁴⁹ and is allowed on the trial of preliminary as well as final issues.⁵⁰ The statutes specifically provide, in many states, that either party may challenge for cause,⁵¹ and the right clearly belongs to the commonwealth as well as to the accused,⁵²

Challenge Harmless.—Ullman v. State, 124 Wis. 602, 103 N. W. 6.

[d] No Prejudice Where Jurors Fair and Impartial.—The overruling of a motion to quash the venire is not reversible error when based on the impartiality of the officer who summoned the venire, and it does not appear that the jurors who were finally selected were not fair and impartial. Gunnell v. State, 21 Wyo. 125, 128 Pac. 512.

[b] Record Showing Two Lists. The overruling of a challenge to the array based upon the claim that the jurors were drawn from an unauthorized list, will be upheld where it appears that two lists were made, and that at least one was authorized and the record does not show from which list the jurors were actually drawn. *People v. the statutes specifically so providing.⁵³ The right to challenge for cause never becomes exhausted in the same sense as the right to peremptory challenges.⁵⁴

(II.) Repetition of Challenge.—A juror cannot be challenged a second time for matter which might have been proved or given in evidence on the trial of the first challenge.⁵⁵ One who challenges to the array cannot afterwards challenge to the polls for what would have been a good challenge to the array;⁵⁶ nor can one upon his challenge for principal cause being overruled, assign the same facts on a challenge to the favor.⁵⁷ Under some statutes, however, the court may, in its discretion, permit a challenge to be renewed.⁵⁸

may be waived in criminal cases,⁶⁶ though some courts have held that there cannot be a waiver of statutory qualifications in criminal cases.⁶⁷ It is proper to refuse to permit a challenge to be waived.⁶⁸

[a] "No sufficient reason is given for the distinction that is made in some of the cases, between civil and criminal cases, and between capital and other criminal cases. . . . There is no reason why every party to an action, civil or criminal, should not be held to exercise the right given him to examine as to the qualifications of jurors called to act in his case, and, if he waives that right, to be concluded thereby, unless actual prejudice is otherwise shown." *State v. E. 408, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 967; People v. Mack, 35 App. Div. 114, 54 N. Y. Supp. 698, 13 N. Y. Crim. 401; People v. Toledo, 135 N. Y. Supp. 49; State v. Goetz, 21 N. D. 569, 131 N. W. 514.

67. Johr v. People, 26 Mich. 427.

[a] Reason for Rule.—There is a difference between civil and criminal cases. In the latter, public policy demands that there be a legal jury. So in a civil case alienage may be waived. But not in a criminal case. Johr v. People, 26 Mich. 427; Hill v. People, 16 Mich. 351.

[b] Distinguishing "Positive Disqualification" and "Ground for Challenge."—On review of many cases in various jurisdictions the court concludes that the true rule is, that even in capital cases there may be a waiver of anything which "was not a positive and absolute disqualification to them to serve as jurors, but only a ground for challenge. If it were a positive disqualification then the trial would have been a nullity, precisely the same as though it had been had before ten men only." State v. Jackson, 27 Kan. 581, 41 Am. Rep. 424.

[c] In an early capital case, a judgment was reversed because an alien served, on the theory that in such cases a defendant is presumed to stand on all his rights. Schumaker v. State, 5 Wis. 324. See also State v. Vogel, 22 Wis. 471.

68. State v. Allen, 46 Conn. 531.

(II.) What Constitutes Generally.—The general rule is that one who accepts a jury waives all objections to the jurors.⁶⁹ Thus, by signifying his satisfaction with the jury, one waives a challenge theretofore made and overruled,⁷⁰ as does he by withdrawing his challenge and accepting the juror after the challenge has been sustained but before the juror has retired.⁷¹ It is sometimes held that a formal objection must be made to the completed jury or error in rulings on previous challenges will be deemed waived.⁷² But the more usual holding is that one does not waive his rights by going on with the trial after his objection to the individual juror has been overruled.⁷³

There is no waiver by merely permitting the juror to act where the

[a] Where an unconditional affirmative answer is given by counsel to the court's question as to whether they are satisfied with the jury, made after the jury is complete but before it is sworn, all previous objections to qualifications are waived. Cornell v. State, 104 Wis. 527, 80 N. W. 745.

[b] Where defendant's counsel announce, "We will accept the jury," all objections to qualifications previously made are withdrawn. Flynn v. State, 97 Wis. 44, 72 N. W. 373.

[c] Objection Offered To Be Withdrawn, But Declined.—After a challenge for actual bias has been overruled, and the state has offered to withdraw its objection to the challenge and permit defendant to again challenge, but he refuses to avail himself of the offer, he waives his right to object even though the court may have been in error in overruling the challenge in the first instance. State v. Jahns, 61 Wash. 636, 112 Pac. 747.

[b] Need Not Take a Nonsuit.—Defendant having objected and taken an exception when his challenge was overruled, need not take a nonsuit, with leave, etc., but may proceed with the trial. Fulweiler v. St. Louis, 61 Mo. 479.

[c] Objection to question propounded to juror was saved where while the court was considering it the attorney moved to discharge the panel because of the nature of questions asked. The motion being overruled, the attorney excepted and stated his juror has been guilty of making false answers on his re-examination, which if truly answered would have resulted in his being excluded.⁷⁴ One waives his challenge by failing to take the necessary steps to have it determined;⁷⁵ and it may be waived by interposing another challenge on another ground.⁷⁶ The challenge is waived by a subsequent plea of "guilty."⁷⁷ One cannot object to a challenge for cause by the opposite party on a ground by which he has excluded jurors himself;⁷⁸ nor after accepting certain jurors can he object to others subject to the same disqualification.⁷⁹ One does not waive his right to challenge for cause by a challenge to the array.⁸⁰ After challenge for principal cause has been tried and disallowed, the juror may be challenged to the favor.⁸¹ By consenting⁸² to the asking of the statutory questions objection was to the question. Withen v. Jeffery, 259 Ill. 372, 102 N. E. 778.

Lee*, 182 Ala. 561, 62 So. 199. Time to challenge, see generally infra, VII, E, 4, c.

[c] One who has been denied generally the right to challenge is entitled to a reversal though he did not challenge a particular juror and have the challenge overruled, however. State v. Fulton, 66 N. C. 632, the situation is not analogous to a refusal to admit evidence.

76. Ford v. Umatilla, 15 Ore. 313, 16 Pac. 33.

[b] First Challenge on Ground Not Prejudicial.—Where a challenge to a juror is made for a cause which could not be prejudicial to the party, and the challenge is interposed as a mere technical right under the statute, the party must stand on his strict right, and if he takes a subsequent step and objects to the juror for other reasons, he waives his right to insist on the first objection. Ford v. Umatilla, 15 Ore. 313, 16 Pac. 33.

77. State v. Vaughn, 95 S. C. 455, 79 S. E. 312, jury were retained to fix the punishment.

78. State v. Boon, 80 N. C. 461.

79. State v. Holmes, 63 N. C. 18, after accepting three colored men, cannot object to a fourth solely on that ground.

[a] Waives Right To Question by Not Asking To Question Accepted Jurors.—Defendant's counsel having accepted six jurors who had been sworn and having thereafter learned that defendant's defense was based on insanity induced by drunkenness, waives his right to question the jurors as to their views on that defense by not asking permission to further question or challenge the jurors already accepted. People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 335, 38 Pac. 945.

In determining whether there has been a waiver, most courts regard more lightly the disqualifications which are purely statutory than those which go to the juror's intelligence or impartiality.⁸³

(III.) Failure To Challenge.⁸⁴ — The general rule is that if a party fails to challenge a disqualified juror he waives all objections to him.⁸⁵ Especially is a challenge waived where the party fails to urge it upon 82. Jackson v. State, 103 Ga. 417, 30 S. E. 251.

83. Hickey v. State, 12 Neb. 490, 11 N. W. 744; Wilcox v. Saunders, 4 Neb. 569.

[a] "Propter Defectum" Distinguished From "Propter Affectum," etc. There has always been a tendency to treat less strictly the want of disqualifications properly reached by a challenge propter defectum than those subjecting to challenges propter affectum and propter delictum. This is because lack of merely statutory qualifications, such as citizenship, age, sex, etc., which do not affect the ability of the juror to do his duty intelligently and impartially, are not so apt to do injury to the party as where the juror is incompetent because of his bias, partiality, or criminality, etc. Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. 217.

[b] Where an objection is propter defectum (1) the ancient rule of the common law adopted by this court at an early day and uniformly applied, is that even though unknown to the party complaining and his counsel when the juror is accepted, the acceptance once made is conclusive. Walker v. State, 118 Tenn. 375, 99 S. W. 366; Goad v. State, 106 Tenn. 175, 61 S. W. 79; Draper v. State, 4 Baxt. 246. (2) But where a juror has prejudged the case a different rule prevails. Draper v. State, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 246.

[c] Objection That No Legal Jury. That a juror was not a freeholder or householder comes too late after verdict, not being a disqualification which vitiates the verdict on the theory that there was no legal jury. Frank v. State, 39 Miss. 705.

84. That challenge must be specific, and is waived as to any particular ground which is not embraced within the challenge made, see infra, VII, E, 4, d, (IV).

[a] Compared to Failure To Plead. The omission to challenge is a waiver of all objections just as a failure to plead a defense waives it. The challenge does not go to the jurisdiction. Clark v. Van Vrancken, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 278.

[b] Rule Applied Where Court Called for Objection.—Objection is clearly waived where the court called upon the attorneys to say whether they

the ground therefor being called to his attention by the court.⁸⁶ So, if the incompetency appears on the voir dire, it is waived by failure to challenge.⁸⁷ That a juror chosen is an alien,⁸⁸ or is a non-resident,⁸⁹ or lacks proper property qualifications,⁹⁰ or is related within the pro-had any objections to the jurors, or any of them, and no objection was made. Ohio River R. Co. v. Blake, 38 W. Va. 718, 18 S. E. 957.

[c] Should Object and Except to Ruling Thereon.—Where defendant neither objected to the acceptance of a juror on the panel, nor took an exception to the ruling thereon, he cannot raise the question of the juror's competency on a motion for a new trial. *State v. [b] Juror Disclosing Knowledge Which He Used in Arriving at Verdict. A juror on his voir dire having disclosed that another railroad had constructed its road across his land and that he knew the inconvenience thereof, defendant in condemnation proceedings cannot complain of the juror's having used that knowledge in fixing the amount he voted to award, where there was no showing that the juror could not have been excluded. *Beckman v. based upon these grounds:⁹³ the mere inclusion of an incompetent person on the jury does not vitiate the verdict.⁹⁴ Nor is one's failure to challenge excused by his apprehension that the jury would then be filled in an improper manner.⁹⁵ nor by the fact that he supposed his right to challenge was exhausted.⁹⁶ Ignorance of the disqualification does not always excuse the failure to challenge.⁹⁷ Nor does the party's peal is waived. Glover v. Woolsey, Dudley (Ga.) 85.

[g] That a juror was disqualified by reason of bias or prejudice should be presented by a challenge to the juror and not by a motion for a new trial. Patswald v. United States, 5 Okla. 351, 49 Pac. 57.

[a] Even a disqualification propter delictum does not render the verdict void where the party did not challenge. Raub v. Carpenter, 187 U. S. 159, 23 Sup. Ct. 72, 47 L. ed. 119.

[b] In Illinois (1) the rule now is that if the juror be an alien, or over age, or otherwise exempt, either party may challenge for cause, but failing so to do the verdict is not a nullity. Formerly alienage, in capital cases was considered ground for setting aside verdict. See Guykowski v. People, 2

Ill. 476, and Greenup v. Stoker, 3 Gilman 202. (2) This rule, however, did not extend to jurors who were exempt because over age. See Davis v. People, 19 Ill. 74. (3) The mere knowledge or want of knowledge is not important. For a further discussion see Chase v. People, 40 Ill. 352, reviewing all the Illinois cases. See also Davison v. People, 90 Ill. 221. (4) So though one was entitled to a "well informed" jury he cannot stand by and fail to challenge and then take advantage of a juror's illiteracy. West Chicago St. R. Co. v. Huhnke, 82 Ill. App. 404.

95. Miller v. Wilson, 24 Pa. 114, the regular panel had been dismissed and counsel said he would not challenge because the jury would then be filled with bystanders.

[a] The following grounds of challenge were waived even though the party was ignorant of them at time of trial: (1) Want of property qualifications (Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. 217), (2) that juror was member of grand jury (Denmark v. State, 43 Fla. 182, 31 So. 269; Gavin v. State, 42 Fla. 553, 29 So. 405), (3) or is a deputy sheriff (Stedman v. Batchelor, 49 Hun 390, 3 N. Y. Supp. 580, 19 N. Y. St. 518 [no prejudice appeared]), (4) or that juror is not a freeholder or householder (Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. 217), (5) or is a minor (U. disbelief that the juror is disqualified.⁹⁸ That the party and his counsel were self-deceived does not excuse their failure to challenge.⁹⁹

(IV.) Failure To Use Due Diligence To Discover Qualification.¹ Though it is said that the accused has a right to presume that the jurors called to try him are competent, and so he need not anticipate possible objections unless he has notice that they exist, or has some reason to suppose that they may exist,² on the other hand the state makes no guaranty as to the competency of jurors,³ and the parties must use due diligence to ascertain whether the jurors possess the usual qualifications of jurors.⁴ Some cases hold that one should make Dean, 113 Mass. 297), (8) or the expression of an opinion (State v. Howard, 17 N. H. 171), (9) that juror did not understand English language (Dickerson v. North Jersey St. R. Co., 68 N. J. L. 45, 52 Atl. 214), (10) or had served on former trial of same case. De Mateo v. Perano, 80 N. J. L. 437, 78 Atl. 162. To same effect, see In re Lindsley, 46 N. J. Eq. 358, 19 Atl. 726.

Failure to use due diligence to discover disqualification as waiver, see infra, VII, E, 4, b, (IV).

Knowledge of disqualification as waiver, see infra, VII, E, 4, b, (VII).

98. Nerrick v. Reppard, 23 Ohio St. 333.

99. Watts v. Ruth, 30 Ohio St. 32, from appearances and known fact that juror was married party and counsel assumed he was of full age.

1. Failure to discover disqualification as waiver, see infra, VII, E, 4, b, (V).

2. Rice v. State, 16 Ind. 298.

Generally as to presumption that juror is competent and burden of proof as to the contrary, see infra, VII, E, 4, j, (III).

3. State v. Pickett, 103 Iowa 714, 73 N. W. 346, 39 L. R. A. 302.

[a] Presumption of Competency Does Not Excuse Failure To Challenge and Examine.—The presumption that the officials charged with the duty of selection have made a proper selection does not relieve litigants from the duty of examination and challenge. Johns v. Hodges, 60 Md. 215, 45 Am. Rep. 722.

[b] The presumption that the court who selected the venire did so in a proper manner and put only competent men thereon, may be destroyed by challenge and proof offered at the time of trial. If the party is silent he cannot thereafter raise the question in another court. Cody v. State, 3 How. (Miss.) 27.

[c] Presumption of Competency Does Not Affect Knowledge of Disqualification.—Though the state is presumed to select competent jurors, if the defendant in fact knew of the disqualification, he waived it. State v. Groome, 10 Iowa 308.

4. Ark.—James v. State, 68 Ark. 464, 60 S. W. 29. Fla.—Webster v. State, 47 Fla. 108, 36 So. 584; Whitner v. Hamlin, 12 Fla. 18. Ga.—Burns v. State, 80 Ga. 544, 7 S. E. 88. Ind. Block v. State, 100 Ind. 357. Mo. Orr v. Bradley, 126 Mo. App. 146, 103 S. W. 1149. S. C.—Mew v. Charleston, etc. Ry. Co., 55 S. C. 90, 32 S. E. 828, following State v. Robertson, 54 S. C. 147, 31 S. E. 868, and holding that though the juror has a constitutional disqualification the verdict will not be set aside and a new trial granted where due diligence was not used to discover the disqualification. Utah.—People v. Lewis, 4 Utah 42, 5 Pac. 543.

[a] The object of having the jurors drawn for the term in open court is so litigants may be present, ascertain the names, and inquire about the qualifications, characters, connections, relations, etc. Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. 217.

[b] The reason for giving the prisoner a copy of the panel several days before trial is that he may inform himself. His negligence in failing so to do deprives him of any right. State v. Quarrel, 2 Bay (S. C.) 150, 1 Am. Dec. 637. See also 16 STANDARD PROC. 1006.

[c] Where one does not make inquiry, from which he could easily have learned the disqualifying facts, he can-inquiry before the trial commences.⁵ Reasonable diligence at least requires that the juror be put on his voir dire,⁶ and it is the duty of parties to ascertain by proper examination, the competency of jurors; not complain after verdict. Poindexter v. Com., 33 Gratt. (74 Va.) 766.

[d] Thus (1) a physical infirmity should have been discovered (Reed v. State, 75 Neb. 509, 106 N. W. 649 [defective eyesight]; Alm v. Andrews Bros. Co., 9 Ohio Cir. Ct. 591, 6 Ohio Cir. Dec. 514 [deafness]), (2) as should the fact that a juror was under age (La.—State v. Button, 50 La. Ann. 1071, 23 So. 868, 69 Am. St. Rep. 470; State v. Garig, 43 La. Ann. 365, 8 So. 934. Md.—Johns v. Hodges, 60 Md. 215. Ohio.—Watts v. Ruth, 30 Ohio St. 32), (3) or was not an elector (Ind.—Patterson v. State, 70 Ind. 341. Ohio.—Watts v. Ruth, 30 Ohio St. 32; Eastman v. Wight, 4 Ohio St. 156. S. C.—Mew v. Charleston, etc. Ry. Co., 55 S. C. 90, 32 S. E. 828 [failure to examine books]), (4) or a taxpayer. State v. Fisher, 2 Nott & McC. (S. C.) 261.

[e] So also that a juror was a grand juror (1) should have been discovered (Cal.—In re Jones' Estate, 166 Cal. 108, 135 Pac. 288 [records of court, easily accessible would show]. Ga.—Sapp v. State, 116 Ga. 182, 42 S. E. 410; Britt v. State, 112 Ga. 583, 37 S. E. 886; Jones v. State, 95 Ga. 497, 20 S. E. 211. La.—State v. Smith, 41 La. Ann. 688, 6 So. 546. Ohio.—Beek v. State, 20 Ohio St. 228; Stewart v. State, 15 Ohio St. 155. S. C.—State v. O'Driscoll, 2 Bay 153 [prisoner had copy of list on his indictment]. Tenn.—Gillespie v. State, 8 Yerg. 507, 27 Am. Dec. 137 [record evidence in case shown]. Utah.—People v. Lewis, 4 Utah 42, 5 Pac. 543. Va.—Bristow v. Com., 15 Gratt. (56 Va.) 634 [where juror had list, distinguishing Dilworth v. Com., 12 Gratt. (53 Va.) 689, 65 Am. Dec. 264, where he had no list and used due diligence]. But see Bennet v. State, 24 Wis. 57), (2) as should the fact that he was foreman of the coroner's jury (Young v. State, 90 Md. 579, 45 Atl. 531), (3) or that he served in a former trial of the same case (Ga.—White Sewing Mach. Co. v. Horkan, 17 Ga. App. 48, 86 S. E. 257. Ohio.—Hayward v. Calhoun, 2 Ohio St. 164 [it is matter of record]. S. C.—State v. Robertson, 54 S. C. 147, 31 S. E. 868), (4) or that he was on plaintiff's cost bond and so disqualified under the statute. Vincent v. Smith, 13 Ariz. 346, 114 Pac. 557.

[f] An objection that the name of a juror was not in the box or on the list is waived. It could have been as easily ascertained before as after verdict, by ordinary diligence in looking over the list. Osgood v. State, 63 Ga. 791; Gormley v. Laramore, 40 Ga. 253.

[g] Mistakes as to Identity of Jurors Should Be Discovered.—Ga.—Burns v. State, 80 Ga. 544, 7 S. E. 88. Ia.—State v. Matheson, 130 Iowa 440, 103 N. W. 137, 114 Am. St. Rep. 427. Miss.—Tolbert v. State, 71 Miss. 179, 14 So. 462, 42 Am. St. Rep. 454. Compare Munshower v. State, 56 Md. 514, where it is said mere mistake in the middle name of a juror is no ground for arrest of judgment where there is no mistake as to identity of person.

[h] Juror Defendant in Another Suit by Plaintiff.—It was not due diligence for plaintiff not to discover before the trial that the juror was defendant in a certain ejectment suit brought by plaintiff. Wagoner v. Jaeger, 49 W. Va. 61, 38 S. E. 528.

[i] Previous Conviction of Felony. Failure of counsel to ascertain the incompetency of a juror based on his previous conviction of a felony waives the objection. Reed v. State, 75 Neb. 509, 106 N. W. 649; Turley v. State, 74 Neb. 471, 104 N. W. 934. See also Busey v. State, 85 Md. 115, 36 Atl. 257.

civil and criminal cases in most jurisdictions,⁸ and apply in civil cases even where waiver would not be permitted in criminal cases.⁹ They apply to jurors summoned on special venire, as well as to the regular jurors,¹⁰ and in inquisitions of lunacy.¹¹ Preliminary examination by the judge prior to the jurors being called in the particular case does not excuse one from his duty to examine.¹² That the statute prohibits asking the juror as to the particular disqualification does not excuse language waived by failure to examine or challenge. Dokes v. Soards, 8 Ohio Dec. 621, 9 Wkly. L. Bul. 76.

[f] Prejudice Against Particular Defense Must Be Inquired Into.—While the accused is under no obligation to disclose the character of his defense during the examination of the jurors, if he choose to hold it in reserve he cannot complain that the jurors' attention was not directed to it, so as to disclose whether the jurors had any disqualifying opinion in regard to such defense. Keffer v. State, 12 Wyo. 49, 73 Pac. 556.

[g] The only real question at issue being the sanity of defendant, it was the duty of defendant to push the examination of the jurors so as to find out whether the jurors had any disqualifying opinion as to that defense. Keffer v. State, 12 Wyo. 49, 73 Pac. 556.

As to examination of jurors, see infra, VII, E, 4, i.

12. People v. Evans, 124 Cal. 206, 56 Pac. 1024, court stated general qualifications.

[a] Examination on First Day of Term.—Though the practice is to examine the jurors upon the first day of the term as to their citizenship, property qualifications and previous service, this examination is in no sense an examination of the juror on voir dire, and does not relieve the party from his duty to examine the juror. Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. 217. See also Territory v. Baker, 4 N. M. 236, 13 Pac. 30.

[b] Examination by Judge for Purpose of Assigning to Divisions.—The custom is for the judge of one division to question the jurors generally as to their qualifications before assigning them to different divisions for service, and counsel do not appear at such examination but trust the matter to the judge. Knight v. Kansas City, 138 Mo. App. 153, 119 S. W. 990.

[c] Though the statute requires the judge to inquire, sua sponte, whether jurors have served as talesmen within twelve months, and to excuse such as say they have unless both parties consent to their serving, the mere fact that a juror does not disclose that he has so served, when so questioned by the court, does not relieve the party from his duty to examine. Wilder v. State, 25 Ohio St. 555, but compare Watts v. Ruth, 30 Ohio St. 32, where the court says arguendo that failure to use due diligence applies to each and every element that goes to constitute a qualified juror save such as the stat-

one for lack of diligence in discovering the disqualification.¹³ The rule requiring one to use due diligence does not require more than bringing the matter to the trial court's attention on the voir dire examination.¹⁴ If the general trend of the examination ought to bring out the matter it is sufficient to take the case out of the rule as to waiver, though specific questions be not asked, covering minute phases of the subject;¹⁵ but where the situation is that one could have cleared up, by the asking of obvious questions, the whole matter of the juror's competency, he waives his right by neglecting to question further,¹⁶ and this rule is not changed by the fact that the party is entitled to ask questions for the sole purpose of determining as to peremptories.¹⁷

(V.) Failure To Discover Disqualification.¹⁸ — The mere failure to discover disqualifications of jurors is not, of itself, a failure to use due diligence, according to some authorities;¹⁹ but others hold that it is ute requires the court to ascertain sua sponte.

13. Sinsheimer v. Edward Weil Co., 61 Tex. Civ. App. 209, 129 S. W. 187, the statute forbids asking a juror whether he has been convicted or indicted for certain offenses. But this does not excuse use of diligence to discover those facts from other sources.

one's duty to discover disqualifications,²⁰ even where the juror has made false answers.²¹ Defendant and his counsel are not chargeable with notice of irregularities for which some one else is responsible;²² nor can they be charged with any lack of diligence where failure to discover the facts was through any fraud or concealment by the adverse party.²³ False or misleading statements made by the juror may excuse the failure of the party to discover the grounds for challenge, and warrant the granting of a new trial;²⁴ and by the weight of author-objections in the nature of "random imputations" against him. Brown v. State, 28 Ga. 433.

20. Carson v. Pointer, 11 Ala. App. 462, 66 So. 910.

[a] Juror To Be Witness Not Discovered Until After Acceptance.—After the jury has been accepted and sworn the state cannot, over the defendant's objection, challenge a juror who is to be a witness for the defendant though the state did not discover that fact until after the juror was sworn. Moor-ing v. State, 129 Ala. 66, 29 So. 664.

[b] That Juror, an Officer, Discovered After Jury Sworn.—The rule that whether by ignorance or from inadvertence defendant fails to challenge the juror before he is sworn, he waives his right to thereafter complain of incompetency, applies to a juror who was the officer before whom the preliminary examination was held and who disclosed that fact after he was sworn stating he had not theretofore recognized defendant. Henry v. State, 77 Ala. 75.

21. Carson v. Pointer, 11 Ala. App. 462, 66 So. 910, juror falsely stated he resided in the county.

[a] Statement on Voir Dire Subsequently Corrected.—It was proper to refuse to discharge a juror who stated on his voir dire that his unexpressed opinion was not founded on conversation with any witness, but who corrected that statement upon a physician being called to give his expert testimony, said physician being the one with whom the juror had conversed. State v. Morea, 2 Ala. 275.

[b] Statement That Juror Not Grand Juror Corrected on Reading of Indictment.—Though jurors answered in the negative when asked if they had been upon the grand jury which found the indictment, it was held too late to challenge for cause, when upon the indictment being read one of the jurors stated that his memory was refreshed and that he now recalled he was on the grand jury. Harris v. State, 177 Ala. 17, 59 So. 205.

22. Stripling v. State, 77 Ga. 108, 3 S. E. 277.

[a] Person Not Drawn Permitted To Serve.—By fault of either clerk, sheriff, or some one not connected with defense a person not drawn to serve was permitted to serve under the name of another person who had been properly drawn. Facts were brought to court's attention as soon as discovered which was not till after verdict. Neither counsel nor defendant knew either juror personally. New trial was granted. Stripling v. State, 77 Ga. 108, 3 S. E. 277.

[b] Failure To Discover Juror Was Not One Summoned.—Party was not chargeable with lack of diligence in failing to discover that the juror who responded to his name when called, and who actually served on the case, was not the juror who had been summoned, but was his father and bore the same name. McGill v. State, 34 Ohio St. 228.

Accident and Surprise.—Where the juror fails to disclose material facts in respect to his relations with the parties, in answer to questions adequate to elicit the same, the party so asking is entitled to a new trial on the ground of accident and surprise which ordinary prudence could not have guarded against. So held where juror concealed the fact, unknown to defendant and his counsel, that the juror and others had a suit against plaintiff which had been continued over the term on plaintiff's agreement to settle the same as soon as certain arrangements with a third party could be perfected. Tarpey v. Madsen, 26 Utah 294, 73 Pac. 411.

[b] Must Be a Falsehood as Distinguished From Difference of Opinion. Where the juror denied he had an "intimate acquaintance" with one party the other could not claim to have been misled since what constitutes such an acquaintance is a matter on which the minds of men differ and the party should have interrogated further and learned whether the acquaintance was such as might bias the juror. Moore v. Cass, 10 Kan. 288.

[c] Mere Hypothetical Opinion Concealed Is Not Ground.—Even if a juror had expressed an opinion and said he had not a new trial is properly refused where the opinion so expressed was purely hypothetical and not such as would have disqualified him. State v. Gile, 8 Wash. 12, 35 Pac. 417.

[d] Misstatement as to Belief Regarding Capital Punishment.—Where juror failed to make known the fact that he was opposed to capital punishment based on circumstantial evidence, and had answered generally that he was not opposed to such punishment, the challenge was not waived, but might be interposed after he was sworn. State v. Pritchard, 16 Nev. 101.

[e] Statement of Want of Knowledge Does Not Excuse Discovery That Juror Was Grand Juror.—That the juror stated he knew nothing about the case does not excuse failure to discover that he was a member of the grand jury that found the bill. He may not have been present at the finding of

he made it through inadvertence, or mistake, and with no wilful intent to deceive;²⁵ but inadvertent misstatements have been held no ground for a new trial.²⁶ The party must have examined the juror and have been deceived by his answers.²⁷

To bring the case within the rule, the questions propounded to the juror must have been sufficiently specific to bring out the facts claimed to have been concealed;²⁸ and this rule applies where general questions the bill. State v. Smith, 41 La. Ann. 688, 6 So. 546.

[f] Juror Disclosed Was Grand Juror After Trial Began.—Where by the negligence or inadvertence of the juror the fact was not discovered until the first witness was called, that the juror had been one of the grand jurors who found the indictment, and the matter was brought to the court's attention by the juror himself, it is not a case where either the court or counsel on either side are to blame. Stewart v. State, 15 Ohio St. 155.

[g] Jurors who said they had formed a "kind of opinion," or had expressed an opinion and that evidence would be needed to change it, but that they had no prejudice against accused at the time, have not misled the defendant, but have furnished foundation for the exercise of challenges either peremptory or for cause. Jenkins v. State, 22 Wyo. 34, 134 Pac. 260, 135 Pac. 749.

[h] Party Estopped To Question Juror's Answer.—It is no ground for a new trial that the juror falsely answered that he had not formed or expressed an opinion, though the party did not discover the contrary till after verdict. The holding is based in part on the theory that since the party chose to put the juror to answer on his voir dire, he was precluded from going into evidence either then or later, to disprove the answer. Temple v. Sumner, Smith (N. H.) 226.

25. State v. Taylor, 64 Mo. 358; State v. Burnside, 37 Mo. 343; Territory v. Kennedy, 3 Mont. 520.

[a] Mistake of Law as to Relationship.—Juror having denied relationship which existed a new trial was granted though it appears the juror was acting under a mistaken idea of the law. Stringfellow v. State, 42 Tex. Crim. 588, 61 S. W. 719.

26. Frank v. State, 39 Miss. 705 (so held in a capital case, but as to a matter which the court also held im-material); Reynolds v. Richmond & M. Ry. Co., 92 Va. 400, 23 S. E. 770, juror's belief erroneous but party knew facts.

[a] Incidental Acquaintanceship Forgotten.—Though a juror said he had no acquaintance with and knew nothing about defendants and it afterward appeared that one defendant, some years before, while acting in an official capacity, had served legal processes on the juror, whose affidavit on motion for new trial stated he had forgotten the incident at the time of his examination, he was competent. Carthaus v. State, 78 Wis. 560, 47 N. W. 629.

Knowledge of party as taking case out of rule, see infra, VII, E, 4, b, (VII).

27. Casat v. State, 40 Ark. 511; Meyer v. State, 19 Ark. 156.

[a] Applied to Expressed Opinion. If a party did not examine "and was not misled or deceived," in reference to a juror's having expressed his opinion, that he had done so cannot be made ground for new trial. Brown v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. Ry. Co., 52 Ark. 120, 12 S. W. 203.

[b] Failure To Discover Juror Was Grand Juror Not Excused.—Mere general questions to all the jurors as to whether they were related to, or acquainted with the defendant or the prosecuting witness and whether they had formed or expressed an opinion was not sufficient to entitle defendant to a new trial because one of the jurors did not disclose that he was a member of the grand jury. People v. Lewis, 4 Utah 42, 5 Pac. 543.

28. People v. Lewis, 4 Utah 42, 5 Pac. 543.

[a] Question Not Sufficient To Bring Out Fact.—Where juror truthfully answered that he was not related to a party he is not guilty of concealing the fact that he had in company with that party been guests, the night before, at the home of a third have been asked by the court,²⁹ though in so far as the jurors have answered the questions, it has been held that the party may rely on the truth of the answers.³⁰ The rule that parties may rely on the truth of the juror's statements does not excuse their failure to bring out facts known to them,³¹ or which they should have known,³² though it has been held that in such a case the order granting a new trial because of the juror's concealment will not be reversed.³³ The verdict person who was related to both juror and the party. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Jesse, 159 Ky. 450, 167 S. W. 407.

[b] Form of Question Too General To Bring Out Fact of Relationship. Where the plaintiff made his challenge in general form: "If any juror in this box is related to anyone of the defendants, by blood or marriage, he is requested to retire from the jury box," and no juror retired but it was later learned that one juror was remotely related, the court said that the error arose largely from the form of the challenge and plaintiff's failure to discover the relationship was his own fault. Spicer v. Fulghum, 67 N. C. 18.

Form and sufficiency of challenge generally, see infra, VII, E, 4, d.

29. Territory v. Baker, 4 N. M. 236, 13 Pac. 30, mere general question held not to excuse failure to question as to citizenship, but there was some evidence that counsel knew or suspected the facts.

[a] Jurors Examined Generally Before Trial—Question Misunderstood. Where the judge questioned the jurors generally before assigning them to different divisions, a failure of the juror to understand the question put and his consequent failure to indicate his disqualification does not excuse the party from his duty to ascertain the lack of qualification before verdict. Knight v. Kansas City, 138 Mo. App. 153, 119 S. W. 990.

30. Hudspeth v. Herston, 64 Ind. 133.

[a] Juror Through Lack of Knowledge Did Not Stand Aside.—A new trial was granted where the juror through want of knowledge had not admitted the existence of his relationship to a party, when the judge ordered all jurymen within the prohibited degree to stand aside. Jewell v. Jewell, 84 Me. 304, 24 Atl. 858, 18 L. R. A. 473.

[b] Civil and Criminal Cases Distinguished as to Grounds.—The jurors having been interrogated by the court as to their service during the preceding six months, and having either answered negatively or indicated no dissent, the court said that in a civil case the complaining party would clearly have been entitled to a new trial, but the ground itself was not a disqualification in criminal cases. Benton v. State, 52 Tex. Crim. 360, 107 S. W. 838.

31. Ia.—State v. Baker, 157 Iowa 126, 135 N. W. 1097, 138 N. W. 841. Mont. State v. Mott, 29 Mont. 292, 74 Pac. 728. Okla.—Ellis v. Territory, 13 Okla. 633, 76 Pac. 159. Tex.—Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Dickens, 54 Tex. Civ. App. 637, 118 S. W. 612. Utah.—Tarpey v. Madson, 26 Utah 294, 73 Pac. 411; *State v. [a] Employment Not Disclosed, Juror Believing It Ended.—Where plaintiff knew the facts before the case was submitted to the jury, a verdict will not be set aside though a juror failed to disclose that he was in the employ of the defendant at the time he was summoned as a juror, but not an employee regularly upon the pay roll and believed that his summons ended the employment. Reynolds v. Richmond & M. Ry. Co., 92 Va. 400, 23 S. E. 770.

32. Buck v. Hughes, 127 Ind. 46, 26 N. E. 558, juror said he had not been juror at former trial, but plaintiff was present at that trial and should have known his statement was false.

33. Lane v. Seoville, 16 Kan. 402, parties could readily have discovered that juror had served on former jury but he said he knew nothing of the case.

need not necessarily be set aside where the concealment by the juror was of an immaterial matter.³⁴

(VI.) Notice of Disqualification.—A reasonable notice of disqualification such as should lead to further inquiry is sufficient to charge one with knowledge of the facts.³⁵ Though it has been held that there is no waiver on the theory of constructive notice from the court's records alone,³⁶ the contrary has also been held;³⁷ and the fact that matters are of record has often been considered in determining that the party has not used due diligence.³⁸

(VII.) Knowledge of Disqualification.—No matter how good one's cause of challenge may be, it is clearly waived where no objection is made when the jury is impaneled, especially when he knew the facts constituting the grounds of challenge.³⁹ It must appear that neither the

[a] Matter Concealed Had No Bearing on Competency.—Where a juror admitted he had been in jail with defendant, but his answers indicated that he had been a casual visitor when in fact he had been confined in the jail, the material point was as to information he received and as to this the parties disagreed, and the cause of the juror's presence in the jail had no possible bearing on his competency as a juror. State v. Baker, 157 Iowa 126, 135 N. W. 1097, 138 N. W. 841.

[b] No Injury or Improper Motive Appearing.—Though a juror has been examined on voir dire and has qualified himself by untrue answers as to his age and property, that will not be sufficient to grant a new trial in the absence of any showing of injury to the party complaining, or that the juror acted from improper motives. Brewer v. Jacobs, 22 Fed. 217.

37. Mt. Desert v. Cranberry Isles, 46 Me. 411, that juryman was from a town which by change in boundary lines had become outside the county, must be presumed to have been known and so waived. The venires are a matter of public record, open to inspection and the parties were constructively notified.

[a] Mere Record Distinguished From

Notice or Negligence.—If objection was a matter of record and any negligence was chargeable to the party in not ascertaining the matter from the record, it would constitute a waiver. But there was no waiver on the theory of constructive notice alone. So it was held that there was no waiver although the records disclosed that same juror had served on former trial of same case, but parties and counsel had no actual notice thereof. Williams v. McGrade, 18 Minn. 82.

[b] Record of Service on Lower Court Jury.—One has not used the means in his power to prevent the service on the jury of one who served in the same capacity in a lower court trial of the same case. The record showed the fact and there was no evidence showing that the party did not have access to the record. Hayward v. Calhoun, 2 Ohio St. 164.

[d] Failure To Compare Lists on Court's Suggestion.—One waives objection that juror was one of grand jury who brought in indictment where he and his counsel fail to compare the lists, especially since the court called attention to the advisability of such an examination. Sapp v. State, 116 Ga. 182, 43 S. E. 410.

[a] Grounds Waived by Failure To Challenge When Knowing of Same.

(1) That juror is non compos mentis (Oliver v. Herron, 106 Ala. 639, 17 So. 387), (2) or is an alien (S. C.—State v. Quarrel, 2 Bay 150, 1 Am. Dec. 637. Vt.—Richards v. Moore, 60 Vt. 449, 15 Atl. 119; Hammond v. Noble, 57 Vt.

Burke, 107 Iowa 659, 78 N. W. 677), (4) or not on assessment roll (People v. Sanford, 43 Cal. 29), (5) or is over age (State v. Clark, 121 Mo. 500, 26 S. W. 562; Pitt v. Bishop, 53 Mo. App. 600; Sutton v. Petty, 5 N. J. L. 504), (6) or that juror had been grand juror. Ind.—Rice v. State, 16 Ind. 298; Barlow v. State, 2 Blackf. 114. Ky. O'Brien v. Com., 9 Bush 333, 15 Am. Rep. 715. La.—State v. Jackson, 37 La. Ann. 897. S. C.—State v. O'Driscoll, 2 Bay 153. (7) So also relationship if known is waived (Ga.—Hadden v. Thompson, 118 Ga. 207, 44 S. E. 1001; Futch v. Quinn-Marshall Co., 14 Ga. App. 692, 82 S. E. 55. Ind.—Tegarden v. Phillips, 14 Ind. App. 27, 42 N. E. 549. N. C.—Baxter v. Wilson, 95 N. C. 137), (8) as is objection that jurors had prejudged case (State v. Howard, 118 Mo. 127, 24 S. W. 41); (9) that juror known to be kin to both prosecutor and defendant waived where no objection until after conviction. Miller v. State, 139 Ga. 716, 78 S. E. 181.

[b] Presumption That Party Knows His Own Relations.—Where objection was based upon relationship to the party making the objection, the court said the relationship "in its tendency, was favorable to the party now taking exceptions to the juror, and adverse to his antagonist." Without deciding whether that was sufficient ground the court refused to reverse because it "was not unreasonable to presume that one knows his own relations," and there was no showing the party did not know of the relationship before verdict. Tilton v. Kimball, 52 Me. 500.

[c] Where the cause of hostility, if it existed, must have been known to the prisoner, he cannot after verdict complain merely on the ground that he did not know the juror had expressed hostility against him. King v. Makaweo, 5 Hawaii 64.

[d] Court's Mistake as to Status of Juror.—Failure to call court's attention to fact that juror was summoned as a bystander, the court ruling that the particular ground alleged did not party nor his counsel had knowledge of the disqualification.⁴⁰ At most the question of knowledge goes to the merits of an application for a new trial, however.⁴¹ Where a disqualification was not known until after verdict, a new trial may be granted.⁴² Where there is no doubt apply to jurymen summoned on regular panel, is a waiver. Brooke v. People, 23 Colo. 375, 48 Pac. 502.

[a] Known to Real Party in Interest but Not to Counsel or Nominal Party.—It was not sufficient to show that neither the nominal party nor his counsel knew. It must be shown that the real party in interest did not know. Tegarden v. Phillips, 14 Ind. App. 27, 42 N. E. 549.

[b] Where one counsel did not know of the disqualification, but it did not appear that his client or associate counsel did not have knowledge thereof, the verdict will not be set aside. Rollins v. Ames, 2 N. H. 349, 9 Am. Dec. 79.

[c] The Notice Need Not Be Personal to the Party.—It must appear that neither he nor his attorney knew of the disqualifying fact. Brown v. Reed, 81 Me. 158, 16 Atl. 504; Minot v. Bowdoin, 75 Me. 205; State v. Bowden, 71 Me. 89; Tilton v. Kimball, 52 Me. 500; Jameson v. Androscoggin R. R. Co., 52 Me. 412.

[d] Waived Where Known to Agent and Attorney.—There was clearly a waiver where the complaining party's agent who was in attendance at the trial had been informed of a disqualifying relationship, and at least one of his counsel also knew of it. McLellan v. Crofton, 6 Me. 307.

[e] Assuming that friendship for deceased would make one incompetent in a murder trial it must appear by the affidavits that neither counsel nor defendant were cognizant of that friendship at the time the juror was examined. State v. Nocton, 121 Mo. 537, 26 S. W. 551.

[f] Expression of opinion by juror (1) must be shown not to have been known or is waived. State v. Phillips, 117 Mo. 389, 22 S. W. 1079. (2) A juror having stated frankly that he had formed an unqualified opinion as to the guilt or innocence of accused, a failure to challenge waives the right to object. State v. Hartley, 22 Nev. 342, 40 Pac. 372, 28 L. R. A. 33.

[a] Applied to Constitutional Qualifications.—Prior to the constitution of 1895 it had long been the rule that what was cause for challenge to a juror could not after verdict be made ground for a new trial. But under that constitution certain qualifications are prescribed for jurors and if neither the person complaining nor his counsel had knowledge that the juror lacked such qualifications a new trial may be granted. Mew v. Charleston, etc. Ry. Co., 55 S. C. 90, 32 S. E. 828, following Garrett v. Weinberg, 54 S. C. 127, 31 S. E. 341, 34 S. E. 70.

[b] A statute providing that "no irregularity in any writ of venire facias, or in the drawing, summoning, returning or empanelling of jurors shall be sufficient to set aside the verdict, unless the party making the objection was injured by the irregularity, or un- of the disqualification, and such disqualification has not been waived by notice or knowledge of the facts, the verdict is considered illegal and void and must be set aside and a new trial granted.⁴³ But dis-less the objection was made before the returning of the verdict," does not apply where the disqualification of a juror, unknown to the party at the time of trial, is sought to be taken advantage of. Such is not an objection to the writ of venire nor to the drawing, return, summoning or impaneling of the jurors. Garrett v. Weinberg, 54 S. C. 127, 31 S. E. 341, 34 S. E. 70.

[c] Failure To Discover Former Service of Juror Excused.—No waiver where juror was subject to challenge for implied bias because he had served as a juror on a former trial of the same cause. It appeared that the two trials occurred nearly three years apart, that only one of same counsel was concerned in both trials and that neither that counsel nor the injured party had any personal acquaintance with the juror. Williams v. McGrade, 18 Minn. 82.

[d] Though a juror was not an elector and was retained on the panel without the knowledge of a party or his counsel and they have used due diligence to discover the disqualification, the verdict will be set aside. Eastman v. Wight, 4 Ohio St. 156.

[e] Where talesmen were deputy sheriffs and party had no notice or knowledge thereof, there is no waiver. Gaff v. State, 155 Ind. 277, 58 N. E. 74, 80 Am. St. Rep. 235.

43. Ga.—Moore v. Farmers Mut. Ins. Assn., 107 Ga. 199, 33 S. E. 65; Temples v. Central of Georgia R. Co., 15 Ga. App. 115, 82 S. E. 777 (quoting with approval Georgia R. Co. v. Cole, 73 Ga. 713); Smith v. State, 2 Ga. App. 574, 59 S. E. 311. See also Jordan v. State, 119 Ga. 443, 46 S. E. 679; Glover v. Woolsey & Co., Dudley 85 Me.—Lane v. Goodwin, 47 Me. 593; Hardy v. Sprowle, 32 Me. 310. Nev. State v. Pritchard, 16 Nev. 101. Vt. Richards v. Moore, 60 Vt. 449, 15 Atl. 119; Hammond v. Noble, 57 Vt. 193; Quinn v. Halbert, 52 Vt. 353; Briggs v. Georgia, 15 Vt. 61.

[a] Applies to All Persons Who Cannot Legally Serve.—(1) This is the rule as to all persons who cannot legally serve as jurymen, as aliens, or minors; and it is not discretionary with the judge to refuse the new trial, as in ordinary cases, notwithstanding the fact that neither party knew of the disqualification until after the verdict. Mann v. Fairlee, 44 Vt. 672. (2) The theory is that the party is entitled to a trial by a legal jury; that a jury with a person thereon who cannot be a legal jurymen is not a legal jury. One who knew of this disqualification would, however, be deemed to have waived it. Quinn v. Halbert, 52 Vt. 353.

[b] Reason for Rule.—Applied to Relationship.—This rests upon the general rule that waiver presupposes the party to be affected has knowledge of his rights and does not wish to enforce them. So he could not waive the statutory disqualification that juror was within the forbidden degree of consanguinity where he did not know of it until after trial. The court had told the jurymen that any within the prohibited degree must stand aside, but the juror was not himself aware of the relationship. Jewell v. Jewell, 84 Me. 304, 24 Atl. 858, 18 L. R. A. 473, distinguishing the case from those in other jurisdictions where there is no statute which "rigidly prescribes" the limits of disqualification.

[c] Even where the evidence in behalf of the state warranted a verdict of guilty it must be set aside, where prosecutor and juror were third cousins by marriage and so within the prohibited ninth degree, there being no counter showing to defendant's affidavit of the relationship and of the want of knowledge thereof on the part of himself and counsel, until after verdict. Hubbard v. State, 5 Ga. App. 599, 63 S. E. 588.

[d] Does Not Apply When Juror Divested of Freehold.—If the juror was a freeholder when summoned, the fact that he had divested himself of his freehold before the trial must be raised by challenge. Orcutt v. Carpenter, 1 Tyler (Vt.) 250, 4 Am. Dec. 722.

[e] For Irregularity in Summoning Must Be Some Fraud or Collusion.—If qualification of a juror, though unknown, is not a statutory ground for a new trial in some jurisdictions;⁴⁴ and is not usually ground for setting aside the verdict unless the jury was clearly partial.⁴⁵ By statute, in some jurisdictions, on the other hand, the court may, in its discretion, grant a new trial, though the disqualification was known before the verdict.⁴⁶

c. Time To Challenge.⁴⁷ — (I.) In General. — The constitutional provision guaranteeing an impartial jury is not violated by a statute a person legally competent to serve, be irregularly summoned, the objection to him on that account is waived by his acceptance and a new trial will not be granted in the absence of some showing of fraud or collusion on the part of the officer summoning or some one. Mann v. Fairlee, 44 Vt. 672.

44. People v. Boren, 139 Cal. 210, 72 Pac. 899, the statute does not name it as one of the grounds for new trial. See Posey v. State, 86 Miss. 141, 38 So. 324; Fulcher v. State, 82 Miss. 630, 35 So. 170.

45. Sansouwer v. Glenlyon Dye Works, 28 R. I. 539, 68 Atl. 545; Sprague v. Brown, 21 R. I. 329, 43 Atl. 636; Fiske v. Paine, 18 R. I. 632, 28 Atl. 1026, 29 Atl. 498; Ryan v. Riverside, etc. Mills, 15 R. I. 436, 8 Atl. 246; State v. Congdon, 14 R. I. 458.

[a] After failure to examine on court's suggestion it must appear that an injustice has been done the party before a new trial will be granted. Simmons v. McConnell's Admr., 86 Va. 494, 10 S. E. 838.

[b] Failure To Have Juror Examined Under the Statute. — After verdict if a party has failed to avail himself of the privilege of having the juror examined, it becomes a question for the court in its discretion to grant a new trial according to the merits. To warrant reversal for refusing it must appear that the party was prejudiced. Hodges v. Com., 89 Va. 265, 15 S. E. 513.

[c] Principal Cause of Challenge Unknown. — A new trial will not be granted for matter that is principal cause of challenge, existing before the juror was sworn and unknown to the prisoner until after verdict unless it appears from the whole case that the prisoner suffered injustice because the juror served. State v. Harrison, 36 W. Va. 729, 15 S. E. 982; Beck v. Thom- son, 31 W. Va. 459, 7 S. E. 447, 13 Am. St. Rep. 870; State v. Howes, 26 W. Va. 110; State v. Greer, 22 W. Va. 800; State v. Williams, 14 W. Va. 851.

[d] Denial by Juror Does Not Change Rule. — The rule applies even where the juror was asked as to the disqualifying fact and denied its existence. State v. McDonald, 9 W. Va. 456.

[e] Injustice Must Appear From Evidence on Motion. — Great deference is paid to the decision of the trial court, and a new trial will not be granted though the matter complained of as the ground for challenge was not known to the defendant until after verdict unless it appears from the evidence submitted on the motion for a new trial that the prisoner has suffered an injustice. State v. Hobbs, 37 W. Va. 812, 17 S. E. 380. See also State v. Greer, 22 W. Va. 800.

[f] Where a juror not competent and not drawn, but summoned by mistake, has attended, was accepted and served, it is no ground for a new trial, under the statute, unless that occurs which impugns the fairness of the trial. Tolbert v. State, 71 Miss. 179, 14 So. 462, 42 Am. St. Rep. 454.

46. See generally the statutes, and Brown v. Reed, 81 Me. 158, 16 Atl. 504. See also the title "New Trial."

[a] The party is not entitled to a new trial as a matter of right, but may have it ordered as a matter of discretion. Minot v. Bowdoin, 75 Me. 205.

fixing a reasonable time within which challenges for cause must be made.⁴⁸

(II.) Before Acceptance. — Challenges to individual jurors for cause should be interposed before the acceptance of the jury as a whole.⁴⁹ But such challenges may be permitted after the juror has once been passed for cause, and tendered to the other side,⁵⁰ or to the court,⁵¹ for examination or otherwise, provided it is done before the jury is sworn.⁵² The right to so challenge may be exercised either before or

[a] Statute Requiring That Certain Objections Be Before Jury Sworn. The provision of a statute that no exception shall be taken to a juror on account of citizenship, age, or any other legal disability shall be allowed after he is sworn is not unconstitutional as depriving one of his right to a trial by jury. Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 16 Sup. Ct. 304, 40 L. ed. 432.

49. Waiver of challenge by acceptance of jury, see supra, VII, E, 4, b, (II).

[a] Challenges allowed after acceptance of the jury, must be for some cause not discoverable on the examination, however. Baker v. State, 3 Tex. App. 525, following Horbach v. State, 43 Tex. 242, as being the latest decision of the supreme court and so overruling apparent inconsistencies in earlier cases, citing Cooley v. State, 38 Tex. 636; Hubotter v. State, 32 Tex. 479; Hanks v. State, 21 Tex. 526. Examination of jurors, see infra, VII, E, 4, i.

[a] The discretion of the court in permitting challenge after the juror has once been passed for cause, is properly governed to some extent by the nature of the objection. Where a more technical than substantial objection is urged the reason for relaxing the customary order is not so cogent as when the objection goes directly to the bias or prejudice of the juror. Coil v. State, 62 Neb. 15, 86 N. W. 925.

[b] Ground for Challenge First Appearing on Opposite Party's Examination.—Though the rule is that the defendant challenges before passing to state, failure to challenge before passing juror to state's attorney for examination is not a waiver where defendant's ground for challenge first appeared on the voir dire examination by the state's attorney. Hankins v. State, 118 Ark. 419, 176 S. W. 691.

[c] Expression of Opinion Disclosed on Opposite Party's Examination. Court properly sustained the state's challenge to a juror who had been passed by the state but upon his examination by the prisoner disclosed that he had formed and expressed the opinion that the prisoner was not guilty. State v. Jones, 80 N. C. 415.

[d] Proper to set aside juror whose alienage is discovered by solicitor general after he is put upon prisoner. Johnson v. State, 58 Ga. 491.

52. See infra, VII, E, 4, c, (III).

[a] Where (1) a disqualification was discovered after the juror had been passed by both sides, but before the jury was impaneled, it was clearly within the court's discretion to permit him to be challenged. State v. Vestal, 82 N. C. 563. (2) Thus, where the juror by his answers has misled the court and counsel for both sides and has been accepted by both sides, but before the impaneling of the jury is completed he makes known to the court that he had misunderstood a question and is in fact disqualified, he is properly excused on challenge over the other party's objection. Black v. State, 46 Tex. Crim. 590, 81 S. W. 302.

[b] Proper To Permit Challenge and Investigate.—Before the jury had been sworn in chief but after they had been accepted by both sides and sent to their room, the solicitor general announced to the court that it had just after a party has exercised his statutory right of striking names peremptorily from the panel.⁵³

(III.) Before Being Sworn.—The general rule is that the challenge for cause must be made before the juror is sworn.⁵⁴ The proper time come to the prosecution's notice that a certain juror had publicly stated in effect that if he got on the jury he would turn defendant loose. Thereupon the court sat as trier and after introduction of evidence by the state and a statement by the juror on the subject he was found competent, served on the jury and a verdict of guilty was rendered. It was held that the allowance of the investigation was not error. Holton v. State, 137 Ga. 86, 72 S. E. 949.

[c] Applied to Disqualification by Belief as to Capital Punishment.—After juror has been passed and accepted but before he is sworn, the court may in its discretion permit the state to challenge for cause a juror who volunteers the information that he is not qualified because of his views on capital punishment. State v. Vann, 162 N. C. 534, 77 S. E. 295.

[d] On Conflict as to His Having Expressed Opinion.—The court properly excused a juror on the state's motion and where the defendant did not object, after he had been accepted but before the jury was sworn, where it appeared that the juror may have expressed a disqualifying opinion though the juror said he had no recollection of having done so but that the affiants were respectable and truthful men and he would not say positively that he had not expressed himself to them as stated in their affidavits. Taylor v. State, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 708.

[e] Discovery of Nonresidence.—After twelve men had been examined, passed by both sides and had taken their seats but before they were sworn, the prosecuting attorney told the court he had learned it was probable two of the jurors lived outside the county, whereupon the court questioned them, found they were nonresidents and over defendant's objection, sustained the state's challenge for cause. In this there was no error as at that stage of the proceedings either party had the legal right to have the jurors excluded. Monson v. State, 45 Tex. Crim. 426, 76 S. W. 570.

[f] In Civil Case on Juror's Admitting Opinion After Acceptance.—In a civil case there is no abuse of discretion in excusing a juror on challenge after his acceptance by both sides, where it appears by his voluntary statement that he had formed an opinion. Grady v. Early, 18 Cal. 108.

53. Edelen v. Gough, 8 Gill (Md.) 87.

[a] Rule Where Doubtful Whether Challenge to Poll or Array.—Though it is not quite clear whether an objection to challenge is between the appearance and the swearing of the juror.⁵⁵ and before the jury is impaneled,⁵⁶ and the trial entered upon.⁵⁷ The common-law practice is to challenge the jurors as they "come to the book to be sworn."⁵⁸ But the court may permit a juror to be challenged after he has been sworn, but before the actual trial of the case has been entered upon.⁵⁹ It may be exercised while the juror is taking the oath.⁶⁰

Statutes sometimes provide that the challenge must be made before the jury is sworn;⁶¹ but the more usual provision is that it should was to jurymen who served or to veniremen as containing veniremen not qualified the objection is too late after the jury is sworn to try the case. Thompson v. Com., 8 Gratt. (49 Va.) 637.

[b] Rule Not Affected by Fact That Opposite Party's Peremptories Exhausted.—It was proper to exclude on plaintiff's motion, even after defendant's peremptories were exhausted, a juror whom plaintiff informed the court he wished to use as a witness though he had not been subpoenaed. The jury had not been sworn but juror had been accepted. Mundine v. Pauls, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 46, 66 S. W. 254.

[c] There is no distinction (1) between regular jurors and talesmen as to the operation of the rule that unless an objection be made before the juror is sworn it is cured by the verdict (State v. Bunker, 14 La. Ann. 461); (2) but the rule does not apply to juries appointed ex parte as on inquest of damages. Hunter v. Matthews, 12 Leigh (39 Va.) 228. [a] Construction of Missouri Statute.—Rev. St., 1909, §7260, providing (1) that "No exceptions to a juror on account of his citizenship, nonresidence, state or age or other legal disability shall be allowed after the jury is sworn," has uniformly been construed as denying the right of a party in a civil or criminal cause to object to a juror after the jury is sworn for

be made when the juror appears and before he is sworn.⁶² Some statutes, however, provide that the court may permit the challenge after the juror is sworn,⁶³ while others permit the court to allow the challenge at any time before the jury is completed.⁶⁴ Under these statutes the rule is that the challenge will be permitted, provided the party did not know the ground of challenge before the juror was sworn.⁶⁵ Other statutes permit the challenge at any time before any evidence is submitted,⁶⁶ while still others provide that the challenge may be made after the juror is sworn and before evidence submitted, if the ground was not sooner discovered.⁶⁷

Where statute permits raising the question of competency after jury sworn, but before evidence submitted, the party should act at once upon the discovery of the facts and the means of proof.⁶⁸ These any of the causes mentioned in said section. State v. Wilson, 230 Mo. 647, 132 S. W. 238. (2) The phrase "or other legal disability," is broad enough to include the objection that the juror had been convicted of a felony and had not been pardoned. State v. Wilson, 230 Mo. 647, 132 S. W. 238. (3) Statute applies where objection is that juror cannot read or write English. Knight v. Kansas City, 138 Mo. App. 153, 119 S. W. 990; Orr v. Bradley, 126 Mo. App. 146, 103 S. W. 1149. (6) The statutes applying specifically to jurors in certain counties and cities are not in conflict with this section. It is a general rule applicable to all juries. Orr v. Bradley, 126 Mo. App. 146, 103 S. W. 1149.

[a] Statute Has Not Changed Rule. The rule requiring prompt action on statutes leave the matter within the discretion of the court,⁶⁹ and there can be no reversal unless the discretion was abused.⁷⁰ If the matter is promptly brought to the court's attention, and relief is denied, reversal follows.⁷¹

The court may exercise its power to exclude a juror subsequently found to be disqualified, over the objection of counsel for both sides,⁷² and the proper practice is to set aside the incompetent juror though both sides have accepted him.⁷³ It has always been permissible to allow a challenge for cause to be interposed, where the cause arose after the juror was sworn.⁷⁴ discovery of disqualifications during progress of the trial is not changed by a provision of the statute permitting challenge for good cause shown after juror sworn, but not after testimony has been partially heard. This provision either does not apply to disqualifications subsequently discovered, or takes away the right to challenge altogether. But in either view the defendant waives the objection by going on with the trial. Queenan v. Oklahoma, 190 U. S. 548, 23 Sup. Ct. 762, 47 L. ed. 1175, affirming 11 Okla. 261, 71 Pac. 218.

[a] Juror a Grand Juror Learned Before Witnesses Called.—Where prisoner learned after juror was sworn but before witnesses were called that the juror had been one of the grand jury, and immediately brought the matter to the court's attention, his challenge should have been allowed. Dilworth v. Com., 12 Gratt. (53 Va.) 689, 65 Am. Dec. 264.

[b] Juror Disclosed Was Grand Juror on Opening Statement.—Juror announced that he then for the first time recalled that he had been on the former jury who tried the case. Objection to his serving was at once made, but the court refused to discharge him. Taylor v. Combs, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 1828, 50 S. W. 64.

[c] False Statements Disclosed During Progress of Trial.—Counsel for defendant on learning for the first time during the progress of the trial that juror had made false answers as to his previous expression of opinion, adopted the correct practice by bringing the matter at once to the court's attention and asking for discharge of jury and the impaneling of a new jury. Hughes v. State (Tex. Crim.), 60 S. W. 562.

[d] Juror Unauthorized To Sit. One having without examination, or challenge, unauthorizedly taken his seat in the jury box, and having been sworn before the mistake was discovered, it was reversible error to compel defendant to go to trial with the jury simply because it had been sworn. Timely objection was made before any evidence had been introduced. State v. Sternberg, 59 Mo. 410.

[a] Error To Refuse Where Juror Expressed Opinion After Being Sworn. It was held reversible error not to have granted a new trial where the juror after opening statement made by counsel, and during a recess before the taking of testimony, publicly gave utterance to brutal and profane language against defendant which "stamped him as being utterly unfit to pass upon the guilt or innocence of the party," and the matter was at once brought to the trial court's attention. State v. Wheeler, 108 Mo. 658, 18 S. W. 924.

Rep. 606; State v. McDonald, 9 W. Va. 456.

[a] No Distinction Between Principal Challenge or to Favor.—The better rule is that there is no distinction between challenge to the favor and principal challenge. The latter is based on a presumption of bias. If challenged the juror is excluded. But after verdict the court can see whether the bias did in fact affect the juror's decision. Bristow v. Com., 15 Gratt. (56 Va.) 634. See also Dilworth v. Com., 12 Gratt. (53 Va.) 689, 65 Am. Dec. 264; Com. v. Jones, 1 Leigh (28 Va.) 598.

[c] Juror Over Age.—Objection that juror is over age is propter defectum and must be made before verdict. Manning v. State, 11 Ga. App. 766, 76 S. E. 70, which states that those Georgia decisions which are to the contrary have not been followed. But see Staten v. State, 141 Ga. 82, 80 S. [d] Claim of Damages Against Defendant.—A juror was not so disqualified that a new trial should be granted merely because he had a claim for damages against defendant. There the first time on appeal.⁷⁷ Steps to remedy the error where a juror has been accepted must be taken at once, without waiting to see if a favorable verdict will be obtained,⁷⁸ and this rule applies whether the discovery of disqualification be made after the juror is sworn,⁷⁹ but was nothing to show that the claim was not honest, nor that the juror was in any way influenced thereby to disregard his oath. Southern Ry. Co. v. Oliver, 102 Va. 710, 47 S. E. 862.

[e] Assuming that the conviction of a felony, even if followed by a pardon, would be a disqualification, the objection comes too late after verdict. Puryear v. Com., 83 Va. 51, 1 S. E. 512.

[f] That a juror was not regularly summoned comes too late after verdict. He was in court room when his name was drawn and called, and was accepted and sworn. State v. Anderson, 26 S. C. 599, 2 S. E. 699.

[g] Where a venire was irregularly issued, and the jury was made up in part from persons who answered the summons, if no challenge or objection was made to any juror, no complaint can be made after verdict. Greer v. Wilson, 38 W. Va. 100, 18 S. E. 380.

[h] That the juror's name was not on the venire comes too late after verdict. It is at most a mere irregularity in summoning, and the verdict will not be disturbed for such. Thrall v. Smiley, 9 Cal. 529.

Irregularities in drawing and summoning waived by failure to challenge the array, see supra, VII, E, 3, a.

79. Douthitt v. State, 144 Ind. 397, 42 N. E. 907, mental incapacity discovered.

[a] Accepted Juror Did Not Respond to Call.—That a juror accepted by both defendant and the state did not respond to the call of his name but another sat in his place cannot be raised after verdict where defendant did not object at once on discovery of the mistake, and insist on the correct juror sitting. Granger v. State (Tex. Crim.), 31 S. W. 671.

[b] Disqualification Suggested by State—Defendant Objected to Substitution.—Where counsel for state suggested to the court the want of qualification as a freeholder or householder, after the jury had been sworn but before any evidence had been heard by them, and moved that another be substituted, but defendant's counsel objected, he cannot raise the question after verdict. Jarnagin v. State, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 529.

[c] One Party Consenting to Withdraw, the Party Objecting Waives. Juror having disclosed that he was one of the grand jury and the prosecution having consented that he be withdrawn, but defendant declining, the objection is waived. Reg. v. Sullivan, 8 A. & E. 831, 8 L. J. M. C. 3, 1 P. & D. 96, 1 W. W. & H. 610, 35 E. C. L. 865, 112 Eng. Reprint 1053.

[d] Offer To Withdraw, Party Declining Waives.—Defendant clearly waives his right to object where after the juror was sworn plaintiff discovered the juror's incompetency, immediately communicated it to the court and offered to withdraw the juror, which offer the defendant declined. Livingston v. Heerman, 9 Mart. O. S. (La.) 656.

[e] Juror Disclosed Facts After Opening Statement.—Where after the jury had been sworn and the prosecuting attorney had made his opening statement, a juror addressing the court stated that he had expressed an opinion on the question of punishment, to which the court replied that he did not care to hear him further but would instruct the jury as to the punishment at the proper time; counsel should have examined him further and have before evidence is received, or during the progress of the trial;⁸⁰ and even where facts are not learned until after the retirement of challenged him at the time he made the statement, and should not have permitted the trial to proceed and interpose a challenge after several witnesses had testified. State v. Snyder, 182 Mo. 462, 82 S. W. 12.

80. State v. Pray, 126 Iowa 249, 99 N. W. 1065 (relationship to prosecuting witness discovered); Williams v. True, 1 Cinc. Super. Ct. (Ohio) 321.

[a] Discovered When Trial in Progress Two Hours.—That juror was of unsound mind was discovered by counsel when trial had been in progress less than two hours. Counsel should have brought the matter to the court's attention and have elected either to go on with eleven jurors or to have a new jury impaneled. Pfeiffer v. City of Dubuque (Iowa), 94 N. W. 492.

[b] Where party was not present during the impaneling of the jury but was in the court room during the trial, he should at once have made objection to the presence on the jury of one well known to him and believed by him to be prejudiced and hostile. Bickel v. Krauss, 100 Ky. 728, 39 S. W. 414.

[c] Disqualification Disclosed by Counsel's Questions.—Where the same counsel appeared for person being examined in an inquisition of lunacy, and he failed to object when the jury was sworn but by his questions thereafter disclosed the fact that one juror had served on a former inquisition, he should not have permitted the trial to continue. In re Lindsley, 46 N. J. Eq. 358, 19 Atl. 726.

[d] District Attorney Disclosed Disqualification.—Where during the progress of the trial, the district attorney stated to the court that he had just discovered the disqualification of a juror, it was defendant's duty to at once move to excuse the juror. His counsel could not remain silent and then take advantage of the disqualification on appeal. McNish v. State, 47 Fla. 69, 36 So. 176.

[e] The court having announced that since the last adjournment it had been informed that one of the jurors named had been convicted of a felony which disqualified him, and having asked counsel what they desired to do, to which counsel replied they had nothing to say, the objection is waived. Queenan v. Oklahoma, 190 U. S. 548, 23 Sup. Ct. 762, 47 L. ed. 1175, affirming 11 Okla. 261, 71 Pac. 218.

[f] Juror having disclosed his incompetency when trial begun and first witness examined, the party must either challenge or go on with the jury as constituted. Stewart v. State, 15 Ohio St. 155.

[g] Counsel for defendant was informed after evidence had all been put in that the juror was related to defendant. He did not lay the matter before the court or counsel for plaintiff. Objection was deemed waived though counsel placed little credence in the information. Brown v. Reed, 81 Me. 158, 16 Atl. 504.

[h] A juror having informed a party before the case was submitted to the jury, that he had formed and expressed an opinion, the party should have brought the matter at once to the court's attention. Tomer v. Densmore, 8 Neb. 384, 1 N. W. 315.

[i] Where counsel during the progress of the trial "received a vague impression" that a juror was over age, he should have brought the matter at once to the trial court's attention, or the disqualification is deemed waived. United States v. Folsom, 7 N. M. 532, 38 Pac. 70.

[j] Identity of Juror Recognized During Progress of Trial.—Defendant was deemed to have waived his objection to a juror based on the fact that they had been at one time confined in the same jail and defendant had conversed with the juror about his case. Defendant claimed not to have recognized the juror on his examination, but he did discover his identity during the progress of the trial. State v. Baker, 157 Iowa 126, 135 N. W. 1097, 138 N. W. 841.

[k] Admissions by Juror When Testifying as Witness.—Discovery that defendant had talked to jurors about his case was discovered by his admissions when on the stand testifying in his own behalf. The irregularity was waived by plaintiff's going on with the case. Hussey v. Allen, 59 Me. 269.

[l] Party's counsel learning of communications between other party and the jury but failing to object the ir-

the jury, parties should move at once for appropriate relief without taking chances on a favorable verdict.⁸¹

d. Form and Sufficiency of Challenge.—(I.) *Necessity for Formal Challenge.*⁸²—Any legal or valid objection to a juror should be stated openly.⁸³ There should be a formal challenge,⁸⁴ and not a mere general objection to the court's action,⁸⁵ or a mere statement of possible cause for challenge not directed against a particular juror,⁸⁶ or a regularity is waived. Fessenden v. Sager, 53 Me. 531.

[m] Must Call Legal Disqualification to Other Party's Attention.—Even as to a legal disqualification which would ordinarily be ground for a new trial, though no challenge was interposed, if the party learns of the disqualification while the trial is in progress he waives his right unless he calls it to the attention of the court and the other party. Quinn v. Halbert, 52 Vt. 353.

[n] Proper Practice Is To Ask for Discharge—Not for Continuance.—Relationship was discovered during second day of trial. Counsel asked for a continuance, but proper practice is to ask for discharge of the jury. Wells-Stone Merc. Co. v. Bowman, 59 Minn. 364, 61 N. W. 135.

[o] Alienage Discovered; Trial Proceeded After Juror Took Out Papers.—Juror was an alien, of which fact both sides were ignorant until the trial had proceeded for a day, when the incompetent took out his second papers and the trial proceeded without objection. The verdict will not be set aside. Schwantes v. State, 127 Wis. 160, 106 N. W. 237.

81. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Osgood, 36 Ind. App. 34, 73 N. E. 287.

82. Failure to challenge as waiving objection, see supra, VII, E, 4, b, (III).

83. Butler v. Kelsey, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 177, it was ground for setting aside an inquisition that one party called the sheriff aside, and had him excuse a juror.

84. State v. Creasman, 32 N. C. 395; State v. Benton, 19 N. C. 196.

[a] In misdemeanor cases defendant should challenge. Crew v. State, 113 Ga. 645, 38 S. E. 941; Schnell v. State, 92 Ga. 459, 17 S. E. 966.

[b] Otherwise There Is No Issue To Be Tried or Reviewed.—If a juror be not challenged for either actual or imputed bias either before or after his voir dire examination, no issue is made to which his testimony is directed and no ruling on the admission or rejection of testimony or questions can be assigned for error. People v. Hamilton, 62 Cal. 377.

85. State v. Cooper, 74 W. Va. 472, 82 S. E. 358.

[a] Objection to Summons Is Not Challenge to Juror Summoned.—That a bystander was summoned by one who was not qualified so to do, is no ground for complaint where no challenge was interposed to the juror, though an objection was made to the court's order under which the summons was made. Meeker v. Gardella, 1 Wash. 139, 23 Pac. 837.

86. Crew v. State, 113 Ga. 645, 38 S. E. 941 (counsel stated, in effect, that he had heard one of the jurors, not named, had expressed a disqualifying opinion); State v. Pell, 140 Iowa 655, 119 N. W. 154.

[a] Statement That Two Jurors Were Disqualified.—When panel was presented defendant's counsel stated that two of the jurors were disqualified, stating the reason. The court thereupon said: "If you challenge the two jurors for cause, I will sustain the challenge," to which defendant said nothing but then and there excepted. The supreme court held that since defendant had not followed the proper and orderly way he was not entitled to complain. West v. State, 80 Miss. 710, 32 So. 298.

[b] That there has been a motion in the nature of a challenge to the array based upon a ground which would have been valid only as a challenge to the poll addressed to each juror individually does not excuse making such a challenge. It is not the duty of the trial court to make objections for defendant and his counsel, which they do not see fit to make for themselves. State v. Crane, 202 Mo. 51, 100 S. W. 422.

[c] Where the only challenge was general request to excuse or discharge jurors without directing attention to any particular ground.⁸⁷ But a motion or request to the court that a particular juror may be put to answer is a challenge though not formally designated as such.⁸⁸

(II.) Nature and Requisites Generally.—The challenge is in the nature of a pleading.⁸⁹ It need not be in the exact statutory language,⁹⁰ but it must be so stated that issue can be joined thereon,⁹¹ and be so propounded that it may be entered of record;⁹² it should always be couched in polite and respectful language.⁹³

(III.) Oral or Written.—All challenges to the polls, whether principal or to the favor, may be oral,⁹⁴ and are then entered on the minutes of the court,⁹⁵ though the latter rule applies whether the challenge be written or oral.⁹⁶

(IV.) Must Be Distinct and Specific.—The challenge must be distinctly and specifically made⁹⁷ so that the court may see what is the legal char-

in form one to the array based upon the alleged ground that jurors had not been chosen for the week as the statute requires, but no such ground exists for challenge to the array, the challenge does not amount to an individual challenge to each juror that he had served the previous week and so was ineligible to again serve during the same term of court. Galveston, H. & S. A. Ry. Co. v. Worth, 53 Tex. Civ. App. 351, 116 S. W. 365.

[d] "An omnibus objection to the whole panel because they were not qualified was entirely too indefinite to entitle to a review." Kansas City v. Smart, 128 Mo. 242, 30 S. W. 773.

Generally as to challenges which should be to individual jurors and so are not properly raised by challenge to the array, see supra, VII, E, 3, a, (V).

90. Figg v. Donahoo, 4 Neb. (Unof.) 661, 95 N. W. 1020, sufficient if the attention of the court be directed to the specific objection made.

[a] The court is entitled to know the exact ground of objection. State v. Dyer, 139 Mo. 199, 40 S. W. 768.

[b] Compared to Objection to Evidence.—"The cause for challenge must acter thereof; mere general challenges may be disregarded.⁹⁸ The be as distinctly specified as the objection to the introduction to evidence." State v. Evans, 161 Mo. 95, 61 S. W. 590, 84 Am. St. Rep. 669; State v. Taylor, 134 Mo. 109, 35 S. W. 92.

[c] It should state (1) whether challenge is for principal cause or for favor. (Drake v. State, 53 N. J. L. 23, 20 Atl. 747), (2) whether for "general disqualification," or "implied bias," or "actual bias" (Territory v. O'Hare, 1 N. D. 30, 44 N. W. 1003), (3) or whether it is for actual or implied bias. People v. Renfrow, 41 Cal. 37.

[d] Mere Statement That Officer Biased Is Not Enough.—Challenge specifying "that the deputy sheriff who summoned forty of the jurors is biased against the defendant" is defective as it does not show on its face whether the challenger is relying upon actual or implied bias. State v. Gray, 19 Nev. 212, 8 Pac. 456.

[e] Especially Where There Are Different Modes of Trial.—In a capital case the statute prescribing that challenge for "actual bias" must be by statutory triers, and for "implied bias," must be by the court; the exact ground of challenge must be stated. State v. Hanley, 34 Minn. 430, 26 N. W. 397.

[f] Change of Forum Does Not Change Essential Requisites.—Under the former practice act where triers were required it was essential that the challenge when made should conform to the statutory presumption. The change in forum by which the challenge is to be tried does not change the force and effect of the statute as to the essential grounds of a challenge, nor the essential form of the challenge. State v. Salgado, 38 Nev. 64, 145 Pac. 919, 150 Pac. 764.

[a] Examples of Challenges Held Too General.—(1) "Challenged" (People v. Owens, 123 Cal. 482, 56 Pac. 251); (2) "We challenge the juror" (Leigh v. Territory, 10 Ariz. 129, 85 Pac. 948); (3) "I challenge the juror" (People v. Cochran, 61 Cal. 548); (4) "I challenge the juror for cause" (Paige v. O'Neal, 12 Cal. 483); (5) "We challenge this juror," without stating any cause or specifying any ground of disqualification is entirely too indefinite (State v. Bobbitt, 215 Mo. 10, 114 S. W. 511); (6) "We challenge the juror for cause" (State v. Fields, 234 Mo. 615, 138 S. W. 518; State v. Evans, 161 Mo. 95, 61 S. W. 590, 84 Am. St. Rep. 669); (7) "Defendant challenges for cause" (People v. Thiede, 11 Utah 241, 39 Pac. 837, judgment affirmed, 159 U. S. 510, 16 Sup. Ct. 62, 40 L. ed. 237. See also Payne v. Waterloo, C. F. & N. R. Co., 153 Iowa 445, 133 N. W. 781; Robinson v. Territory, 16 Okla. 241, 85 Pac. 451); (8) "The juror is challenged for cause." People v. Dick, 37 Cal. 277.

[b] A "broadside" challenge to the entire panel based on the members having formed opinions as to defendant's guilt, was considered by the court in State v. Church, 199 Mo. 605, 98 S. W. 16. Counsel for defendant considered it a challenge to the array. The court held it was not good as such a challenge because not in writing, but disposed of the whole matter by holding that under the circumstances, as disclosed on the voir dire examination, no proper ground of objection to the individual jurors was shown.

[c] Challenge Immediately Followed by Statement on Which Based. Where the challenge was merely "for cause," but followed immediately after the statement of relationship on which it manifestly was based, the rule that the specific ground for challenge should be stated will not be strictly applied. The promptness with which the objection was overruled showed that the challenge must state one or more of the statutory grounds,⁹⁹ and should set out the facts sufficiently to show what is objected to.¹

Under statutes naming certain grounds for challenge for implied bias, the specific ground should be stated;² a challenge simply for trial court ruled advisedly. Miller v. United States, 38 App. Cas. (D. C.) 361.

[b] Though Court's Statement Shows Theory of Challenge.—Where a juror was examined as to his residence and counsel said, "We now challenge this juror for cause," whereupon the court overruled the challenge, his statement showing that he was doing so on the theory that the objection was as to the venire on which the juror was summoned, on appeal the defendant cannot claim his challenge was on the ground of the juror's ineligibility. State v. Biles, 6 Wash. 186, 33 Pac. 347.

[c] Especially Where No Peremptory Challenge.—Since the commonwealth is not allowed any peremptory challenge, its challenge must show a good and legal cause, and must be overruled if it be vague, uncertain or irrelevant. Montague v. Com., 10 Gratt. (51 Va.) 767.

[c] "The defendant's counsel objects to the juror, challenges him for cause," is too indefinite. To say a juror is challenged for cause is but a legal conclusion. State v. Mace, 262 Mo. 143, 170 S. W. 1105.

[a] Such Is Statutory Rule.—See generally the statutes.

[b] The challenge must either specify or clearly refer to the particular subdivision of the section on which the challenger relies. People v. Cotta, 49 Cal. 166. See also People v. Welch, 49

"implied bias" is too general.³ If the cause of challenge is not one specified as ground for implied bias the challenge can only be considered as one for actual bias;⁴ but where different modes of trial are provided for, failure to specify whether the challenge is for "actual" or "implied" bias cannot be said to be immaterial.⁵ A challenge for actual bias must state the cause alleged substantially in the language of the statute.⁶ It is not sufficient to merely challenge for "actual bias;"⁷ but the usual rule is that in a challenge for actual bias, it must be alleged that the juror is biased against the party challenging.⁸

Where the facts are all before the court, reversal will not follow simply because the challenge was not technically correct in form.⁹

(V.) Waiver of Objections to Form of Challenge. — One waives any right to object to the form of the challenge by joining issue¹⁰ thereon, and

[a] "I challenge the juror for implied bias" is not sufficient. People v. Buckley, 49 Cal. 241; People v. Reynolds, 16 Cal. 128.

4. State v. Morse, 35 S. D. 18, 150 N. W. 293.

[a] Where the examination was directed to the state of the juror's mind, and the sources of his information, the trial court was sufficiently apprised that the challenge was for actual bias. State v. Moody, 18 Wash. 165, 51 Pac. 356, examination was at length.

5. State v. Hanley, 34 Minn. 430, 26 N. W. 397.

[a] Though Matter Brought Out Was Only Applicable to One.—Under the statute the difference between "actual" and "implied" bias is not merely formal. Neither the trial court nor the reviewing court can ignore the fact that the challenge was made for "actual" bias, though the matter sought to be brought out was applicable only to a challenge for "implied" bias. State v. Hanley, 34 Minn. 430, 26 N. W. 397.

6. See generally the statutes, and Leigh v. Territory, 10 Ariz. 129, 85 Pac. 948 (its purpose is to bring to the court's attention the ground relied upon); State v. Salgado, 38 Nev. 61, 145 Pac. 919, 150 Pac. 764. Compare State v. Durnam, 73 Minn. 150, 75 N. W. 1127, the court says that is the usual practice and general understanding, but passed the question because the opposite party had failed to object to the sufficiency of the challenge.

[a] Reference to the Section Must Be Specific.—"We challenge the juror under subdivision 2 of that section," is too general where there is nothing in the transcript to show what "that" section is. People v. Owens, 123 Cal. 482, 56 Pac. 251.

7. People v. Hopt, 3 Utah 396, 4 Pac. 250.

[a] Effect of Adding Words "for Positive Bias."—"We challenge the juror" is too indefinite as a challenge for actual bias, and the mere fact that one of defendant's counsel, after the challenge had been denied, overruled and ruling excepted to, added "We object to the juror on the ground of positive bias," did not cure the defect in the challenge as originally made. People v. Renfrow, 41 Cal. 37.

9. State v. Gorden, 5 Idaho 297, 48 Pac. 1061, the facts "palpably supported the challenge" and defendant was not in any wise prejudiced.

proceeding with the trial thereof¹¹ without first making an objection.

e. Demurrer, Exception and Denial.—(I.) Form and Sufficiency in General.—The ground of challenge being fully set out,¹² the opposite party may demur if he deem the cause assigned insufficient;¹³ or under some statutes he may except to the challenge,¹⁴ or except or deny as in case of challenge to the panel.¹⁵ The orderly practice is for the opposite party either to demur or to deny.¹⁶ The party is not bound to demur; he may take issue upon the facts stated as ground for the challenge,¹⁷ by express provision of statute in some states,¹⁸ or he may counterplead new matter in evidence.¹⁹ The practice permits the court to hear debate without any formal demurrer, however.²⁰

These pleadings may be oral,²¹ and under some statutes are entered on the minutes.²²

(II.) Effect.—On exception or demurrer the issue raised is one of law only, the facts being taken as true,²³ by express provision of statute in some states;²⁴ but on denial there is an issue of fact to be tried.²⁵ If the opposite party admits the challenge there is no issue and the juror is excused without examination;²⁶ but some courts have held that it is the duty of the trial judge to examine a juror, if he is challenged though the other party consents to the objection.²⁷

f. *Oath on Voir Dire.*²⁸—The court has implied power to administer an oath to jurors when they are examined on voir dire touching their qualifications;²⁹ but as a matter of strict right, it has been held that the oath cannot be demanded where the statute does not so provide.³⁰ though other courts have held it to be reversible error to refuse on proper request.³¹ But statutes sometimes provide that jurors should be sworn on voir dire.³² If no request is made therefor, it cannot be objected that the juror was not sworn on his voir dire.³³ If one is not satisfied with the form of the oath he should object thereto.³⁴ The oath need not be administered to the jurors singly.³⁵

Where a challenge is tried by triers, a special oath should be administered to the triers according to some cases;⁴⁸ but it is not necessary to again put the juror on his voir dire oath.⁴⁹ The trial should be in open court,⁵⁰ and according to the prescribed practice therefor.⁵¹ The trial proceeds by examination of witnesses before the triers, and the truth of the matter alleged as cause of challenge must be made 43. Reason v. Bridges, 1 Cranch C. 477, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,617.

[a] It is said in McGuffie v. State, 17 Ga. 497, that where more than two had been sworn before any juror challenged the court might select any two of those sworn, to be triers. [a] A mere remark by counsel: "We think it should be put up to triers," is not a request for triers within the rule that there must be a request or demand for triers. State v. Casey, 34 Nev. 154, 117 Pac.

[a] The trial should be conducted like the trial of a special issue before a jury, the triers should be placed in the jury box; have the witnesses examined before them by the parties, or their counsel; be told the law by the court; and be allowed to deliberate in the jury box, or if need be in some more private place. *Baker v. out to their satisfaction.⁵² Argument is not allowed before the triers.⁵³ In deliberating, the triers should first decide whether the fact alleged exists,⁵⁴ and then whether that fact makes the juror not indifferent.⁵⁵ The same secrecy as surrounds the deliberations of the jury need not be placed on their deliberations.⁵⁶ The decision of triers on the challenge for favor cannot cure any error in the decision of the court on the challenge for principal cause.⁵⁷ Where one has challenged to the favor and his challenge is being tried by triers, he cannot as a matter of right call upon the court to rule that the juror was incompetent and subject to principal challenge.⁵⁸

(II.) Statutory Triers.⁵⁹ — There has been, and still is in at least one jurisdiction, a practice of trying actual bias by triers appointed for that purpose by the court.⁶⁰ In capital cases the trial must be by the statutory triers,⁶¹ but the court may try the challenge in other cases by consent,⁶² or the right may be waived by failure to object

In Minnesota the practice still obtains. Three persons, not members of the panel, are appointed by the court to try actual bias. In cases not capital, the parties may consent to trial by the court. See Gen. Stats. (1913), §9237; and see State v. Smith, 78 Minn. 362, 81 N. W. 17.

to trial by the court.⁶³ If the challenge be admitted there is nothing to try and the juror must be excused.⁶⁴ The triers need not be re-sworn on the submission of each challenge.⁶⁵ No definite rule can be laid down for the guidance of the triers,⁶⁶ and they may hear any evidence which would lead to the conclusion that the juror is biased;⁶⁷ but the court may rule on the competency of the evidence.⁶⁸ Their decision is absolutely final in both criminal⁶⁹ and civil cases;⁷⁰ and the same rule prevails where the court is acting as trier by consent.⁷¹ An objection to the competency of a statutory trier should be made at the time the appointment is announced.⁷²

i. Examination.⁸⁷ — (I.) Nature and Right Generally. — The examination of jurors on their voir dire is one of the usual and inherent powers of the court.⁸⁸ The prime purpose of such an examination is to ascertain whether, if selected, a juror will be fair and impartial and render a verdict according to the evidence and the law, guided by the instructions of the court;⁸⁹ and its manifest object is to determine whether or not there is ground for a challenge for cause.⁹⁰ It has a two-fold purpose: to ascertain whether a cause for challenge exists, and to ascertain whether it is wise and expedient to exercise the right to challenge peremptorily.⁹¹

Examination is a privilege and not a requirement.⁹² In some jurisdictions the accused is not entitled, as a matter of strict right, to examine each juror individually as to his qualifications;⁹³ but the more usual holding is that one who properly applies therefor is entitled to have each juror examined as of right,⁹⁴ even where the statute

(II.) By Court or Counsel.⁹⁷—Under some statutes, the court examines the juror on the request of the party, to know whether he is incompetent, or unindifferent.⁹⁸ Under these statutes it has been held that the court exclusively may examine,⁹⁹ but that it is better practice to permit the counsel to examine under the court's supervision.¹ Except in so far as the statutes provide for questioning by the court, however, a reasonable examination by counsel must always be allowed, so that the court may see that the jurors are possessed of requisite qualifications and so that counsel may challenge for cause.² But there is no prejudicial error where the court propounds the questions as fully as counsel desired;³ and it is sometimes optional with the court to propound questions itself or permit counsel to do so.⁴ The fact that

[b] Though questions may have been proper in themselves no prejudicial error is committed in refusing them, where the record shows that ample latitude was allowed to illustrate the condition of mind of the juror as to bias and prejudice. People v. Hill, 20 Cal. App. 407, 129 Pac. 475.

[a] To restrict the examination arbitrarily to the answer of the one question by the court, whether the juror "could or could not try the case and its. Except in so far as the statute may otherwise prescribe,¹¹ the examination need not be according to any particular set custom or manner so long as it does not deprive the parties of any substantial right;¹² but each case and each juror must be governed by the peculiarities surrounding that case and that particular juror.¹³ Considerable latitude must be permitted counsel.¹⁴ The general rule is that the juror may be asked any question needful to show his disqualification.¹⁵ The examination should not be needlessly drawn out, however;¹⁶ nor need questions merely be repeated in some other form;¹⁷ nor should jurors render a verdict under the law as declared by the court and upon the evidence adduced upon the trial without regard to any previously formed opinions," is reversible error, as it makes the juror the judge of his own competency. People v. Woods, 29 Cal. 635.

[b] Where the counsel ask a perfectly proper question stripped of all immaterial matters, it was reversible error to refuse to permit it unless put in a form, suggested by the court, which would have permitted the juror to give an evasive or unsatisfactory answer. *State v. [a] Though Particular Questions Might Well Have Been Permitted. Where it was evident that the counsel had asked so many questions the trial judge had become impatient, and no question was excluded that bore upon the juror's bias or prejudice, there was no ground for reversal even where the supreme court says "it would perhaps have been well to allow these questions." *Gornetzky v. be subjected to a rigid cross-examination,¹⁸ except in so far as this may be deemed necessary in the case of a recalcitrant juror.¹⁹ But it is proper to ask a juror, by way of cross-examination, whether he has understood a question propounded to him by the other side.²⁰ It is discretionary with the court to permit further examination after the

[a] Questions merely variant in form but bringing out only what has already been answered, are properly refused. State v. Hinton, 49 La. Ann. 1354, 22 So. 617.

[b] Where the examination was thorough enough to elicit all the information that either party needed to enable counsel to act advisedly, mere refusal to ask additional questions along lines already covered is not prejudicial error. South Covington, etc. St. R. Co. v. Weber, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 922, 82 S. W. 986.

[c] Where Whole Matter so Far as Pertinent Is Covered.—The mere failure of the court to compel a juror to answer specifically a question put by counsel is harmless where the whole matter so far as it was legal and pertinent was covered by other questions put by the court and counsel. State v. Royse, 24 Wash. 440, 64 Pac. 742.

[d] Sufficient if Answered on Question by Other Side.—It was proper to refuse to permit repetition of questions by defendant, where juror had already answered similar questions by state. State v. Harris, 51 La. Ann. 1194, 25 So. 984.

[e] Chief Counsel Not Permitted To Repeat Associate's Questions.—The trial court was clearly acting within his discretion when he refused to permit chief counsel to go over matters already covered by associate counsel. State v. Cancienne, 50 La. Ann. 1324, 24 So. 321.

[f] Having Stated Not Prejudiced May Refuse Question on Reasonable Doubt.—After the juror has stated, several times, that his knowledge that defendant was the keeper of a brothel would not prejudice him, there was no error in refusing to permit the question whether the juror would give defendant the benefit of a reasonable doubt if it should be proved she was engaged in that business. Prosecution was for larceny. State v. Frelinghuysen, 43 Minn. 265, 45 N. W. 432.

[g] More Specific Question Refused

Where General Question Covered. Though the code made it a ground for challenge for cause that juror had been indicted for a similar offense within twelve months, it was not error, in a homicide case, for the court to refuse to permit the direct question, "Have you been indicted for murder in the last twelve months?" where the juror had just answered that he had never been indicted for murder. Gregory v. State, 148 Ala. 566, 42 So. 829.

[h] Involved Question Mere Repetition Properly Overruled.—It was not error to overrule a long involved question consisting of two parts which were repetitions, in another form, of a question which had already been answered. Faulkner v. State, 53 Tex. Crim. 258, 109 S. W. 199.

18. State v. Cornelius, 118 La. 146, 42 So. 754.

[a] Juror Not Analogous to Witness.—The examination should be conducted with fairness to the juror, and he should not be subject to rigid cross-examination as a witness in a case, since the attitude of a witness and a juror are entirely dissimilar. Stagner v. State, 9 Tex. App. 440.

Cross-examination of juror on his voir dire, see generally 13 ENCY. OF EV. 1007.

19. State v. Cornelius, 118 La. 146, 42 So. 754.

[a] Juror's Unwillingness To Answer May Show Unfitness.—"Whilst it may become necessary to deal with seeming harshness with a refractory witness, it can never be necessary to so deal with a juror . . . unless . . . he should manifest an unwillingness to disclose what his real feelings or opinions are; and this the judge should guard with great particularity. One who is too refractory or silly to answer a respectful question in a respectful manner is generally unfit" as a juror. Stagner v. State, 9 Tex. App. 440.

20. State v. Garner, 135 La. 746, 66 So. 181.

other party has cross-examined.²¹ The latitude allowed in the examination of jurors cannot be extended so as to allow parties to ask questions having a tendency to produce disagreements of the jury.²² The juror cannot be asked whether he wishes to sit on the jury,²³ or what his idea is of the duties of jurors.²⁴ Questions which tend to confuse or mislead the juror should be excluded,²⁵ as should questions about matters which the jurors could not be supposed to have knowledge.²⁶

In framing questions, the court must avoid disobeying the rule of the particular jurisdiction as to comment upon the evidence,²⁷ and must not infer that counsel have been guilty of improper conduct in

[a] Permission to so Question Improperly Refused.—Jurors having been asked by the prosecution whether they would bring in a verdict of guilty "if the state proves its case beyond a reasonable doubt," it was an improper restriction of the right to cross-examine to refuse to permit defendant to ask whether they understood the question. State v. Garner, 135 La. 746, 66 So. 181.

21. State v. Shelledy, 8 Iowa 477.

[a] Discretion Not Abused Where No New Subject Shown.—Court's discretion to refuse further examination after juror has been cross-examined by the other side, is not abused, where counsel did not indicate any desire to question on any new subject. State v. Heft, 155 Iowa 21, 134 N. W. 950.

[b] Question Should Be Allowed Where Court's Questions Have Modified Former Answers.—No good reason can be given for refusing to permit counsel to ask one more question, after the court had propounded a number of questions which had the effect of modifying former answers to counsel's direct questions. The state had interposed no objection to the question being asked. Wilson v. State, 87 Neb. 638, 128 N. W. 38.

24. Pennsylvania Co. v. Rudel, 100 Ill. 603, it was claimed this question was a proper test of his soundness of judgment and extent of information, but the court says it is not admissible for any purpose and would needlessly prolong the case.

25. Goff v. Kokomo Brass Works, 43 Ind. App. 642, 88 N. E. 312; State v. Harris, 51 La. Ann. 1194, 25 So. 984.

[a] Contradictory Question.—A question "Assuming you have been accepted as a juror, and that you have heard all the evidence, and from the evidence you believe the defendant to be guilty, but you have a reasonable doubt as to his guilt, with your mind in that condition, would you give the defendant the benefit of the doubt and acquit him?" is contradictory and inconsistent for if the juror believed defendant guilty he could not have any reasonable doubt. Coy v. State (Tex. Crim.), 180 S. W. 264.

[b] Indefinite Question Sufficiently Answered.—Asking the juror "Would you regard such a defense as that with any degree of disfavor?" is indefinite and misleading, and is sufficiently answered when the juror replies: "I would abide by the law." State v. Royse, 24 Wash. 440, 64 Pac. 742.

26. Com. v. Warner, 173 Mass. 541, 54 N. E. 353.

27. Hubbard v. State, 37 Fla. 156, 20 So. 235.

[a] Practice To Be Avoided Though Not Necessarily Reversible Error.—The supreme court refuses to say it is alone ground for a new trial but declares "we deem it judicious to avoid submitting to the jurors on their voir dire any hypothetical question which might lead to the impression that it was one based upon the facts to be presented in the case." Kirk v. Territory, 10 Okla. 46, 60 Pac. 797.

[b] In questioning as to attitude on circumstantial evidence court should asking jurors whether counsel have talked with them about the case.²⁸

The particular order in which the jurors shall be examined is unimportant.²⁹ While it has been held discretionary with the court as to how many jurors he will permit in the box for examination at the same time,³⁰ the better practice is to permit the examination of the jurors singly;³¹ and in some jurisdictions, while questions may be propounded by the trial judge to each juror separately, or to the entire panel, in civil cases,³² that is not the correct practice in criminal cases.³³

The use of leading and suggestive questions is permissible,³⁴ and a quesnot state that he understood prosecution might be unable to prove by direct testimony who mixed the poison which caused deceased's death, as that assumed deceased was poisoned. State v. David, 131 Mo. 380, 33 S. W. 28.

[c] Mere use of illustrations by the court in examining a juror who was excused because of his prejudice against circumstantial evidence was held not prejudicial. Brown v. State, 76 Tex. Crim. 316, 174 S. W. 360.

28. Hubbard v. State, 37 Fla. 156, 20 So. 235, the inquiry should be avoided but, if made, must be in general terms.

29. State v. Diple, 242 Mo. 461, 147 S. W. 111, no possible prejudice can result from permitting the voir dire examination of certain talesmen before two others whose names appear earlier on the list.

Order in which challenges must be interposed, see supra, VII, E, 2.

30. State v. Munch, 57 Mo. App. 297.

[a] The general question having been asked of the whole panel as to whether they had formed or expressed an opinion concerning the merits of the case, and some jurors having been excused on their response thereto, counsel cannot object because he has not been allowed to put that question to each juror personally. State v. Munch, 57 Mo. App. 297.

Necessity that full panel be present before challenge, see supra, VII, E, 2, c.

31. Driskell v. Parish, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 4,087, questions as to conscientious scruples of jurors should be asked of each juror separately and not of the whole panel collectively.

[a] Reversal Refused for This Error Alone.—While not willing to reverse for this error alone, the court held it was improper to compel counsel to address questions to the jurors as a whole. While the court can prevent useless frittering away of time by asking useless questions the defendant should be allowed to examine each individual juror by addressing proper questions to him individually. Barnes v. State, 74 Tex. Crim. 501, 168 S. W. 558.

[b] It may be proper to exclude all the other veniremen while the examination of one is being conducted. The court says that while it would not in the case at bar reverse for failure to grant defendant's request for such exclusion, yet the request should have been granted, and reversal would follow if it should appear that by reason of the refusal defendant was obliged to forego asking proper questions which might prejudice the jury, or in asking them might create a prejudice. Streight v. State, 62 Tex. Crim. 453, 138 S. W. 742.

[a] Reason for Distinction.—The criminal practice is based on the provisions of the code requiring the presentation of each juror to the prisoner as he is called. Hilton & Dodge Lumber Co. v. Ingram, 135 Ga. 696, 70 S. E. 234.

34. People v. Ah Lee Doon, 97 Cal. 171, 31 Pac. 933, discretionary with court and not error unless discretion abused. See 13 ENCY. OF EV. 1012.

[a] The court being the trier, there is no danger in permitting such examination. Martin v. State, 16 Ohio 364.

[b] The court has the right to ask

tion may be put in the form of a "summing up" question.³⁵ On overruling a question as not being proper, the court need not instruct the counsel how to frame his question to avoid the objection.³⁶

Analogy Between Juror and Witness.—Though a juror, on his voir dire examination, has been said to be no less than a witness,³⁷ the attitude of a juror and a witness is entirely dissimilar;³⁸ at the same time he is entitled to many privileges of witnesses.³⁹

(B.) LIMITED TO PERTINENT MATTERS.⁴⁰—One of the limitations on the right to examine a juror on his voir dire is that the examination shall be confined to pertinent matters, inquiry into which will tend to enlighten court and counsel.⁴¹ The questions, therefore, must be relevant and material.⁴² Such as are clearly impertinent are properly dis-

the juror leading questions in passing upon his qualifications. State v. Boyce, 24 Wash. 514, 64 Pac. 719.

[c] "It is sometimes as objectionable as upon the trial of a formal issue." In the case at bar counsel for both sides and the court asked such questions with the result that the juror "adopted nearly every question" and the true state of his mind was left in doubt. State v. Smith, 74 Kan. 383, 85 Pac. 1020, 89 Pac. 21.

35. People v. Radley, 127 Mich. 627, 86 N. W. 1029.

[a] But a Question Is Properly Excluded Which Does Not Fairly Sum Up. The juror had answered in effect that he "was not in sympathy with the liquor business" and that he did not "like bad men that will throw themselves away, and get drunk, and become disorderly and fight." The excluded question was, "You do have then, some prejudice against a man who drinks?" People v. Radley, 127 Mich. 627, 86 N. W. 1029.

[a] Should Be To Disclose Juror's Relation and Attitude of Mind.—Though a rigid examination is permitted it should be such as is calculated to disclose the juror's relation to the parties, and the actual disposition of his mind toward the parties or the subject-matter of the action. State v. Bokien, 14 Wash. 403, 44 Pac. 889.

[b] Pertinent To Ask Jurors as to Bias From Lapse of Time.—Where a crime was committed in 1879 and the indictment was not found until 1895 it was a pertinent inquiry to ask jurors whether the lapse of time would prevent their rendering a verdict under the evidence and instructions of the court. Howgate v. United States, 7 App. Cas. (D. C.) 217.

42. Shaw v. State, 32 Tex. Crim. 155, 22 S. W. 588.

[a] Must Be Confined to Cause of Challenge Made.—The examination should be confined to the questions raised by the particular cause of challenge under investigation at that time. Collins v. State (Tex. Crim.), 178 S. W. 345; Stagner v. State, 9 Tex. App. 440.

[b] Should Be as to Grounds Then Existing.—The examination should be confined to an investigation of grounds which exist at the time of the examination; such as citizenship and other legal requirements, relationship to the

lowed.⁴³ as are those which are purely speculative.⁴⁴ Nor is it necessary to ask any question which would add nothing material to the questions which have been put.⁴⁵ It is improper to ask a juror questions which would compel him to disclose matters that the law forbids his being questioned about.⁴⁶ It is also prejudicial error to so parties, opinions and prejudices and other facts which show the actual disposition of the juror's mind toward the parties or the subject-matter of the action. State v. Huffman, 86 Ohio St. 229, 99 N. E. 295, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 677.

[c] Question as to how juror decided in another case is wholly incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial to the issue being tried. People v. Conte, 17 Cal. App. 771, 122 Pac. 450, 457; People v. Trask, 7 Cal. App. 103, 93 Pac. 891.

[d] It is not proper to ask a juror how many murder cases he has sat on, as the question does not tend to show actual bias, and is not permissible for the purpose of determining peremptories. People v. Brittan, 118 Cal. 409, 59 Pac. 664.

[e] Question Held Not Within Issues.—It was improper to ask a juror who stated he had no bias or prejudice against the prisoner, "Have you any aversion to the defense that a man is not connected with the crime either by illegal act or omission, and that he is not a principal, accomplice, or accessory?" The plea of not guilty put the burden on the state and a juror without prejudice against the prisoner could not be prejudiced against his proving he was not connected with the crime. Collins v. State (Tex. Crim.), 178 S. W. 345.

43. Fla.—Mathis v. State, 45 Fla. 46, 24 So. 287. Ind.—Elliott v. State, 73 Ind. 10; Pemberton v. State, 11 Ind. App. 297, 38 N. E. 1096. Pa.—Clay v. Western Maryland R. Co., 221 Pa. 439, 70 Atl. 807.

[a] It wastes time and interjects prejudice into the case to examine upon matters not even claimed to be relevant and which cannot be seen or presumed by the court to be so. Dixon v. Russell, 156 Wis. 161, 145 N. W. 761.

[b] A juror having admitted making the remark that "it would ruin or injure any lawyer politically with certain persons in the county to appear for the prisoner," it was proper for the court to refuse to permit the juror to be questioned as to who those persons were, since this was not material on the question of the juror's fairness. State v. Mills, 91 N. C. 581.

[c] Service in Other Case Disclosed, Court's Action Therein Immaterial. The court having permitted counsel to proceed sufficiently to learn whether or not the juror had served in a certain other case in which counsel claimed the court had criticised the jury, properly refused to permit the inquiry to be carried any further. The court's action in the other case was not a proper matter of inquiry and his refusal to permit it to become so, shows no disposition to hamper the free examination of the jurors. State v. Elliott, 68 Wash. 603, 123 Pac. 1089.

[d] Plaintiff's Ability To Pay Not Relevant to the Issue.—The jury's duty in condemnation proceedings is simply to consider and determine the value of the land, and the ability of plaintiff to pay that value is wholly irrelevant to the issue. So a question was properly excluded which sought to find out how the juror, in the absence of evidence on the subject, would determine how much the plaintiff could afford to pay. Vallejo & N. R. Co. v. Reed Orchard Co., 169 Cal. 545, 147 Pac. 238.

[a] It is proper to exclude a question as to how the juror decided in certain other cases in which he had been a juror. Such inquiry is not only as to a matter wholly irrelevant, but it is against public policy in so far as it may seek to show some ulterior motive in reaching a verdict in such other cases. People v. Conte, 17 Cal. App. 771, 122 Pac. 450, 457.

[b] A question which tends to introduce politics into the jury box is question the jury as to bring into the case by indirection matters which could not be commented on directly.⁴⁷ The juror need not be questioned as to matters which the statute provides shall be proved only by other testimony.⁴⁸ The court cannot infer that a question is asked for an ulterior purpose which is on its face a proper question.⁴⁹ The court may, in its discretion, compel a defendant to consult with his attorney to avoid the asking of irrelevant and immaterial questions.⁵⁰

(C.) MATTERS GOING TO DISCREDIT JUROR. — At common law the juror could not be asked about matters going to his dishonor or discredit;⁵¹ and the rule is still recognized in some jurisdictions.⁵² Even where the question, if answered affirmatively, would clearly show the juror incompetent the better practice is to bring the matter out by extrinsic properly disallowed. State v. Mills, 91 N. C. 581.

[a] Cannot Be Asked as to Prejudice of Public Against Verdict of Acquittal.—Juror cannot be asked whether the state of the public mind is such that a verdict of acquittal would create a prejudice and social ostracism against him among his friends and acquaintances. The answer might tend to degrade him or produce a prejudice or ostracism against himself or his family. Savage v. State, 18 Fla. 909.

[b] It is improper to ask juror if prejudiced against one who is accused of crime or whether he has any feeling against one so charged. "No man, if he understands such a question, will answer that he has a prejudice, be-evidence.⁵³ However, it has been held to be proper to ask the question, the juror having the privilege to refuse to answer,⁵⁴ and the rule has been modified by the statutes which provide that no one shall be relieved from testifying providing it will not expose him to criminal prosecution, penalty or forfeiture.⁵⁵

cause a prejudice is something that is not founded on information or reason." The question, however, had been asked, and the juror was held competent. State v. Croney, 31 Wash. 122, 71 Pac. 783.

53. Burt v. Panjaud, 99 U. S. 180, 25 L. ed. 451, as to crime.

[a] Under a statute providing that jurors "shall not be asked a question, the answer to which may show that he has been convicted of an offense which disqualifies him, or that he stands charged by indictment or other legal accusation with theft or felony," if it is desired to raise any question as to these matters it must be done by evidence other than that of the juror. Sewell v. State, 15 Tex. App. 56.

54. People v. Donaldson, 2 Edm. Sel. Cas. (N. Y.) 78.

[a] Applied to Question as to Secret Oath.—It was proper to permit the prosecutor to ask jurors whether they had taken an oath to favor counterfeiters, but says it is "one which the persons interrogated might well decline to answer." Fletcher v. State, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 249.

55. See generally the statutes, and State v. Fox, 25 N. J. L. 566.

57. People v. Knickerbocker, 1 Park. Crim. (N. Y.) 302. See Lohman v. People, 1 N. Y. 379 (where it is said in effect that the issue being as to whether the juror stands indifferent, his opinion derived from his own consciousness, was relevant, competent and primary evidence); also People v. Cristie, 2 Park. Crim. (N. Y.) 579, where it is said to be "the only source from which the fact of the formed opinion can be obtained."

[a] When a challenge is to the favor a juror may be interrogated to show the real state of his mind toward the parties and in reference to the issue to be tried. Shoeffler v. State, 3 Wis. 823.

[b] Bias Is Best Judged by Conscience of Juror.—Whether the bias of the juror is such as will readily yield to proof can be more satisfactorily and reliably ascertained by an appeal to the conscience of the juror. Williams v. Godfrey, 1 Heisk. (Tenn.) 299.

58. State v. Hoyt, 47 Conn. 518, 36 Am. Rep. 89.

[a] As Being Application of "Ill-Will" or "Malice" Rule.—The English rule did not permit the juror to be asked whether he had expressed an opinion. But our courts permit it. The reason for the English rule is based on the malice rule as to opinion. State v. Flower, Walk. (Miss.) 318.

[b] But after an exhaustive consideration of the English cases the court in State v. Benton, 19 N. C. 196, concludes that the juror may be compelled to answer any question unless it "cannot be answered without exposing him to the peril of disgrace and punishment." The rule requiring ill-will grows out of a misapprehension of the use of that expression in the old cases, and had reference either to those cases in which the juror had found a verdict or bill of indictment against the prisoner. It follows that the mere opinion of the juror can be inquired into.

[c] Under the rule that ill-will toward the prisoner must be shown, or a mere expression of opinion will not disqualify, the juror cannot be questioned as it tends to his dishonor. King v. Edmonds, 4 B. & Ald. 471, 6 E. C. L. 564, 106 Eng. Reprint 1009.

[d] Where the challenge is for principal cause, as where the opinion is based on having been a member of a jury which has passed on practically the same state of facts, it has been

(E.) QUESTIONS OF LAW.—(1.) Generally.—If a juror is asked questions which involve propositions of law he should be told what the law is.⁵⁹ Where counsel states an erroneous rule of law during his examination, the court properly interrupts and gives the correct rule.⁶⁰ and it has been held that counsel has no right to explain legal terms which the court will explain in its charge.⁶¹ A juror cannot be asked how he will decide a question of law,⁶² nor can he be questioned as to his understanding of or familiarity with legal terms and expressions.⁶³ He may be asked the broad question whether he will suggested that the old rule should apply since his answer must disparage the juror. Baker v. Harris, 60 N. C. 271.

[a] How Will Decide in Absence of Evidence.—To ask juror how he will decide if the indictment is read and no evidence put in is objectionable as asking him to decide a question of law. State v. Turley, 87 Vt. 163, 88 Atl. 562.

[b] Distinction Based on Jurors Being Judges of Law.—If jurors are judges of law, questions as to their opinion on the constitutionality of the law are improper, for they might refuse to convict on the ground of unconstitutionality, and their fixed opinions would not disqualify them. But if they are not judges of the law no valid exception can be taken to the questions. Pierce v. State, 13 N. H. 556.

See also 13 ENCY. OF EV. 1016.

[a] Is Not Calculated To Disclose Mental Fitness.—The law does not contemplate that the juror shall be learned in the law. Neither is such questioning calculated to disclose the mental fitness or unfitness of the juror to act as such. San Antonio, etc. R. Co. v. Belt, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 281, 59 S. W. 607.

[b] Especially Where Laymen Ordinarily Would Be Ignorant.—Applied where the questions were such "as to which a fair and competent juror might well be ignorant, and which, without explanation, even an educated layman might not clearly comprehend. O'Rourke v. Yonkers R. Co., 32 App. Div. 8, 52 N. Y. Supp. 706.

[c] Rule on Which Instruction Was Subsequently Asked.—A question which involves a rule of law concerning which men in general are not supposed to be accurately informed, and which the defendant subsequently asked the court to instruct the jury upon, is properly overruled. Richards v. United States, 175 Fed. 911, 99 C. C. A. 401.

[d] Questions Held Improper Under This Rule.—"What do you understand by the words, a person of sound memory and discretion?" "Would you deem him legally responsible for his deed?" Com. v. Calhoun, 238 Pa. 474, 86 Atl. 472.

[e] Questions on Circumstantial Evidence.—"Do you understand the meaning of a circumstantial evidence case?" Then reciting certain facts and adding, "Would you call that a case of circumstantial evidence?" Roberson v. State, 40 Fla. 509, 24 So. 474.

take the law from the court,⁶⁴ but that is as far as he can be interrogated along this line;⁶⁵ and it is clearly going beyond the proper limits of the voir dire examination to ask the juror whether he would of his own accord observe the law of the case whether such law were given in the court's charge or not.⁶⁶

(2.) As to Burden of Proof, Presumptions, etc.—The jurors should not be questioned about their knowledge of "burden of proof,"⁶⁷ or "preponderance of the testimony,"⁶⁸ or "reasonable doubt,"⁶⁹ or "presumption of innocence,"⁷⁰ and though it has been held that counsel should be allowed to ask the juror whether he will presume the defendant innocent and give him the benefit of reasonable doubt,⁷¹ it

[f] Questioned About Self-Defense. Jurors are not supposed to know the law and are not incompetent because of their lack of knowledge of law of self-defense. State v. Willie, 130 La. 454, 58 So. 147; State v. Perieux, 107 La. 601, 31 So. 1016.

[a] Care must be taken not to state a wrong rule of law in asking the jurors whether they will obey that rule if laid down to them by the court. See State v. Marfaudille, 48 Wash. 117, 92 Pac. 939, 14 L. R. A. (N. S.) 346, the court did not reverse for this error alone.

[a] Cannot Be Questioned About Court's Criticism of Former Jury.—A juror having answered that he understood he was to take the law from the court, but to decide the question of fact on his own judgment upon the evidence, it was proper to prevent a line of questioning which sought to bring out the effect upon the juror of previous criticism by the judge of the action of a jury which had decided a case contrary to the judge's belief. State v. Elliott, 68 Wash. 603, 123 Pac. 1089.

66. Brown v. State, 40 Fla. 459, 25 So. 63.

[a] Questioning as to His Own

Conscientious Belief.—It is not proper to ask "if the court stated the law to be a certain way, did his conscience tell him that it is proper law, and would he enforce it." Collins v. State (Tex. Crim.), 178 S. W. 345.

[b] Question About Following "Higher Law."—"If you are taken on the jury to try this case, will you be influenced, even in the slightest degree, by an appeal to any higher law than the law of the land or the law as will be charged you by the court?" This is in the nature of a suggestion that the juror will not be governed by his oath. Fuller v. State, 50 Tex. Crim. 14, 95 S. W. 541.

[a] Anticipates Court's Instructions Thereon.—To ask a juror whether he "knew that the defendant in a criminal case is entitled to the benefit of the presumption of innocence" is properly excluded as calling upon the juror to anticipate instructions to be given by the court. Ryan v. State, 115 Wis. 488, 92 N. W. 271.

(F.) HYPOTHETICAL QUESTIONS, ETC.—Though the general rule is that the examination should be based on existing facts and hypothetical questions should not be propounded,⁷³ hypothetical questions, based upon the theory of the defense are permitted, to some extent.⁷⁴ It is not proper to ask a juror how he would decide in a supposed state of the evidence,⁷⁵ or as to what effect he would assign to the estab-

72. Ryan v. State, 115 Wis. 488, 82 N. W. 271.

[a] Not Pertinent to Inquiry as to Opinion.—It was not the trial court's duty to permit the question whether the defendant "is presumed by you to be an innocent man," the object of the inquiry being as to whether the juror had formed or expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused. Gandy v. State, 27 Neb. 707, 43 N. W. 747, 44 N. W. 108.

[b] Does Not Tend To Show Bias and Is Question of Law.—Questioning as to whether juror would find not guilty if after hearing the evidence and instructions "there yet remains in your mind a reasonable doubt" is objectionable as not tending to show bias or prejudice or lack of qualifications, but a state of mind which would be dependent upon the court's instructions. State v. Bokien, 14 Wash. 403, 44 Pac. 889.

[c] Properly Disallowed as Calling for Verdict on Hypothetical Case. Questions whether jurors would give accused the benefit of a reasonable doubt as quickly as they would if he were "a highly respectable gentleman," or if they would be prejudiced against him if it appeared he was living with a woman not his wife, while they might properly be allowed are not erroneously disallowed under the rule that he cannot be asked how he would decide on a supposed state of facts. Hughes v. State, 109 Wis. 397, 85 N. W. 333.

[d] Sufficient Where Juror Says Will Take Law From Court.—It was sought to ask the juror whether he would give the defendant the benefit of every reasonable doubt. He said in effect, that he would if the court said so. This is as far as it was proper to interrogate him. Brown v. State, 40 Fla. 459, 25 So. 63.

[a] No Error Where Done by Both Sides.—No error occurs of which defendant can complain when his counsel asks a hypothetical question based on his theory of the case, and the district attorney asks a similar question, based on the theory of the prosecution, by way of cross-examination. People v. Copsey, 71 Cal. 548, 12 Pac. 721.

[a] Otherwise It Would Be Impossible To Get Juries.—"If counsel are allowed to go into hypothetical assumptions of how the evidence will turn out on the trial, and how in certain contingencies jurors would act, it will be impossible to get juries." Keegan v. Kavanaugh, 62 Mo. 230.

[b] Particularly Where Facts Not Shown To Exist.—Particularly under this rule is it not permissible to ask a question based upon a hypothetical state of facts not shown to exist. Merkel v. State, 75 Tex. Crim. 551, 171 S. W. 738.

[c] Cannot Ask What Would do if no Evidence Given.—It is improper to ask a juror what his verdict would be in case the indictment was read but no evidence given. This is objectionable under the rule. State v. Turley, 87 Vt. 163, 88 Atl. 562.

lishment of a particular fact,⁷⁶ or what weight he would give to the testimony of certain witnesses,⁷⁷ to a particular part of the evidence.⁷⁸ A juror may be asked if he will consider all the testimony and evidence fairly and impartially, giving each part thereof such weight as in his best judgment it deserves;⁷⁹ and he may be questioned as to effect of evidence influencing him in arriving at a verdict, for the purpose of showing his bias, or impartiality.⁸⁰ A juror may be asked

76. Com. v. Van Horn, 188 Pa. 143, 41 Atl. 469, it is not proper to ask a juror what effect he would assign to an immoral relation existing between defendant and the woman he was accused of murdering.

[a] Question as to Whether Specific Act was Negligent.—It is doubtful whether the answer of the juror that he did not consider a specific act to be negligent would be ground for challenge for cause. Stowell v. Standard Oil Co., 139 Mich. 18, 102 N. W. 227.

77. Fugate v. State, 85 Miss. 86, 37 So. 557 (whether he would believe a certain witness under oath); People v. Hosier, 132 App. Div. 146, 116 N. Y. Supp. 911.

[a] Weight To Be Given Witnesses Not To Be Tested by Juror's Views. The object of the examination being to ascertain whether the juror had expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of accused, and whether he was biased or prejudiced for or against him, questions which merely go to the juror's "views in mental and moral philosophy, and the weight to be given to the testimony of witnesses by that criterion" are properly overruled. Gandy v. State, 27 Neb. 707, 43 N. W. 747, 44 N. W. 108.

[b] Improper Question as to Weight of Defendant's Testimony.—"If the defendant should himself testify on some material point, and his testimony was reasonable, not contradicted, and not impeached, would you give it weight?" is properly disallowed. People v. Warner, 147 Cal. 546, 82 Pac. 196.

[c] Defendant's Testimony in Light of Previous Conviction.—The court properly overruled a question as to whether the juror would be affected by the fact that the defendant had at one time been convicted of manslaughter and that his case had been appealed. The fact that any witness has been convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude is properly one to be considered by the jurors. Manning v. State, 7 Okla. Crim. 367, 123 Pac. 1029.

[d] Credence To Be Given Witnesses in Sheriff's Employ.—Neither side should be permitted to test jurors by asking whether they would or would not give credence to the testimony of witnesses who were in the sheriff's employ. Ellis v. State, 69 Tex. Crim. 468, 154 S. W. 1010.

[e] As to Belief in Testimony of Woman Not Virtuous.—It is not proper to ask veniremen would you "believe the testimony of a woman not virtuous, as readily as you would one who is virtuous?" The jury are required to find defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, regardless of the character of the witness. Hamilton v. State, 74 Tex. Crim. 219, 168 S. W. 536.

78. People v. Warner, 147 Cal. 546, 82 Pac. 196.

[a] Influence on Determining Guilt and on Evidence Distinguished.—It was reversible error to refuse to permit counsel to interrogate the juror as to the weight he would give to a former conviction in determining the guilt or innocence of the accused. But it was proper to refuse to permit the juror to be asked whether that fact "would influence him at all in the consideration of the evidence," where one of the issues to be tried was a former conviction as affecting the grade of offense. People v. Hosier, 132 App. Div. 146, 116 N. Y. Supp. 911.

[b] Influence by Proof of Immoral Relations.—It was proper to inquire whether juror would be influenced by proof that the deceased and defendant's

how he would decide if the evidence were equally balanced according to some cases;⁸¹ but other cases held that the question is improper.⁸² The juror cannot be asked questions which tend to commit him to give a large verdict.⁸³ It is not proper to ask juror whether in case of conviction, he has made up his mind what punishment ought to be inflicted on the prisoner;⁸⁴ but he may be asked whether he has formed such a deliberate opinion as to the nature of the punishment to be inflicted, that it could not be affected by the evidence.⁸⁵

(G.) STATUTORY QUESTIONS.—(1.) Generally.⁸⁶—Under some statutes, certain specified questions are asked of jurors by the trial judge.⁸⁷ If the court does not ask the questions, the party should request that it be done;⁸⁸ and reversal will lie for failure to grant the request.⁸⁹ But if there is no request the court may decide an objection as a question of law upon an agreed state of facts⁹⁰ without any further wife had been unduly intimate. Jones v. People, 23 Colo. 276, 47 Pac. 275.

[c] May Permit Question as to Believing Accomplices.—It is discretionary with the court to permit question as to disregarding the testimony of an accomplice. While such testimony is to be weighed for what it is worth, it is a well known fact that some men will not believe an accomplice in any case, and where the prosecution's case depended on such a witness the question was properly allowed. State v. Flint, 60 Vt. 304, 14 Atl. 178.

82. Keegan v. Kavanaugh, 62 Mo. 230.

[a] Improper as Involving a Question of Law.—To ask the juror which side he would find on if the evidence as to drunkenness should be equally balanced, is improper as requiring the juror to determine a question of law. State v. Royse, 24 Wash. 440, 64 Pac. 742.

83. Rice v. Ragan, 61 Tex. Civ. App. 429, 129 S. W. 1148.

[a] May Ask as to Willingness to Give Fair Compensation.—It was proper to ask jurors if for any reason they would be unwilling to render a verdict for full and fair compensation if they found in plaintiff's favor, and if they found for him would there be any disposition to give him less than full compensation under the evidence. These questions do not tend to commit the jury to a large verdict. Rice v. Ragen, 61 Tex. Civ. App. 429, 129 S. W. 1148.

[c] Effect of Change in Questions. Where a change in the questions was made while not technically an ex post facto law, yet it should not be sanctioned since the defendant was entitled to have his triers selected according to the rules of evidence which existed when the crime was committed. *Reynolds v. examination, or he may decide it upon his own observation.⁹¹ That examination is by counsel instead of by the court is not ground for reversal, where done in court's presence and not objected to.⁹² A juror who answers all the questions so as to qualify, is prima facie competent.⁹³ When the juror's answers have prima facie qualified him the court properly refuses to permit counsel to ask further questions;⁹⁴ nor need the judge ask any further questions.⁹⁵ But if it appear that the jurors have not understood the questions, the court may in its discretion explain them, or ask, or permit to be asked, further questions.⁹⁶ If the parties wish to test the jurors further for bias they must be put upon the court as a trier and some answer shown to be untrue.⁹⁷ The statutory questions may be asked in misdemeanor cases

93. Dumas v. State, 63 Ga. 600.

[a] Competent Where so Appears From All Answers Together.—A juror was competent who at first said he "could not say that it was" when asked if his mind was impartial, but who on being told he must answer yes or no, answered "yes." Cato v. State, 72 Ga. 747.

[b] Competent Though Some Answers Show Uncertainty.—A juror was competent though in one answer to the question, "Do you think you are strictly impartial?" he said "Well, I don't know that I am;" but on further examination said he did not hear very well and might have misunderstood the question, as he did not think he so answered. His other answers were such as showed him prima facie competent. Norton v. State, 137 Ga. 842, 74 S. E. 759. Competent where he said "I think that I am, as I understand it." The court then said "Do you understand the question?" and juror said "yes." Thomas v. State, 27 Ga. 287.

[a] Rule Elucidated.—(1) It was not error to refuse to ask or allow counsel to ask what the jurors understood by the words "bias" and "prejudice;" what they meant when they said they were perfectly impartial between state and accused; and whether they did not entertain settled and fixed opinions regarding the guilt of defendant. Woolfolk v. State, 85 Ga. 69, 11 S. E. 814. (2) But it was within the court's right, and perhaps his duty, to explain these terms if the jurors apparently did not understand them. Fogarty v. State, 80 Ga. 450, 5 S. E. 782. (3) But the statutory questions, or the consequences of a negative or affirmative answer thereto, must not be neglected when the question is fully understood and fairly answered. *Henry v. though the statute only applies specifically to felonies.⁹⁸ However, the practice is to put the jurors on their voir dire on request in both civil and misdemeanor cases,⁹⁹ and to propound such questions as will test their competency to pass upon the issues in the case.¹

(2.) *Questions Propounded.*²—The character and number of the questions is left largely to the discretion of the court.³ Questions not warranted by the statute should not be propounded.⁴ The examination need not necessarily be confined strictly to the questions formulated in the statutes, however, but is to be varied and elaborated as the circumstances surrounding the juror seem to require;⁵ and the juror may be asked whether he is conscious of any circumstances which would influence him in giving a verdict other than upon a fair consideration of the evidence.⁶ He may be asked questions calculated to discover whether he has been subjected, knowingly or unwittingly, to influences which would unfit him for service.⁷ If counsel desire more specific questions than those asked by the court they must request them;⁸ but it is not error to refuse to put a question in the exact form asked by counsel.⁹ The court may ask such ad-

[a] It need not be confined to "the stereotyped forms." State v. Brown, 35 La. Ann. 340.

[b] Reason for Rule.—The statutory questions are to be asked on motion. This obviously leaves it to the court's discretion to ask other questions. "It is not one of those cases where expressio unius est exclusio alterius." Pierce v. State, 13 N. H. 536.

[c] Question Held Proper.—There was no abuse of discretion, where the ground of attack was based only upon the fact the jurors had previously heard certain affidavits and evidence on a motion to continue, which it was claimed would tend to cause them to prejudge the case, to refuse to put the statutory questions and to propound this question: "Have you, from having seen the crime committed, or from having heard any testimony delivered on oath, formed and expressed any opinion in regard to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner at the bar?" Nobles v. State, 127 Ga. 212, 56 S. E. 125.

6. Savage v. State, 18 Fla. 909.

7. State v. Brown, 35 La. Ann. 340.

[a] As to Conversations With Persons Not Interested.—There was no objection to asking him whether he had conversed about the case with a certain named person who was not in any way connected therewith. Assuming this inferentially charged a corrupt combination to influence jurors, the question was not objectionable. State v. Brown, 35 La. Ann. 340.

9. O'Boyle v. Com., 100 Va. 785, 40 S. E. 121, sufficient if the court asks ditional questions as he deems necessary,¹⁰ but whether he will examine any further than the statutory questions is a matter for his discretion,¹¹ and no reversal can be had unless that discretion is abused;¹² nor is the court bound to go beyond the statutory questions unless something appears making it proper to do so.¹³ Unless a request is made for an examination, the court need not propound specific questions some of which are improper;¹⁴ but if the party offers testimony to show that the juror has a preconceived opinion the court should hear it.¹⁵

(IV.) Waiver. — By failing to challenge one waives not only any objection to the juror's competency,¹⁶ but also any objection to the rulings of the court on the questions propounded at the examinations,¹⁷ or any failure by the court to propound required statutory questions.¹⁸ These rules apply to jurors summoned on special venire, as well as to those regularly drawn,¹⁹ and are not changed by the fact that the venire did not recite the juror's qualifications.²⁰ One waives his right to examine by declining to examine when the opportunity is given him,²¹ and he waives his statutory right to have a certain number of jurors in the box by examining when the box was improperly filled.²²

(III.) Sufficiency, Presumptions and Burden of Proof.—The challenge must be supported by evidence;⁴² but after a challenge has been denied, it is proved on the juror's statement alone unless the challenged party disputes the statement.⁴³ The presumption is in favor of the competency of the juror.⁴⁴ The burden is on the person who chalpedition" to find out the legitimate information which that officer has collected concerning the fitness of the juror, or on which to base the prosecution's peremptories. People v. Ruef, 14 Cal. App. 576, 114 Pac. 48, 54.

41. Hodge v. State, 26 Fla. 11, 7 So. 593, in order to procure witnesses to show bias of juror who says he has none.

[a] The court need not halt the proceedings while process is issued and served to compel the attendance of a witness whom counsel for defendant might readily have learned would be needed. State v. Barrett, 40 Minn. 65, 41 N. W. 459.

42. Beckham v. State, 113 Ala. 28, 38 So. 919; State v. Pell, 140 Iowa 655, 119 N. W. 154.

[a] The party must stand ready to prove the truth of his challenge. State v. Barrett, 40 Minn. 65, 41 N. W. 459.

[b] On Refusal of Court To Compel Juror To Answer Challenger Must Produce Other Proof.—A party cannot complain of the overruling of his challenge for cause based on the juror's having been guilty of treason, where the court refused to compel the juror to answer the question, and the challenger did not produce other proof. Burt v. Panjaud, 99 U. S. 180, 25 L. ed. 451.

[c] Merely Objecting to Question Asked Is Not Sufficient.—Where the juror was asked whether he was a qualified elector, counsel wishing to raise the point that he must have voted at the previous election cannot do so by merely objecting to the question asked and stating that the juror must first be asked whether he had voted at the previous election. Counsel might, if he chose, ask that question himself and so get the matter into the record. But as it was he left his challenge with no evidence to support it. State v. Pell, 140 Iowa 655, 119 N. W. 154.

[d] On the examination the juror is properly accepted if some material fact is not shown. As where the questions brought out that the juror had sat on a jury which found certain other parties guilty of gaming, but no evidence was adduced showing that it was the same game that defendant was being tried for. That such evidence was afterwards introduced at the trial does not change the rule. Turner v. State, 114 Ga. 421, 40 S. E. 308.

[e] All Facts Necessary To Support Challenge Must Be Shown.—The question being as to whether the juror, being a Methodist, was opposed to slavery, and so biased in a freedom case, it was incumbent on the challenger to show either that such was the prevailing opinion among Methodists or that the individual juror had that opinion. Reason v. Bridges, 1 Cranch C. C. 477, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,617.

[f] It seems the proper practice is to introduce the newspapers which it is claimed jurors have read, and interrogate the editors thereof as to the extent to which the reports are verbatim reports of the evidence, where the source of the information on which opinions of jurors were formed is being investigated. *State v. lenges to show that the juror is not qualified;⁴⁵ but the challenging party having shown a prima facie ground for challenge, the burden shifts to show it does not exist.⁴⁶ Under the statute providing for examination on motion, the court determines the question according to the preponderance of the evidence as offered by either side.⁴⁷ If it appears probable that a juror is not indifferent between the parties he should be rejected, even in civil cases;⁴⁸ and in criminal cases doubts should always be resolved in favor of the accused,⁴⁹ so the best rule is to reject a juror in a criminal case on defendant's challenge whenever there is a reasonable doubt of the juror's impartiality.⁵⁰

[b] Though Ground of Exclusion Not Sufficient.—Though the bias may not have been so strong as to render it positively improper to allow the juror to be sworn, it was desirable to submit the case to jurors having no bias, and the trial court therefore exercised a sound discretion in excluding him. *Queen v. k. *Determination of Challenge.*⁵¹—Some statutes provide generally that the same proceedings shall be had as on the trial of a challenge to the panel.⁵² The challenge should be promptly decided, by express provision of statute in some states.⁵³ Argument of counsel need not be permitted.⁵⁴ The competency or incompetency of a juror is to be determined from his whole examination and not merely from detached statements;⁵⁵ his statements and matters of record must be con-

[a] Where the trial court is in any doubt it is always better to exclude the juror to the end that a perfectly free and fair jury may be obtained. State v. Buralli, 27 Nev. 41, 71 Pac. 532.

[b] Where There Is "Serious Doubt."—In all cases "where there is a possibility for serious doubt as to the impartiality of a juror, from whatever cause" the court should exclude him. Dreyer v. State, 11 Tex. App. 631.

[c] Error in Excluding Will Be Harmless.—"When doubts arise, in such inquiries, an error in favor of the absolute impartiality of jurors can do no harm. But an error the other way may easily defeat the ends of justice." State v. Chatham Nat. Bank, 10 Mo. App. 482.

[a] All His Statements Must Be Taken Together.—This is "a principle of interpretation prevailing in logic, rhetoric, ethics and philosophy," which applies to jurors and witnesses alike. Butler v. State, 97 Ind. 378.

[b] Though portions of the testimony might give rise to a different inference, the ruling of the trial court will not be disturbed where the whole examination justifies the ruling. Marquez v. Territory, 13 Ariz. 135, 108 Pac. 258.

[c] Whole Examination and Demeanor of Juror Considered.—Where questions propounded were based largely on assumption and facts not supported by the record, and the juror had no knowledge of the facts in the case, nor opinion as to the guilt or innocence of defendant, the trial judge may consider the whole examination and the demeanor of the juror and did not abuse his discretion in holding the juror competent and without actual bias. State v. Gohl, 46 Wash. 408, 90 Pac. 259.

[d] Not From Single Statement Indicating Bias.—The determination as to competency is to be drawn, not from the answer to one question which may indicate bias, but from the whole examination. Baker v. Borello, 136 Cal. 160, 68 Pac. 591.

[e] Correct Answer Not Given at Once, Not Necessarily Disqualifying.—"Where good faith is manifested and the juror evidences the intention of deciding correctly, his failure to state at the moment that a question is propounded to him that he will comply with a particular provision of law will not always be sufficient to render him incompetent." State v. Rodriguez, 115 La. 1004, 40 So. 438.

sidered together.⁵⁶ The court is not bound exclusively by the answers of the juror as to his bias or prejudice.⁵⁷ Nor are jurors to be held incompetent on their mere supposition that they may be.⁵⁸ Where an answer to a second question shows that a previous question was misunderstood and removes the ground for challenge, the court properly overrules the challenge;⁵⁹ but where the juror has been coerced by threats of contempt, into changing his answers,⁶⁰ the court should ex-

[f] One Statement as to Burden of Proof Not Conclusive.—Where it appears from the whole examination that the juror will be guided by the instructions of the court on the presumption of innocence, burden of proof, etc., the court's discretion in overruling a challenge for actual bias will not be reversed notwithstanding that the juror in answer to certain questions said he would throw the burden of proving innocence upon the accused. People v. Sampo, 17 Cal. App. 135, 118 Pac. 957.

[g] Where Juror Failed To Understand Some Questions.—The mere fact that the juror does not understand some of the technical language used by the counsel and the court in examining into his competency, and so gives contradictory or apparently disqualifying answers, is no ground for reversal where from the examination as a whole it appears that when he understood the questions clearly his answers were satisfactory and showed him impartial. Keeler v. State, 73 Neb. 441, 103 N. W. 64.

[h] Answers Made on Misconception of Law.—The rule that a juror who has once expressed himself as entertaining a certain view on a question, cannot be heard to say he can lay aside that view and try the case without reference to it, does not apply where the juror has answered questions without clearly understanding their import, as where he answers questions involving the law of certain defenses, and upon further questioning discloses that he had a mistaken idea of the law which he is willing to lay aside under the court's instructions. State v. Coney, 31 Wash. 122, 71 Pac. 783.

56. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Downey, 85 Ill. App. 175.

[a] All Statements in Another Case Must Be Considered.—In determining the question of concealment based on the juror's alleged statements in another similar case, the whole examination in that other case must be considered and not mere isolated sentences. Hern v. Southern Pac. Co., 29 Utah 127, 81 Pac. 902.

[b] Juror's Statement Sufficient Though Record May Contradict.—In determining whether a juror is incompetent because he has a case "pending for trial," the court should not confine his examination merely to the "trial list" for the case might be put on at any time by agreement. If from the juror's voir dire it appears he has such case pending the challenge should be allowed. Chicago, R. I. & P. Ry. Co. v. Downey, 85 Ill. App. 175.

57. Johnson v. State, 1 Okla. Crim. 221, 97 Pac. 1059, court may take steps to ascertain the disposition of the juror toward the defendant.

[a] Impression of Fairness and Not Merely Statements.—It is not merely what a juror says concerning his attitude toward the case, for he may be either over-sensitive, or desirous to evade sitting on the jury, but it is the impression for fairness or unfairness, which he makes upon the trial judge, that determines his impartiality. Territory v. Robello, 20 Hawaii 7.

[b] May Consider Juror's Character and Individuality.—The state of mind of the juror cannot in every case be determined from his answers to the questions but so much depends on his character and individuality that "the same answers made by two individuals may disqualify the one, but not necessarily the other." State v. Thorne, 41 Utah 114, 126 Pac. 286, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 90.

[a] Trial Judge Thought Juror Trying To Evade Duty.—The trial judge because of the juror's contradictory answers believed he was trying to evade jury duty and threatened him with contempt if he persisted in contradictory statements. The juror thereafter made his answers more in conformity to the proposition of law the court was trying to make clear. The supreme court said it was not good practice to accept a juror who had been so threatened, whether the answers for which he was deemed in contempt were to questions of law or fact, since the suspicion must remain that the juror would be influenced by his desire to answer in such a way as not to incur the threatened punishment, rather than in a frank manner disclosing the true state of his mind. *State v. [f] Juror Stated Would Not Convict.—Under statute permitting juror to be challenged after he is sworn, it is proper to permit prosecution to re-examine a juror where an affidavit is produced showing that the juror had stated he would not convict defendant. State v. Ames, 91 Minn. 365, 98 N. W. 190.

[g] Court's Attention Called to Closer Relationship.—It was proper to permit a re-examination after acceptance and the jury had been sworn but before any evidence was introduced, where the court's attention was called to a matter indicating a closer business arrangement between the juror and one of the parties, than had been brought out on the original examination. Quay v. Duluth, etc. R. Co., 153 Mich. 567, 116 N. W. 1101, 18 L. R. A. (N. S.) 250.

[h] Permitted after the jurors had been allowed to separate, to see if anything had influenced them during the interim. People v. Evans, 72 Mich. 367, 40 N. W. 473.

[i] That a newspaper has printed a prejudicial account of the murder defendant is charged with committing, and of the empaneling of the jury, is no ground to challenge the whole array though it may have been a proper basis upon which to further examine the jurors already obtained upon the panel. *State v. his acceptance; but it is purely a discretionary matter,⁶⁵ and the request is properly refused in the absence of some showing, excusing the failure to bring the matter out on the first examination.⁶⁶ That the same jury has decided some matters at issue between the parties does not give the right to a re-examination before considering other matters.⁶⁷ The trial should not be stopped for the purpose of re-examining jurors as to the effect upon them of events happening in the court room during the trial.⁶⁸ Permitting the prosecution to ask an excluded juror further questions is harmless where the juror was

65. Belt v. People, 97 Ill. 461, it is a discretionary right "the same as permitting a further question to be asked of a witness after his examination has been closed."

[a] Not Error To Refuse Retrial of Challenge.—It is not error for the court to deny defendant's motion for a retrial of certain challenges after the jury has been completed and sworn to try the case. People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328, 19 Pac. 161.

[b] Appearance of Newspaper Article During Recess.—One cannot as a matter of right claim the privilege of re-examining jurors after the panel has been completed and the recess of forty-eight hours has been taken, under the statute, in which to prepare peremptory challenges. The party must at least make some showing that something has meanwhile occurred to bias or prejudice the jurors. The mere fact that a newspaper article has appeared is not sufficient reason for giving the counsel permission to ask the jurors whether they read it. In the absence of even a statement by counsel that he had reason to believe some juror had read the article, the court is justified in assuming that no juror has disobeyed the court's instructions. State v. Rose, 92 Mo. 201, 4 S. W. 733, explaining State v. Collins, 86 Mo. 245.

[c] Must Appear That Relationship Was Disqualifying.—There was no abuse of discretion in refusing a party the right to re-examine where the only matter it was desired to inquire into was the juror's acquaintanceship with opposing counsel and there was nothing to show that was of a disqualifying nature. Vojta v. Pelikan, 15 Mo. App. 471.

66. State v. Donelon, 45 La. Ann. 744, 12 So. 922.

[a] That the question counsel now desired to ask "was overlooked," is not a sufficient excuse. Ferrell v. State, 45 Fla. 26, 34 So. 220.

[b] Properly Refused Where Matter Disclosed on Examination.—The juror having stated that he had formed an opinion sufficient to warrant a challenge for cause, but defendant having passed him and the prosecution having accepted him after further examination, defendant cannot complain of the court's refusal to permit a further examination. People v. Stonecipher, 6 Cal. 405.

[c] Applied to Struck Jury.—Where jury was being selected by striking, one cannot have a restriking where he makes no showing of due diligence to ascertain the partiality of the juror at the time of striking. Central R., etc. Co. v. Kent, 87 Ga. 402, 13 S. E. 502.

67. People v. Connor, 142 N. Y. 130, 36 N. E. 807.

Connor*, 142 N. Y. 130, 36 N. E. 807.

[b] In Condemnation Proceedings on Trial of Damages.—Where a separate jury has been demanded and denied, the defendant upon the matter of his damages coming up to be heard has no right to examine the individual jurors as to the then state of their minds. finally excluded.⁶⁹ It is proper to retender an excluded juror upon his returning to court and stating that he had incorrectly answered a question.⁷⁰

(II.) Procedure and Determination. — The court may itself re-examine a juror.⁷¹ A proper practice is to bring the matter to the court's attention by affidavit.⁷² The application for re-examination should set out the cause therefor.⁷³ On re-examination the juror is subject to discharge for the same reasons which would have warranted his discharge in the first instance;⁷⁴ and the circumstances may be such as to warrant a more stringent rule of exclusion than would have been warranted in the first instance;⁷⁵ but the court cannot arbitrarily set up a standard of its own beyond the statutory requirements.⁷⁶

[b] Frivolous To Except Where Court Asked Juror If He Understood Questions.—A bill of exceptions was deemed frivolous where the court on the suggestion of the district attorney asked a juror if he had understood certain questions, to which the juror replied affirmatively and remained on the jury. State v. Offutt, 38 La. Ann. 364, 365.

[c] Defendant Cannot Complain Though He Did Not Join in Request. There is clearly nothing of which defendant can complain, where the court re-examined a juror on the prosecuting attorney's suggestion and after such examination overruled the prosecution's challenge for cause. Defendant did not join in asking that the juror be excluded. Vaughan v. State, 58 Ark. 353, 24 S. W. 885.

[a] Where the jury was permitted to separate on the re-examination, one should have been excused who had been exposed to the influence of public opinion, and had heard the case talked about by a number of people, notwithstanding the rule that mere knowledge does not disqualify. But having been chosen as a juror, to allow him to take into the jury box that knowledge of public sentiment was as bad as introducing evidence of public sentiment. People v. Evans, 72 Mich. 367, 40 N. W. 473.

76. People v. Schmitz, 7 Cal. App. 330, 94 Pac. 407, 419.

m. *Effect of Errors.*⁷⁷ — (I.) General Rules. — The decision of triers at common law was not subject to review;⁷⁸ and the same rule obtains where the court acts as trier by consent of the parties.⁷⁹ That the common-law decisions of triers was final does not affect the right to review decisions by the court which raise legal questions, however;⁸⁰ the trial court clearly has the right to revise its own rulings in the course of impaneling the jury.⁸¹ Errors of law by the court in respect to the proceedings before the triers is reviewable;⁸² and for refusing to appoint triers in a proper case, exception lies.⁸³ Where the power to determine the competency of jurors is committed to the trial court, its action is subject to review,⁸⁴ even where it was trying a challenge to the favor.⁸⁵ If the facts are undisputed, the trial court has ant not shown to have been within the statutory degree. It amounts to giving the prosecution an additional peremptory. People v. Schmitz, 7 Cal. App. 330, 94 Pac. 407, 419.

[a] Construing Oklahoma Statute. The decision of the trial court under that part of Rev. Laws, §4997, referring to jurors against whom no principal cause of challenge has been alleged, is before it only a question of law, which is, of course, reviewable;⁸⁶ but the rule obtains that in so far as the court will not review questions of fact, a challenge to the favor may not present a reviewable question.⁸⁷ Ordinarily the question of prejudice, bias, or indifferency is one of fact only and so not reviewable;⁸⁸ and questions of competency are at least mixed questions of law and fact, and not reviewable.⁸⁹ Even like the decision of the "challenges for favor" in the old books, and is not reviewable except for clear abuse of discretion. Border v. Carrabine, 30 Okla. 740, 120 Pac. 1087.

86. Bliss v. Caille Bros. Co., 149 Mich. 601, 113 N. W. 317, following Holt v. People, 13 Mich. 224.

[a] While great deference is paid to it, the ruling is not conclusive, and where the facts are practically undisputed it is subject to review like other discretionary matters. Theobald v. St. Louis Transit Co., 191 Mo. 395, 90 S. W. 354.

87. U. S.—United States v. McHenry, 6 Blatchf. 503, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,681. Colo.—Imboden v. People, 40 Colo. 142, 90 Pac. 608, citing Jones v. People, 6 Colo. 452, 45 Am. L. 381, 4 Atl. 449.

[a] The Statute Has Not Changed the Rule.—Although challenge to the favor is no longer tried by triers, the rules applicable to a review have not been altered. Adjudications as to the indifference of the juror, made upon facts legally proved, are adjudications of fact which cannot be reviewed. Moschell v. State, 53 N. J. L. 498, 22 Atl. 50.

[b] Findings of law and fact on challenges to the favor are not reviewable. State v. Vick, 132 N. C. 995, 43 S. E. 626; Baker v. Harris, 60 N. C. 271; State v. Benton, 19 N. C. 196.

[a] No Review Where Court Tries the Fact.—That the court as the "trier of the facts" found as a fact that a juror was indifferent, is not reviewable. State v. Register, 133 N. C. 746, 46 S. E. 21; State v. Benton, 19 N. C. 196.

[b] On a challenge propter affectum the court tries the fact unless triers are demanded "and of the fact found, either by the court or the triers there is no review." State v. Mercer, 67 N. C. 266.

[c] No Reversal Where There Is Evidence To Sustain.—On overruling of a challenge for bias and prejudice, if there be evidence to sustain the court's decision, the reviewing court will not reverse as the trial court's decision rests in its sound discretion. Wilburn v. Territory, 10 N. M. 402, 62 Pac. 968.

[d] Decision Must Be so Unsupported by Evidence as to Amount to Abuse of Discretion.—The decision is left to the discretion of the court to determine upon the evidence; and the decision must stand unless it is so unsupported by evidence as to be an abuse of sound discretion. Sansouwer v. Glenlyon Dye Works, 28 R. I. 539, 68 Atl. 545.

[e] Especially Where Affidavits on New Trial Conflicting.—The trial court, having found a juror free from prejudice, both in his voir dire examination and after conflicting affidavits on motion for a new trial, the supreme court will not disturb its findings. Hughes v. State, 109 Wis. 397, 85 N. W. 333, following Schuster v. State, 80 Wis. 107, 49 N. W. 30. See also Embry v. State, 138 Ga. 464, 75 S. E. 604; Carthaus v. State, 78 Wis. 560, 47 N. W. 629.

89. McCarthy v. Cass Ave. & F. Ry. Co., 92 Mo. 536, 4 S. W. 516.

[a] No Reversal Where Decision on Mixed Law and Fact.—In a prosecution of joint defendants for the unlawful sale of liquor in a certain place, the evidence showing that a juror knew of his own knowledge that one of the defendants sold intoxicating liquors there, the decision of the court in excluding him on the state's challenge for cause was upon a mixed question of law and fact as to whether such knowledge raised the presumption of challenges based on statutory requirements are not reviewable in so far as they involve questions of fact,⁹⁰ though the distinction must sometimes be drawn that a disqualification under the statute may present a pure question of law, while for other causes it may be a question of fact.⁹¹ In other words, the ruling of the court is generally held partiality or not, and its finding ought not to be set aside, unless it clearly appears that a contrary finding should have been made and that the case is one in which the law left nothing to the "conscience or discretion" of the trial court. State v. Chapman, 1 S. D. 414, 47 N. W. 411, 10 L. R. A. 432.

[b] The qualification of a juror is a mixed question of law and fact submitted to the discretion of the court, and its exercise thereof will not be disturbed unless manifest error, to the prejudice of accused, is disclosed. Horton v. United States, 15 App. Cas. (D. C.) 310. See also Howgate v. United States, 7 App. Cas. (D. C.) 217.

[c] Whether a prospective juror is fair and impartial is a mixed question of law and fact to be determined in the first instance by the trial judge, and will be interfered with only when the evidence on voir dire is of such a character that it appears as a matter of law that the juror is so prejudiced or biased as to be unfair. Graybill v. De Young, 146 Cal. 421, 80 Pac. 618.

90. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. King, 161 Ky. 324, 170 S. W. 938.

[a] Rule Under New York Code.

(1) Errors of law or fact, or both, may be reviewed "as where an issue of fact presented by the pleadings is tried by the court." Code Civ. Proc., §1180. (2) In Butler v. Glens Falls, etc. R. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 112, 118, 24 N. E. 187, the court says: "We ought not to interfere with a ruling sustaining a challenge, unless the evidence be of such a nature that in no possible view could it fairly be regarded as constituting even plausible ground for the decision." (3) If there was error in sustaining a challenge, reversal follows though the case was tried by a competent jury. Hildreth v. City of Troy, 161 N. Y. 234, 4 N. E. 559, 54 Am. Rep. 686. (4) But Code Crim. Proc., §415, provides that exceptions may be taken by defendant "upon a matter of law by which his substantial rights are prejudiced and not otherwise. . . .

In admitting or rejecting testimony on the trial of a challenge for actual bias to any juror who participated in the verdict, or in allowing or disallowing such challenge." This section "restored the law as it originally stood and the decision of the trial judge on the question of indifference is not reviewable, except in the absence of evidence to support it, in which case it is an error of law to which an exception lies." People v. McQuade, 110 N. Y. 284, 18 N. E. 156, 1 L. R. A. 273, distinguishing Thomas v. People, 67 N. Y. 218, and Greenfield v. People, 74 N. Y. 277 as (5) having been decided under the act of 1873 which provided for a review on writ of error or certiorari of any decision of the court on the trial of a challenge.

[b] Rule Under South Dakota Statute.—(1) Under Comp. Laws 7439 (Code Crim. Proc., §419), providing that exceptions may be taken only to decisions of law in allowing or disallowing a challenge, and to the improper admission or exclusion of evidence on the trial of a challenge, there is no right to except to the finding of the judge on the facts. State v. Chapman, 1 S. D. 414, 47 N. W. 411, 10 L. R. A. 432. (2) "The statute having prescribed the grounds for disqualification, when either of these grounds appear the trial court will reject the juror, but, if after a full examination of the juror personally, or by the testimony of other persons, the trial court finds upon the question, its decision will not be reversed unless it is made to appear that there was no legal evidence to support the judgment of the court below upon that issue." Haugen v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 3 S. D. 394, 53 N. W. 769.

91. Coppersmith v. Mound City Ry. Co., 51 Mo. App. 357.

[a] Distinction Between "Indifference" and Statutory Requirement.—(1) "Numerous cases from State v. Dodson, 16 S. C. 459, to State v. Roberson, 54 S. C. 151, construing the statute, declare that it invests the Circuit not subject to exception, unless it makes an error of law,⁹² or prejudices the defendant's rights.⁹³ By statute, the right of review has been denied in some jurisdictions;⁹⁴ and under such a statute reversal has

Court with exclusive power to determine whether a juror after examination on his voir dire, is indifferent in the cause. Whether a juror is indifferent in the cause is a question of fact which is not reviewable in this court, unless perhaps it should appear that the conclusion of the circuit court is wholly without any evidence to support it." State v. Williamson, 65 S. C. 242, 43 S. E. 671. See also State v. Haines, 36 S. C. 504, 15 S. E. 555; State v. Prater, 26 S. C. 198, 2 S. E. 108. (2) If the facts show that the juror did not have a qualification required by the constitution, the ruling may be set aside and a new trial granted on the ground that there has been no trial before a valid jury. State v. Robertson, 54 S. C. 147, 31 S. E. 868.

[b] Distinction Applied as Between Principal Cause and Challenge to Favor.—State v. Potter, 18 Conn. 166; Shoemaker v. State, 3 Wis. 823.

[c] A principal ground of challenge raises a question of law only, and for a wrongful decision thereon reversal may follow. But a challenge to the favor raises a question of fact, the decision of the trial court is based on the evidence, and a review thereof is limited by the rules respecting review of questions of fact. Butler v. Glens Falls, etc. St. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 112, 24 N. E. 187. See also People v. McQuade, 110 N. Y. 284, 18 N. E. 156, 1 L. R. A. 273.

[d] So in Turner v. State, 114 Ga. 421, 40 S. E. 308, the court says, in effect, that where the court decides a challenge to the favor, its decision is on a footing with that of triers, and is final and conclusive. But where the court is asked to set jurors aside because their answers on voir dire show they are disqualified, and no further evidence is introduced, the challenge is in effect one for principal cause; the decision is one of law only and is reviewable.

[b] Statute Did Not Narrow the Discretion.—The general rule is that the decision of the trial court on all challenges, other than principal challenges, is final and conclusive. The statute did not narrow the discretion of the trier. Dew v. McDivitt, 31 Ohio St. 139. See also Serviss v. Stockstill, 30 Ohio St. 418.

93. Pierson v. State, 18 Tex. App. 524; Wade v. State, 12 Tex. App. 358.

[a] As in other cases, one complaining of the way the jury was selected must show in what respect, if any, he was prejudiced. State v. Cooper, 74 W. Va. 472, 82 S. E. 358.

[b] The finding on the juror's impartiality will not be treated as erroneous "unless the error is clear." Territory v. Robello, 20 Hawaii 7. See also King v. Ah Ko, 4 Hawaii 301.

94. See generally the statutes, and Thurman v. Com., 154 Ky. 555, 157 S. W. 919; State v. Duvall, 135 La. 710, 65 So. 904; State v. Blue, 134 La. 561, 64 So. 411; *State v. [a] In Deaton v. Com., 157 Ky. 308, 163 S. W. 204, the court says that beginning with Adwell v. Com., 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 310, decided in 1856, and ending with Daniel v. Com., 154 Ky. 601, 157 S. W. 1127, decided in 1913, there has been a long line of decisions that these challenges could not be re-

been denied even where the trial court refused to permit the examination of individual jurors.⁹⁵

Great latitude of discretion is necessarily given to the trial court in the trial of the challenge,⁹⁶ and where the decision is reviewable, the rule is not to interfere unless that discretion is abused;⁹⁷ and there viewed. Where the court has expressed its opinion it has been done merely to secure a uniform administration of the criminal law. Moreover the section is not unconstitutional as the right of appeal itself is not guaranteed by the constitution. The legislature so long as it retains the right of trial by jury may make such regulations as it sees fit as to the manner of selecting that jury and may leave the determination with the circuit court. [b] Must Be Grossly Abused or Contrary to Law.—"In the trial of challenges for cause a large discretion is necessarily confided in the judge, and the same will not be revised on error or appeal unless it appears to have been grossly abused or exercised contrary to law." Territory v. Pratt, 6 Dak. 483, 43 N. W. 711.

[c] Violation of Law or Gross and Injurious Exercise of Discretion.—Head v. State, 44 Miss. 731; Gilliam v. Brown, 43 Miss. 641.

[d] Applied as to Prejudice.—The finding of the trial court on the question of prejudice growing out of his state of mind not reviewable in absence of abuse of discretion. State v. Huffman, 86 Ohio St. 229, 99 N. E. 295, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 677.

[e] Finding that a juror is indifferent is a matter in the discretion of the trial judge, and not reviewable. State v. Banner, 149 N. C. 519, 63 S. E. 84.

[f] Especially in Absence of Statutory Regulation or Court Rule.—"In so far as there is an absence of statutory regulation or rule of court, the trial court must necessarily exercise a very large discretion in the impaneling of a jury; and the exercise of such discretion will not be disturbed except in case of its abuse or the violation of some rule of law." Grace v. Dempsey, 75 Wis. 213, 43 N. W. 1127.

[g] Applied to Statutory Ground Based on Court's Opinion.—The ruling of the trial court upon the statutory ground of challenge for a cause "which in the opinion of the court renders him an unfit person to sit on the jury," is addressed to the court's discretion, and must be strong grounds for believing that the discretion has been abused.⁹⁸ At the same time the discretion is not unlimited.⁹⁹ Unless the trial court's decision was clearly against the evidence it should not be disturbed.¹ So where the answers to questions are contradictory or inconsistent, there arises a conflict of evidence, the trial court's decision whereof will not be disturbed.²

Where after a full examination, the juror's incompetency is doubtful there should be no reversal,³ and the trial court having not only his observation and examination to guide him, but often personal acquaintance with the jurors, his judgment should not be overruled unless error is manifest.⁴ The mere fact that the reviewing court thinks reversal cannot be had unless that discretion be abused. Southern Kansas Ry. Co. v. Sage, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 38, 94 S. W. 1074.

[h] Applied to Ruling as to Incompetency Growing Out of Business Relations.—Determination by the trial court of the question of fact as to whether jurors were rendered incompetent by their business relationship with a bank of which the party was president or chief owner, will not be reviewed unless the trial court's discretion has been abused. Twitchell v. Thompson, 78 Ore. 285, 153 Pac. 45; Harrison v. Pacific Ry., etc. Co., 72 Ore. 553, 144 Pac. 91.

[i] The determination of actual bias under the code rests in the sound discretion of the trial court, and its ruling will not be disturbed on appeal in the absence of some showing of abuse thereof. State v. Morse, 35 S. D. 18, 150 N. W. 293.

the challenge to the favor should have been allowed,⁵ or that it would have been safer to allow a challenge for actual bias,⁶ is no ground for reversal of the judgment. An error in rejecting a juror is not, as a general thing, as prejudicial as an error committed in accepting one;⁷ and generally the rulings of the trial court in respect to challenges cannot be reviewed where the jury can and will try solely on the evidence and law of the case.⁸

Where a person other than the one summoned has been permitted to serve on the jury by mistake, the error is harmless provided he was in all respects qualified and impartial.⁹ Nor is it ground for [d] Though the answers of the juror disclose a state of mind closely bordering upon prejudice, he having asserted he can try the defendant fairly, it is for the trial court to determine and his rulings will not be disturbed. People v. Hill, 20 Cal. App. 407, 129 Pac. 475.

[a] Over-caution Is Not Ground for Reversal.—“It is no ground of error for the court to be more cautious and strict in securing an impartial jury than the law actually required.” Atlas Min. Co. v. Johnston, 23 Mich. 36.

[b] Rejection Is Usually Harmless; Retention May Be Prejudicial.—“There is an immense difference between discharging a juror, and retaining him. To discharge him can seldom, if ever, do any harm; while to retain him, if his competency is doubtful, may do an immense injury to one party or the other.” State v. Miller, 29 Kan. 43.

[c] In One Case No Competent Jury; in Other May Be Harmless.—If an incompetent person be permitted to sit over defendant's objection, the judgment is reversed because he has not been tried by a lawful jury. But the rejection of a qualified juror may do him no harm where a competent jury was selected. People v. Arceo, 32 Cal. 40.

[d] Rule in One Case Is Reverse of the Other.—“There is, however, a wide difference between excusing a competent juror and retaining an incompetent. The rule is just the reverse unless the party objecting fails to exercise all of his peremptory challenges.” City of Guthrie v. Shaffer, 7 Okla. 459, 54 Pac. 698.

[e] The Trial Court's Discretion in Rejecting Jurors Is Greater Than in Retaining Them.—Retention of a juror who is not qualified results in prejudice to the party. But if there be substantial doubt as to the juror's competency, the trial court's discretion in excusing him should never be questioned on appeal. Rhea v. State, 63 Neb. 461, 88 N. W. 789, 64 Neb. 889, 97 N. W. 1070.

[b] Where a son was under age and answered to his father's name and served, the verdict was set aside. King v. Tremaine, 7 D. & R. 684, 16 E. C. L. 318, distinguishing Hill v. Yates, 12 East 229, 104 Eng. Reprint 89, because the juror was disqualified.

[c] Contrary Holding.—Where a juror who was summoned did not attend but another served in his place, all parties being ignorant of the substitution, the verdict was set aside. Dayton v. Church, 7 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 367, following People v. Ransom, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 417.

reversal that the person regularly summoned served, or was called, under a wrong name.¹⁰

The presumption on appeal is that one was qualified¹¹ who served on 10. State v. Hunt, 141 Mo. 626, 43 S. W. 389, the juror had shown himself qualified on his voir dire, and the mistake was corrected by the court as soon as it was discovered.

[a] Wrong Name Called by Clerk. That a person has served by a wrong name, he being in all respects qualified, and the error being one of inadvertence arising through the calling of the wrong name by the clerk, and it not appearing that the complaining party had desired to challenge him, no injury has occurred and there can be no reversal. Com. v. Parsons, 139 Mass. 281, 31 N. E. 767.

[b] A mere dissimilarity in names of the jurors and those on the sheriff's return is not sufficient to show that persons not summoned served on the jury. The difference may be due to a mere typographical or clerical error which could not prejudice defendant, and a reversal cannot be had therefor. People v. O'Brien, 88 Cal. 483, 26 Pac. 362.

[c] Error Not Known to Juror. The mere fact that a juror, otherwise competent, has been drawn, summoned and sworn to try the case under a name by which he was known, but to which he was not legally entitled is no ground for setting aside the verdict. The fact that the name he went by was not his legal name was not discovered until after verdict, and was not known to himself until the motion for a new trial was made. State v. Caymo, 108 La. 218, 32 So. 351.

[d] A mere misdescription of the juror is no ground for reversal. The individual described in the venire as residing at a certain place was summoned, appeared, was examined, accepted by both sides, and served as a juror. On drawing his warrant he disclosed that his real name was "Horton Hall" instead of "Hall Horton," as appeared on the jury list. State v. Newcomb, 58 Wash. 444, 109 Pac. 355.

[a] Not To Be Determined by Printed Record Alone.—Decision as to competency is very much within the trial court's discretion. He sees and hears the juror, and the competency is not to be judged solely by the printed record of the juror's answers. Com. v. Sushinskie, 242 Pa. 406, 89 Atl. 564.

[b] Competency Presumed Where Record Evidence Not Produced.—Where it was doubtful whether the juror had served within the time forbidden by statute, and the court suggested that the record would show, the challenger not having introduced the record, the presumption is that the challenges were properly overruled. State v. Hamilton, 74 Kan. 461, 87 Pac. 363.

[c] Presumed From Use of Word "Selected."—Where the record says jurors "were drawn, selected, tried and sworn in the manner required by law," it is presumed that by the word "selected" it is intended that the jurors possessed all legal qualifications, and that they were selected according to law. Ohio River R. Co. v. Blake, 38 W. Va. 718, 18 S. E. 957.

[d] Though the court may not expressly find that it was "satisfied" that the juror could render an impartial verdict, the fact that the juror was permitted to serve, includes, by necessary implication, a finding by the court that it was so satisfied. Goins v. State, 46 Ohio St. 457, 21 N. E. 476.

[e] Presumption That Juror Was Freeholder.—Where a challenge to a juror, because he was not a "householder," has been overruled, it will be presumed, in the absence of anything

a jury, and that the jury was impartial.¹² It will be assumed where the court overruled a challenge based upon the juror's expression of an opinion, that the court did not find such an expression as would render the juror incompetent.¹³

(II.) Errors in Examination.¹⁴ — Merely restricting the right to question jurors to an extent not warranted is not ground for reversal where no prejudice results,¹⁵ as where the juror was subsequently excused on challenge for cause,¹⁶ or did not sit in the case because excused for physical defects,¹⁷ or for some reason not clearly appearing.¹⁸

Errors in overruling questions on voir dire are immaterial, where court sustained a demurrer to the evidence.¹⁹ But where the evidence was evenly balanced reversal has been had because the court refused counsel the right to question jurors to an extent clearly proper;²⁰ and to the contrary in the record, that the juror was a "freeholder," the statute reading "householder or freeholder," and the latter qualification not necessitating that the juror be a householder. McKnight v. Seattle, 39 Wash. 516, 81 Pac. 998.

[f] No Presumption of Disqualification Because of Newspaper Article. The reviewing court will not presume that jurors were disqualified merely because an article prejudicial to defendant was printed in a newspaper having circulation in the county where the trial was had. State v. Martin, 29 Mont. 273, 74 Pac. 725.

[g] Presumption May Be Overcome by Subsequent Event.—Where, subsequent to the trial, the juror became naturalized, the presumption is that he was an alien at the time of trial, and the burden then shifts to those seeking to uphold the verdict. Richards v. Moore, 69 Vt. 449, 15 Atl. 119.

[a] Mere failure to permit a general question as to bias and interest will not be ground for reversal in the absence of some showing that selection of an impartial jury was interfered with. Clay v. Western Maryland R. R. Co., 221 Pa. 439, 70 Atl. 807.

[b] Where juror answered the question before the court overruled it, counsel had the benefit thereof and could not complain. Replying to the contention that by the ruling counsel were restrained from asking the same question of subsequent jurors, the court held that the question was properly overruled. State v. Thorne, 41 Utah 414, 126 Pac. 286, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 90.

[c] Question Answered in Response to Other Questions.—Where a question has been disallowed, but juror subsequently answers it in response to other questions, and the challenge for cause, overruled, is based on that answer, there is nothing in which to base a claim of error in the disallowance of the question. Southern Pacific Co. v. Rauh, 49 Fed. 696, 1 C. C. A. 416.

[d] Juror Answered in Another Manner.—Though the prisoner has exhausted his peremptories, he is not entitled to a reversal merely because the court refused to permit a question to be answered where the juror had answered it in another manner. State v. Bethune, 93 S. C. 195, 75 S. E. 281.

in a capital case reversal has been had for the refusal to permit a question the answer to which must have disclosed the juror's bias.²¹ The asking of an improper question is not, of itself, ground for reversal.²² Where the juror sat in the case an error in overruling a proper question is waived if the juror was not challenged either for cause or peremptorily.²³

Error in the form of a question cannot be complained of by one who has made a similar error.²⁴ It will not be presumed that the jury were prejudiced by questions asked on their voir dire,²⁵ especially where the court gave the jury specific instructions against that effect.²⁶ Even if a question was put in the form of a hypothetical instruction which the court could not have made, no harm resulted where the juror was properly excluded on his answers to all the questions,²⁷ or where the form of the question put by counsel was not proper, but the juror did not serve.²⁸ If one considers that the court has gone so far in permitting questions on voir dire as to create prejudice in the minds of the jury, it is his duty to ask for an instruction repelling any such prejudice.²⁹ If the reviewing court thinks the party has been prejudiced by the ruling on the questions, it may reverse, though strictly the party had waived his rights by failure to challenge.³⁰

Wright*, 7 Ala. App. 255, 60 So. 1006.

[b] No Improper Juror Being Shown To Have Sat.—The permitting of a question improper because it suggests that the juror may not be governed by his oath is harmless, where it does not appear that any improper juror sat in the case. Fuller v. State, 50 Tex. Crim. 14, 95 S. W. 541.

[c] Answer Disclosed No Incompetency and Matter Not Followed Up. Assuming it was improper to allow a certain question to be asked and answered, no substantial error appears where the jurors' answers did not disclose incompetency and the matter was not pursued further. People v. Plyler, 126 Cal. 379, 58 Pac. 904.

[d] Improper Assumption of Fact Fully Established.—That the judge assumed the existence of a fact material to the prosecution's case, was harmless where the overwhelming testimony supported the fact assumed. State v. David, 131 Mo. 380, 33 S. W. 28.

harmless where one is not deprived of any substantial right;³³ and the mere refusal to hear evidence other than the statements of the juror has been held no ground for reversal since there could, at most, only be a conflict in the evidence.³²

(III.) Erroneous Overruling of Challenge for Cause.³³ — Whether a juror was disqualified for actual bias may be reviewed on an exception to the overruling of the challenge;³⁴ and if the evidence be capable of only one construction, and plainly and clearly shows the bias of the juror, the disallowance may be reviewed;³⁵ but unless the testimony upon the question of actual bias is so clear that the reviewing court can say as a matter of law that the juror was disqualified, the court's ruling will not be disturbed.³⁶ It has also been held that the verdict will not be set aside unless the selection of a disqualified juror was with some wrong intention, or injurious to appellant.³⁷ Where no other conclusion could reasonably have been reached other than as expressed in the verdict, the erroneous overruling of a challenge for cause has been held harmless error in civil cases.³⁸ Where the statute provides for a verdict by less than twelve there is no reversible error in overruling a challenge as to a juror who voted with the minority.³⁹

[b] Only Controverted Fact Proven Against Appellant.—Where a prejudiced juror had been permitted to serve, and the only controverted fact was clearly proven against appellant he cannot complain. Winneshiek Ins. Co. v. Schueller, 60 Ill. 465.

[c] Jurors Disqualified by Opinion But Recovery Just.—Though jurors were, strictly speaking, disqualified who had formed an opinion that plaintiff ought to recover, there being no dispute that defendant had appropriated plaintiff's property, the plaintiff was clearly entitled to recover and it appearing by the record that the damages awarded were much less than plaintiff's claim, it was clear that the jurors were not biased or prejudiced in plaintiff's favor. *Choctaw, O. & T. [a] Rule Applied Where One Juror More Than Necessary Concurred.

In an equity case, errors in selecting the jury are of no vital importance.⁴⁰ An error in overruling a challenge for bias is not cured by an instruction by the court aimed at that bias.⁴¹ If a prisoner is deprived of any right by the court's refusal to sustain his challenge for cause, he was substantially injured and reversal follows.⁴² If the juror served and there was error in overruling a challenge for principal cause,⁴³ or if a juror who is disqualified under the statute has been permitted to serve over defendant's objection,⁴⁴ reversal will follow.

Even in a criminal case there will be no reversal unless some prejudice appears due to non-compliance with statutory provisions.⁴⁵ If no incompetent person sat on the jury, there will be no reversal even in a criminal case,⁴⁶ especially where the verdict was just.⁴⁷

(IV.) Errors in Rejecting Jurors.⁴⁸ — In civil cases particularly the rejection of a juror is almost wholly a matter within the court's discretion,⁴⁹ and reversal will not be had therefor, unless that discretion

Even though a juror was incompetent to serve, the verdict having been concurred in by ten jurors the party is not prejudiced where the statute provides that a concurrence of nine jurors shall be sufficient. Knight v. Kansas City, 138 Mo. App. 153, 119 S. W. 990.

[b] Rule Not Applied Where Some of Majority Subject to Same Challenge. While ordinarily no reversal could be had if it appeared that the juror was not one of the nine who concurred in the verdict, a reversal was granted where it appeared that several of the jurors who did concur were subject to the same challenge, though it did not clearly appear whether the juror in question served or not. *Hunt v. Generally that right of challenge is one of exclusion and not inclusion, see supra, VII, E, 1, b.

That rejection is not generally so prejudicial as inclusion of juror, see supra, VII, E, 4, m, (I).

is abused,⁵⁰ or there is a clear error of law,⁵¹ or some showing of prejudice to the appellant.⁵² Generally the rejection of a juror cannot harm the party in a civil case;⁵³ and it must appear that appellant has been deprived of a fair trial,⁵⁴ or that an incompetent or biased juror served, before there can be a reversal.⁵⁵ Though the panel was thereby exhausted necessitating the calling of bystanders, no prejudice exists in civil cases.⁵⁶

[a] The mere improper exclusion followed by the substitution of an unexceptional juror is not reversible error unless some prejudice or abuse of discretion appear. Thompson v. Douglass, 35 W. Va. 337, 13 S. E. 1015.

[a] Allowance of Challenge on Ground for Exemption.—One cannot complain because the court allowed a challenge for cause based upon a fact entitling jurors to exemption. Though not technically a ground for challenge the party cannot insist upon their serving although they did not claim the exemption. Luebe v. Thorpe, 94 Mich. 268, 54 N. W. 41; McGrail v. Kalamazoo, 94 Mich. 52, 53 N. W. 955.

[b] Though the rejection amounted to giving one party an additional peremptory, so far did it go beyond judicial discretion, the court said it would not reverse on that ground alone, no prejudice to appellant being shown as to the jury which tried the case. But in connection with other errors it was an additional reason for reversal. Joyce v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 219 Mo. 344, 118 S. W. 21.

[a] No Particular Juror Need Sit. It is not necessary to determine whether a challenge for cause was improperly sustained or not. It was not material that the particular juror should sit, and his place was filled by one whose qualifications are not questioned. Loudenback v. Lowry, 4 Ohio Cir. Ct. 65.

[b] Qualified Juror Selected in Place of One Rejected.—Assuming that a qualified juror was improperly excused on the opposing party's challenge, the error is harmless where a juror was selected in his place to whom the party did not object. Southern Pac. Co. v. Rauh, 49 Fed. 696, 1 C. C. A. 416.

[c] New Trial Could Only Result in an Impartial Jury.—Where the error claimed consisted in permitting a re-examination and the rejection of the juror before evidence was introduced, the supreme court said that even if it was erroneous the error could not be corrected for a trial by the jury as at first constituted could not be required and a new trial would only result in a trial by an impartial jury which had already been had. Gray v. Duluth, etc. R. Co., 153 Mich. 567, 116 N. W. 1101, 18 L. R. A. (N. S.) 250. See also Sutton v. Fox, 55 Wis. 531, 13 N. W. 477.

[d] Since one is not entitled to be tried by any particular juror the excluding of a juror is no ground for reversal, where no exception is taken to any juror who tried the case, and it does not appear that appellant did not have full opportunity to exercise all his peremptory challenges. Asevado v. Orr, 100 Cal. 293, 34 Pac. 777.

56. Luebe v. Thorpe, 94 Mich. 268, 54 N. W. 41.

[a] Must Appear Juror Was Not

Even in criminal cases the rejection of jurors is generally not reviewable,⁵⁷ unless the trial court's discretion has been abused,⁵⁸ or there has been some clear violation of law;⁵⁹ and there can be no reversal for an erroneous rejection unless some prejudice appear.⁶⁰ Generally an error in rejecting a juror cannot prejudice the defendant in a criminal case.⁶¹ The allowance of a challenge for implied bias is not subject to exception,⁶² and though the statute permits exceptions to the disallowance of a challenge, there can be no review of its allowance.⁶³ So the general rule is that the improper sustaining of a challenge for cause is no ground for reversal if the jury which tried Acceptable.—"There is nothing to show that the juror so called was not acceptable and a good juror for the purposes of the trial." Geiger v. Payne, 102 Iowa 581, 69 N. W. 554, 71 N. W. 571.

[a] Court's Power To Reject Is Practically Unlimited.—(1) Walsingham v. State, 61 Fla. 67, 56 So. 195, construes Gen. St., §1492 and Declaration of Rights, §11 as giving the trial court practically an unlimited discretion to reject jurors in the interest of obtaining an impartial jury. (2) So in Mathis v. State, 45 Fla. 46, 34 So. 287, it is stated that the trial court's ruling "will not be disturbed or reversed by an appellate court, unless an abuse of sound judicial discretion is shown," following Williams v. State, 45 Fla. 128, 34 So. 279. See also Mims v. State, 42 Fla. 199, 27 So. 865; Edwards v. State, 39 Fla. 753, 23 So. 537.

[b] Even Though a Wrong Reason Be Given.—Prisoner cannot except to the action of the court in excluding a juror, even though a wrong reason may have been given for excluding. State v. Peterson, 149 N. C. 533, 63 S. E. 87.

[c] Challenge Sustained in Wrong Form.—"A judgment will not be reversed simply because a challenge good for favor was sustained in form for cause. As the jurors were incompetent and properly excluded, it matters not here upon what form of challenge they were set aside." Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 25 L. ed. 244.

[d] Unimportant That Jurors Not Sworn Were Not Qualified.—"If the prisoner was tried by lawful jurors, it is after the trial utterly unimportant what were the defects of other jurors, who were summoned and were not sworn." United States v. Cornell, 2 Mason 91, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,868.

[a] The allowance of a challenge is not made ground for exception by the statute, and the omission is based upon the sensible reason that when a person has been tried by a competent jury he has had all his rights preserved. A new trial would do no more as it is the case was free from exception.⁶⁴ If there be substantial doubt as to the juror's competency, the court's discretion will not be interfered with.⁶⁵ One cannot, on appeal, first object to the exclusion of a juror.⁶⁶ It will not be presumed that the ruling of the trial court in excusing a juror prejudiced the defendant.⁶⁷ Defendant cannot complain of the rejection of a juror to whom he objected.⁶⁸ Some states hold that the rejection of a juror on challenge for an insufficient cause is ground for reversal, where the regular panel becomes exhausted.⁶⁹ Where the full panel is not exhausted, the party is not prejudiced by the rejection of jurors.⁷⁰

[a] Where juror was excused through mistake of solicitor general who said his name was not on the jury list, and no objection was made by defendant to the substitution of another, no complaint can be made after verdict. Especially since the mistake could have been discovered by a mere inspection of the list. Hardison v. State, 95 Ga. 257, 22 S. E. 681.

[b] Where juror was excused, though court having misunderstood the answer, the court's attention should have been called to the mistake at once. Boyd v. State, 17 Ga. 194.

[c] Further Inquiry Not Made.—Defendant cannot complain because further inquiry was not made into the exact convictions of jurors as to capital punishment where the court excused them on the state's challenge, and defendant's counsel was not restricted in the matter of making such further inquiry as he desired. Johnson v. State, 24 Neb. 257, 51 N. W. 855.

[d] No Objection, Nor Examination.—Where record wholly fails to show any objection to the exclusion of a juror, or whether any examination of him was had, and objection was made for first time on motion for new trial, it will not be considered on appeal. State v. Jackson, 96 Mo. 200, 9 S. W. 624.

67. State v. Pray, 126 Iowa 249, 99 N. W. 1065.

[a] Presumption That Juror Excused for Cause.—Where the statute requires a full jury of competent jurymen before peremptory challenges must be made, and the record discloses that the juror in question was not on the list when the peremptory challenging began, it sufficiently appears that he was excused for cause, and hence failure to excuse him on defendant's challenge for cause was harmless. *Leigh v. After exhausting his right to strike he was permitted to challenge for cause, and challenge allowed. He had no right to so challenge nor was the ground assigned sufficient. *State v. [a] There could be no prejudice

After acceptance of a juror his erroneous rejection on prosecution's motion and over defendant's objection has been held reversible error.⁷¹

5. Peremptory Challenges.⁷² — a. Nature and History of Right. (I.) In General. — The right to challenge peremptorily comes from the common law with the right of trial by jury itself,⁷³ the various statutes governing the same are usually directory as to the way and manner of exercise.⁷⁴ It is one of defendant's most important rights.⁷⁵ It is a valuable right, which statutes are liberally construed to allow.⁷⁶ The object is to exclude such jurors as the party may deem unfriendly where the number to select from was not thereby illegally reduced. State v. Barker, 46 La. Ann. 798, 15 So. 98.

It is the only method of cutting off underground, malevolent currents, visible at some times to no one except the accused and his counsel, and sometimes not even to both of them." Betts v. United States, 132 Fed. 228.

76. See infra, the cases cited in this note.

[a] The Question Is Has the Statute Deprived Rather Than Does it Permit Right.—Whatever is merciful in its effects, if known to the law and practice ought to be allowed and hence the inquiry in every case should be whether the right of challenge has been taken away by any statute, rather than whether the statute permits it. Hooper v. State, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 422.

[b] Cannot Deprive of Right by Insisting on Special Jury.—Where in trials by the regular jury a prisoner is entitled to eight peremptories and the state to none, and under trial by a special jury both state and defendant are entitled to two peremptories, it is reversible error to compel a prisoner to either consent to being tried by a special jury, when he was legally entitled to a regular jury, or to submit to a continuance. State v. Miller, 6 W. Va. 600.

[c] Changes in Procedure Held Not To Abolish.—Where the statutes have allowed it, changes in procedure will not be construed to have omitted the right unless the statute regulating challenges is such that the right cannot be exercised. Butler v. Hands, 43 Colo. 541, 95 Pac. 920.

[d] Where capital punishment was abolished it was held (1) that the state's right to peremptory challenges was not abrogated. State v. Chadbourne, 74 Me. 506, reviewing the various statutes at length. (2) But the number given was reduced. See State v. Smith, 67 Me. 328.

[e] That Total Number Would Exhaust Regular Panel Does Not Deprive. The right of the prosecution to peremptory challenges is not lost merely because a statute which increases the defendant's number would, if all of the challenges of prosecution and defendant were used, reduce the jury to less than twelve of the regular venire. The court can in such case summon talesmen as in cases where jurors are exor unfit to sit in the trial,⁷⁷ and is not for the purpose merely of obtaining an impartial jury.⁷⁸ In civil cases the prejudice which it is aimed to protect the party against is that which might grow out of the subject-matter of the controversy, while in criminal cases it is designed to protect against personal hatred or dislike of the party being tried.⁷⁹ Where the right is only statutory, it is not to be extended by construction.⁸⁰

In the federal courts, the state law governs in so far as the United States statutes have not regulated.⁸¹

(II.) An Absolute Right.—Peremptory challenges are to be made, or omitted, according to the judgment, will or caprice of the party entitled thereto.⁸² No reason can ever be required;⁸³ statutory provisions used for cause. Fouts v. State, 8 Ohio St. 98.

[f] Increasing to Defendant Without Mentioning Prosecution.—The right of the prosecution to peremptory challenges is not taken away by a statute which increases the number to the defendant and does not specifically mention the prosecution. Fouts v. State, 8 Ohio St. 98.

[a] Conferring in Civil Cases Does Not Extend Right in Criminal Cases. Under a subdivision of the statute defining challenges for cause in criminal trials: "The same challenges shall be allowed in criminal prosecutions that are allowed to parties in civil cases," it will not be assumed that the legislature intended to increase the number of peremptories in criminal cases not capital, when it passed a subsequent statute giving peremptories in civil cases. Especially since the clause in question when first enacted read "The same challenges for cause shall be allowed, etc"; and the legislature has enacted separate and distinct orders covering procedure in civil and criminal actions. *Stevenson v. [b] No Issue of Fact Can Arise.—“This definition shows that no issue of fact can possibly arise with regard to the reasons for such challenge.” People v. Edwards, 163 Cal. 752, 127 Pac. 58.

[c] For Reasons Not Ground for Challenge for Cause.—The right of peremptory challenge was conferred for the express purpose of enabling parties accused of crime to reject from the jury persons whom they had reason to distrust for secret, undisclosed grounds, not sufficient to be made available as causes for legal challenge. State v. Fourchy, 51 La. Ann. 228, 25 So. 109.

[d] “It is not the purpose of the law to base a peremptory challenge upon a challenge for cause, but rather that peremptory challenges may be had to a limited degree independently of any cause.” Stevens v. Union R. Co., 26 R. I. 90, 58 Atl. 492, 66 L. R. A. 465.

[e] No Suggestion of Rebuke Should Be Made by Court.—The trial court should not by his orders to the sheriff respecting the summoning of a special venire make any “suggestion conveying an apparent rebuke to counsel for making the challenge . . . The right to except to a limited number of jurors without assigning any cause is given by law to suitors, and for its exercise they are responsible to no one.” But it was not reversible error because the party’s peremptories were not exhausted. *Capehart v. [g] Excluding Negroes Does Not Show Discrimination.—The mere fact that the state in the proper exercise of its peremptory challenges has stricken off negroes, does not show any discrimination. Whitney v. State, 43 Tex. Crim. 197, 63 S. W. 879.

84. See Christie v. State, 44 Ind. 408.

[a] The words “shall be a sufficient cause for peremptory challenge,” as found in a statute have been construed to mean merely that the party has “an absolute right of challenge” for the specified cause. For “peremptory challenges have been understood generally to be such as are allowed without assigning any cause.” Christie v. State, 44 Ind. 408.

[b] Where a statute said certain things “shall be ground for peremptory challenge” the court said it was “meaningless nonsense” if it meant anything more than that it was a disqualification and ground for challenge. *Terrell v. At common law, the right is limited to the accused;⁹³ and in no case can the prosecution exercise the right except under some statute authorizing it.⁹⁴ Even in criminal cases the right is said not to be a constitutional right, but to exist only by virtue of the statute.⁹⁵ If the punishment may be death the peremptories are allowed though it

[a] "In favorem vitæ" is a reason not a principle upon which the right to peremptory challenges rests. The judges trace the phrase from its original use, through the various text writers and statutes showing the error in the contention that unless the prisoner's life was in danger he could not challenge peremptorily. *Gray v. [b] Distinguished From Challenge for Actual or Implied Bias.—In an elaborate opinion in which the constitutional limitations upon the power to regulate challenges for implied and actual bias is defined the court says, "There is also a broad and clear distinction between these causes of challenge and the right to interpose a peremptory challenge as is usually allowed by statutory enactments. The former challenges exist at law as matter of right. The latter is by favor of the legislature only." State v. McClear, 11 Nev. 39.

[a] Reason.—“The act does not introduce anything new and unknown before. It merely extends a well known right to a new class of cases, in the

[a] Merely a Preliminary to the Trial, and No Vested Right in Any Particular Juror.—The statute does not, in any sense, deprive the defendant of a jury trial, but is merely a preliminary to the trial like all other procedure by which the jury is selected. Besides the party has no vested right to be tried by any particular juror drawn on the panel. State v. Wilson, 48 N. H. 393.

[b] On Two Grounds: Analogy To Standing Aside and Legislative Right To Control Selection.—The crown by its right to stand jurors aside possessed all the advantages obtained by peremptory challenges. The matter of selecting the jury is one which the legislature may properly regulate. State v. Ward, 61 Vt. 153, 17 Atl. 483.

[c] Tends To Prevent Mistrial.—“There can be no doubt that giving the prosecuting attorney a peremptory challenge of two jurors tends to prevent hung-juries and mistrials.” State v. Shores, 31 W. Va. 491, 7 S. E. 413, 13 Am. St. Rep. 875, followed in State v. Hall, 31 W. Va. 505, 7 S. E. 422.

[a] Reasons.—It does not alter any rule of evidence; does not create or aggravate the crime, or increase the punishment. It divests the prisoner of no right for all he is entitled to is an impartial jury. He has no right to select that jury but only a limited right to reject certain jurors. Walston v. Com., 16 B. [c] Forbidden by Statute.—(1) Under a former statute which provided for peremptories against "two of the jury so empaneled," one could not challenge a juror called to fill a vacancy caused by the challenge of the other party in civil cases (Carnow v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 46 S. C. 79, 24 S. E. 74; Burckhalter v. Coward, 16 S. C. 435; Huff v. Watkins, 15 S. C. 82, 40 Am. Rep. 680; Durant v. Ashmore, 2 Rich. L. (S. (3) This rule applied even where plaintiff announced "no objection to the jury as it then stood" and the defendant then excused two on peremptory. It was reversible error to permit plaintiff to then exercise peremptory over defendant's objection. Gunter v. Graniteville Mfg. Co., 15 S. C. 443.

(VII.) Striking Jurors as Equivalent.¹⁹ — A peremptory challenge may be had to a juror upon a struck list, according to some authorities;²⁰ but in other states, the statutory provision for striking is considered a substitute for the right to challenge peremptorily,²¹ and there can be no peremptory after both sides have struck.²² Even though a sufficient number do not appear it is held in some states that those who did appear were not subject to peremptory challenge;²³ but it has been held that where only part of the jury appeared after the striking, peremptories could be exercised as to any of the jury then made up by the addition of talesmen.²⁴

State*, 5 Wis. 324.

[b] Must Not Make Defendant's Right Dependent on State.—A ruling by the court whereby the defendant's right to exercise his challenges is made not be abridged.³¹ and, especially in criminal cases, the courts should permit the freest exercise of the right within the limits fixed by the legislature.³² It has been suggested that even a legislative rule might be objectionable if arbitrary.³³ However, the right in civil cases is a high privilege, which should be exercised strictly.³⁴

In the federal courts the order varies in the different districts.³⁵ While the state practice may be followed, the court is not bound to do so.³⁶

(II.) Court's Duty To Define Order.—The court is not bound to define beforehand the order in which peremptories shall be interposed,³⁷ but it is a proper practice to do so on request of either party.³⁸

(III.) Who Must Challenge First.—The prisoner is not entitled as a matter of right to have the prosecution challenge first.³⁹ The English rule requires that the prisoner challenge first,⁴⁰ and that is the rule by statute in some states,⁴¹ though the more usual rule is that the prosecution must first challenge.⁴² In civil suits most statutes compel the plaintiff to challenge first.⁴³ The statutory rule is not changed

though the defendant has the burden of proof.⁴⁴ Where the statute does not in terms require either party in a civil suit to challenge first, the practical effect is to make the plaintiff challenge first as he must make the first move toward going to trial.⁴⁵ But in some states, the defendant must make the first challenge.⁴⁶

The statutes are mandatory so far as they require the prosecution,⁴⁷ or the plaintiff in a civil action,⁴⁸ to challenge first.

Effect of Making Wrong Party Challenge First.—In criminal cases it is reversible error to deny defendant's statutory right to have the prosecution challenge first.⁴⁹ If the record shows defendant was not prejudiced, failure to permit him to exercise his challenges in the statutory method is not ground for reversal.⁵⁰

In a civil case it must appear not only that the defendant was forced to interpose his challenges first, but that some prejudice resulted, or he did not have a competent jury;⁵¹ but where a plaintiff was erroneously compelled to interpose his peremptories before an interpleader in attachment it was held that the interpleader must show no prejudice resulted.⁵²

(IV.) Alternating in Challenges.—The statutes frequently provide expressly for alternating the peremptory challenges after challenges for cause are all disallowed,⁵³ or where no peremptory challenges have the interpleader must first challenge. Cunningham v. Prusansky, 59 Mo. App. 498.

[a] Procedure Not Substantially Departed From.—After passing "for bias" and "for favor," prosecution may refuse to exercise peremptory, and pass the juror after defendant's examination. So long as prisoner is not compelled to challenge until after prosecution has fully exhausted his right he cannot complain. People v. Miles, 143 N. Y. 282, 38 N. E. 456.

[b] Prosecution may pass the jurors, declining to challenge, and after the defendant has challenged, may challenge although defendant objects thereto. Jurors were not sworn. People v. Majors, 65 Cal. 138, 3 Pac. 797, 52 Am. Rep. 295.

[c] So before jury is sworn prosecution may challenge though on passing the panel to defendant he did not challenge. The prosecution in such case has challenged first. People v. McCarty, 48 Cal. 557.

[a] The question as to whether defendant was required to exercise his peremptory challenges prematurely becomes purely academic and need not be decided when the record shows that the subsequent examination by the prosecution did not result in the exclusion of any jurors for cause, and hence the defendant was only called upon to exercise his peremptories upon the same jurors as he would have been had his contention been upheld by the trial judge. Emmett v. United States, 196 Fed. 317, 116 C. C. A. 137.

been taken until the panel was full.⁵⁴ In the absence of a statutory rule, alternating of challenges has been recognized as a fair and equitable rule;⁵⁵ but defendant cannot be compelled to alternate peremptories, except through the method of swearing each juror in turn as he is passed for cause.⁵⁶ In the absence of a statutory rule to that effect the prosecution need not first exhaust its peremptory challenges;⁵⁷ but in those jurisdictions where a full panel of competent jurors, plus a number equal to the number of peremptories is required, the rule sometimes compels the prosecution to first exhaust its challenges.⁵⁸ The rule as to alternating must be preserved so far as is practicable,⁵⁹ but does not give to the defendant an absolute right to the last challenge.⁶⁰ A defendant who is entitled to separate chal-

[a] If the court delays swearing the jury until after it is completed, it is just and reasonable that the defendant should alternate with the state in taking his challenges. State v. Pritchard, 15 Nev. 74.

[b] No Abuse of Discretion Not To Require.—Though perhaps a more orderly way would have been to require the state to exercise its first peremptory, and then have given each of the defendant's two, there is no abuse of discretion where under the rule enforced by the court each defendant had one peremptory left after the state's challenges were exhausted. State v. McCorkle, 74 Kan. 280, 86 Pac. 134.

[c] There was no reversible error in ruling that state should first exercise one and then the defendant two where the state has but half the number defendant has. State v. Bailey, 32 Kan. 83, 3 Pac. 769.

[d] Statute Held Not to Require Alternating.—Under a statute reading "the state shall first exhaust its peremptory challenges, or waive the same, and the defendant afterward," the order is not alternative but the state must first exhaust all its peremptories, or waive them, before defendant is called upon to challenge. State v. Bowens, 17 Iowa 46.

[e] After jurors have been pronounced competent in a misdemeanor case, the court properly requires the jury to be selected in the same manner as if there had been no challenge. Accordingly it is proper to require defendant to exercise the first right to strike, under the alternating rule. Nobles v. State, 127 Ga. 212, 56 S. E. 125.

[a] If by reason of waivers by the plaintiff or state and the continued peremptory challenge by defendant the latter's challenges become exhausted before the plaintiff's, the plaintiff may exercise his challenge as to jurors brought into the box after his waiver. State v. Vance, 29 Wash. 435, 70 Pac. 34.

[b] The announcement of a waiver only waives the right to challenge as to jurors then on the panel. As long as the party has challenges remaining he may exercise them on jurors called to fill vacancies. State v. Peel, 23 Mont. 358, 59 Pac. 169, 75 Am. St. Rep. 529.

lenges must alternate with plaintiff like any other defendant.⁶¹ Where the defendant is entitled to double the number of peremptories given to the state the proper practice is to compel him, in alternating his challenges, to use two peremptories to the state's one,⁶² except in so far as the rule has been changed by statute.⁶³

c. Withdrawal.—The general rule is that a peremptory challenge having been made, cannot be withdrawn;⁶⁴ but it is largely within the discretion of the court to permit a withdrawal of such challenges,⁶⁵

[a] Though the statute says each shall challenge one in alternating, in criminal cases the purpose and intent of the whole statute necessitates that the state shall challenge one, and then the defendant two. State v. Eddon, 8 Wash. 292, 36 Pac. 139.

[b] Aside from any statute the court says "on account of the disparity between the number allowed to each party in criminal cases it would be impracticable to have them alternate one by one. State v. Caseday, 58 Ore. 429, 115 Pac. 287.

[c] State Reserves Challenges Till Equal Number Made by Defendant. In a criminal case, where the state has three challenges and the defendant six, the state may reserve its challenges until three challenges have been made by prisoner. This rule does not apply in civil cases. Smith v. Day, 2 Penn. (Del.) 245, 45 Ad. 396.

[d] The state and defendant have the right of alternate challenge and if it be not exercised in full it is not thereby lost. Under this rule the state challenges one and two defendants four and the state is not bound to challenge until after such four challenges are made. Ronnds v. State, 57 Wis. 45, 14 N. W. 865, following Schmucker v. State, 5 Wis. 324, wherein it was held error to compel a defendant to exercise four challenges or waive four.

and they may be permitted where it is withdrawn immediately after being made and before another juror has been called,⁶⁶ or the juror has retired.⁶⁷ Where the panel has become exhausted the prisoner may be permitted to retract a challenge.⁶⁸ Error in permitting the state to challenge at a wrong time may be cured by permitting the withdrawal of the challenge, and restoring the juror.⁶⁹ Withdrawal cannot be made capriciously,⁷⁰ and it is clearly proper to refuse to extend the privilege where the only object was to enable the party to avoid the effect of having subsequently drawn a less desirable juror,⁷¹ or after both parties have finished their examination and have exhausted their peremptories.⁷²

d. Waiver. — (1.) In General. — The right to challenge peremptorily may be waived.⁷³ This may be done by the prosecution,⁷⁴ or by the defendant⁷⁵ in a criminal action. When one is given an opportunity to challenge peremptorily and fails to exercise it, the right must be deemed to be waived.⁷⁶ So the right to challenge peremptorily is clearly waived where one does not appear at the trial until after the jury has been sworn.⁷⁷ But where the court insists upon the challenge being made at a particular time and in contravention of the prisoner's statutory rights, acquiescence in the court's ruling is not a waiver.⁷⁸

One who claims a peremptory is being exercised when his adversary is not entitled to it must object at the time the peremptory is made, or he waives the objection.⁷⁹ One waives his right to a greater number of challenges by failing to object to the lesser number offered;⁸⁰ but where he excepts to the ruling of the court as to the number of challenges to which he is entitled, he does not waive his rights by not formally challenging beyond that number.⁸¹ The defendant can waive his right to have a complete panel before making his peremptory challenges,⁸² and he waives his right to have a greater number on the panel than prescribed by the court, by not raising the question before the jury is sworn.⁸³ He may waive his right to a statutory interval between presentation of a full panel and the making of his peremptories,⁸⁴ but by that waiver he does not waive his right to a complete panel.⁸⁵ The defendant's right to challenge is not waived by making the preliminary examination.⁸⁶

ute it is sometimes provided that on alternating, each party is deemed to have waived one challenge each time he passes the jury without challenging.⁸⁷ Under a rule requiring challenges to be made singly and alternatively, the jurors not being sworn until all are accepted, one does not waive his right to challenge peremptorily by withholding all his challenges until the box is filled;⁸⁸ but where the parties have adopted the alternate mode and one has waived his last challenge, he cannot challenge a juror substituted for one challenged by the party entitled to the final challenge.⁸⁹ Where the practice is to wait until the box is full and then challenge alternately, one passing his first challenge does not waive his right to his remaining challenges.⁹⁰ One who has clearly waived but one challenge has been held not to waive all his remaining challenges, under statutes requiring alternating challenge in such manner as the parties may agree or the court order.⁹¹

Some courts hold that the party is entitled to exercise his right of challenge after once passing a full panel, as to any of the jurors upon the panel as changed by substitution of another juror.⁹² But the more usual holding is that the court may refuse to permit a peremptory to jurors after one chance to challenge them has been passed,⁹³ and there

[a] After Indicating His Acceptance, a Party Waives the Right as to Those Accepted.—The usual practice is to require the peremptories to be made by the parties alternately, one at a time, beginning with defendant. Either party may indicate at any time that he is satisfied with the jury and thereby he waives his remaining peremptories as to the jurors passed and accepted. *Swanson v. [c] Is Discretionary With Court in Civil Case.—In a civil case, it is proper after tender of a full jury and the challenge of some of them to restrict the challenges thereafter to the jurors who are freshly summoned. It is not necessary that it be so done but is a matter within the sound discretion of the court. Tatum v. Preston, 53 Miss. 674.

[g] Can Only Challenge Jurors Subsequently Brought Into Box.—Under the statute it is the intent that both parties have their full number of challenges so far as they wish to exercise them, but after plaintiff waives his challenge to the jury as then constituted he can only challenge jurors brought into the box to take the place of those subsequently excused. *State v. [a] Absolute Until Challenges Exhausted.—The right to challenge is absolute until the juror is sworn and no circumstances can interfere with this right so long as the number given by law is not exhausted. Hendrick v. Com., 5 Leigh (32 Va.) 707.

[b] Statute not prescribing any other time and there being no court rule or order, nor any evidence of waiver the right exists until the jury is sworn. Com. v. White, 208 Mass. 202, 94 N. E. 391; Sackett v. Ruder, 152 Mass. 397, 25 N. E. 736, 9 L. R.

[c] In Com. v. Knapp, 9 Pick (Mass.) 496, 20 Am. Dec. 491, it was held that the prisoner was entitled to challenge peremptorily after having examined the juror on voir dire although that examination disclosed no ground for challenge. For the manner of the juror's answer may "excite distrust in the mind of the prisoner."

[d] Civil and Criminal Cases.—(1) In civil cases it is a purely statutory right of which neither party can be deprived until the jury is sworn. Ayres v. Hubbard, 88 Mich. 155, 50 N. W. 111. See also In re Hamper's Appeal, 51 Mich. 71, 16 N. W. 236; Hunter v. Parsons, 22 Mich. 96. (2) In criminal cases it continues till jury is sworn. People v. Carrier, 46 Mich. 442, 9 N. W. 487; Jhons v. People, 25 Mich. 499.

[e] Court Cannot Shorten Statutory Time.—Where the statute gives the right to challenge until the juror is sworn, the trial court cannot shorten the time by announcing to defendant that he will be deemed to have accepted all the jurors then in the box if he passes his challenge. State v. Pritchard, 15 Nev. 74.

[f] Not at Any Precise Point of Time Previous.—"We are not aware of any system under which it is absolutely necessary that the right of challenge should be exercised at any precise point of time, before the jurors are sworn." People v. Kohle, 4 Cal. 198.

[g] The trial is not entered upon, nor the cause submitted to the jury, until the parties have elected the jurors, or some step has been taken in putting the case before them. Until that time the challenge should be allowed. Spigener v. State, 62 Ala. 383.

discretion permit a party to exercise his right at any time before the jury is sworn provided the party is acting in good faith, and not with intent to gain advantage or delay the cause.¹⁸ But in other jurisdictions it is held that the right is not an open one at all times until the jury is sworn and irrespective of all else.¹⁹ Whether the challenge can be interposed after the clerk has started to administer the oath has caused some conflict of opinion.²⁰

[b] Jury Re-sworn To Try Special Issue.—When the same jury after finding the prisoner guilty is charged to inquire into the fact of a previous conviction, even though they be again sworn on the prisoner's request, he is not entitled to again challenge peremptorily. Reg. v. Key, 3 C. & K. 371, 2 Den. C. C. 347, 15 Jur. 1065, 21 L. J. M. C. 35, T. & M. 623.

[b] Distinction Based on Time of Swearing Jurors.—Attention has been called to the fact that by the English practice each individual juror is sworn as soon as he has been examined and an opportunity given to challenge, while the practice in many states is to direct the juror to take his seat at the conclusion of his examination and the oath is later administered. Where this is the practice it has been held the peremptory challenge should be before he takes his seat. Mayers v. Smith, 121 Ill. 442, 15 N. E. 216.

[c] Civil and Criminal Cases Distinguished in New Jersey.—In civil cases the statute clearly gives the right only "as their names are drawn from the box." Leary v. North Jersey St. R. Co., 69 N. J. L. 67, 54 Atl. 527.

[d] In criminal cases, the statute relating to the time for interposing challenges (Laws, 1887, p. 132, c. 47) by its terms applies only to challenges for cause. This leaves peremptory challenges to be governed by the rule that requires challenge before oath commenced. State v. Lyons, 70 N. J. L. 635, 58 Atl. 398.

[e] In State v. Deliso, 75 N. J. L. 808, 69 Atl. 218, the court refused to reverse where the trial judge had permitted the prosecution to challenge while the clerk was administering the oath, and after defendant's counsel had passed the juror for cause, and prosecution's challenge for cause had been overruled. The court distinguishes State v. Lyons, 70 N. J. L. 635, 58 Atl. 398, as arising on a claim by the prisoner that his right to challenge had been curtailed. Both cases distinguish Leary v. North Jersey St. R. Co., 69 N. J. L. 67, 54 Atl. 527, as being a civil case.

[f] Where jurors are sworn separately challenge may be at any time "before the book has been tendered to the juror, or the formula of affirmation has been commenced." Com. v. Marra, 8 Phila. (Pa.) 440.

Frost*, 9 C. & P. 129, 38 E. C. L. 87. It cannot be after the juror has taken the book but before he has kissed it. Reg. v. Giorgetti, 4 F. & F. 546.

may be exercised after the juror has been tendered to the opposite party but before acceptance by him according to some authorities;²² but under some statutes, the challenge must be made before the juror is so tendered.²³ A practice has prevailed in some states of giving the prisoner a certain time after the panel is complete, in which to announce his peremptory challenges.²⁴ In some jurisdictions one may, of right, peremptorily challenge jurors after acceptance.²⁵ In other

[e] Rule Applied Where Statute Permitted Acceptance in Panels of Four. Reed's Ill. St., 1900, ch. 78, §§21 and 22, provides that in impaneling jurors in civil or criminal cases, they should be passed on and accepted in panels of four. Under this statute until both sides accept the panel of four, either side is permitted to challenge peremptorily a juror theretofore tendered to the other side. People v. Gray, 251 Ill. 431, 98 S. E. 208, disapproving Mayers v. Smith, 121 Ill. 442, 13 N. E. 216, as holding that after the acceptance neither party can challenge peremptorily as a matter of right.

[c] After Passing Jury With Juror Included.—That the party has once passed the jury, including the juror afterward sought to be challenged, does not cut off his right to challenge at any time before the jury is sworn. Silcox v. Long, 78 Cal. 111, 50 Pac. 697.

[d] After Jurors Examined. Where a juror has been passed but not sworn and defendant has challenged several jurors thereafter there is no prejudicial error in permitting the juror to be thereafter further examined by the people and challenged peremptorily. People v. Dolan, 96 Cal. 315, 31 Pac. 107.

[e] In a civil case after once expressing satisfaction with the jury, there is no error in permitting a party to exercise a peremptory, the jury being not yet complete. Adams v. Olive, 48 Ala. 551.

[a] Defendant having exhausted his peremptories, it was held reversible error to permit plaintiff to peremptorily challenge a juror after he had been passed and accepted. To do so gave plaintiff "a manifest advantage," since he could take a chance on defendant's challenging the juror, and then exclude him if he did not. Dunn v. Wilmington & W. R. Co., 131 N. must be shown as between the parties.³⁰ and it has been held reversible error to deny the right where the acceptance was clearly through inadvertence.³¹

In some states it is reversible error to permit the state to challenge over the defendant's objection after the juror has been passed by both sides,³² especially after the defendant's challenges are exhausted.³³

(IV.) After Jury Sworn.—The general rule is that the peremptory challenge cannot be made after the jury is sworn.³⁴ But some cases hold that it is discretionary with the court to permit a peremptory Established Rule of General Application.—Rules of court, or the established practice in the different counties control. Under the act of 1901 when jurors are called singly the right must be exercised before each juror is sworn. Ordinarily there can be no peremptory challenge after acceptance, but unless some statute, rule of court or established custom forbids, the court may in its discretion permit peremptories after acceptance, where the cross-examination of the other party brings out some new fact. Com. v. Marion, 222 Pa. 413, 70 Atl. 807, distinguishing Com. v. Evans, 212 Pa. 369, 61 Atl. 989, where the court refused to permit a peremptory after juror was passed and accepted, on the ground that to do so would permit speculating on the chance that the other side might challenge for cause. But there was no further examination, the opposite party accepting the juror immediately upon his being passed for cause. See also Com. v. Hettig, 46 Pa. Super. 395, where the prosecution was allowed to challenge after passing the juror under a wrong impression as to his name, and before the defense had taken any initiative as to challenging or interrogating.

[c] Presumed Court Had Some Good Reason.—In the absence of some showing to the contrary it will be presumed that the trial court had some good reason for permitting a peremptory challenge after the jury had been accepted by both sides. Curnow v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 46 S. C. 79, 24 S. E. 74.

[a] If Permitted to State, Should Be to Defendant.—Where the state has been accorded the privilege of peremptory challenge after the full panel has been rendered to defendant and accepted, it was reversible error to then refuse to permit defendant to challenge peremptorily the juror who was chosen to fill the vacancy. Cook v. State, 85 Miss. 738, 38 So. 110.

31. Clarke v. Goode, 6 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 637.

[a] Reversible Error To Refuse Where No Evidence of Trifling With Court.—Without deciding whether the defendant had strictly any right to challenge after acceptance, and assuming it was a matter of discretion for the court, there being no evidence of any intent to trifle with the court or to take unfair advantage, it was an abuse of discretion to refuse to permit the peremptory where one of two counsel accepted the juror, but the other objected. Clarke v. Goode, 6 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 637.

[b] No Prejudice Where Substituted Juror Not Challenged.—Where a juror was excused on accused's challenge after the jury was sworn, and no challenge was made as to the juror selected in his place, there can be no prejudicial error. Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 233, 29 N. W. 911, 57 Am. Rep. 825.

[b] Should Not Be Permitted Arbitrarily After Other's Peremptories Exhausted.—Where the juror has been accepted and sworn the state should not be permitted to arbitrarily challenge him after defendant's challenges are exhausted. Williams v. State, 63 Ark. 327, 30 S. W. 709.

[c] Permitted Where Conscientious Scruples Disclosed.—The court did not act arbitrarily but its act was based on reason where it permitted the prosecution to peremptorily challenge a juror who after being taken on jury, disclosed he had conscientious scruples against capital punishment. Brower v. State, 71 Ark. 145, 78 S. W. 773.

[d] There is a conflict as to whether the statute providing court "for cause shown" may permit challenge to individual juror after he is sworn, is applicable to peremptory. The theory of one line of cases is that after jury-man has been sworn the right to challenge peremptorily has expired. People v. Hughes, 117 N. Y. 29, 32 N. E. 1105.

[e] The other theory is that the words "for cause" as used in the section mean that it is not a matter of right but may be permitted in the exercise of a sound discretion. No set rule can be laid down for what might be an abuse of discretion in one case might be a fair exercise in another. So where the matter inquired into, though not developing ground for challenge for cause, was reasonably calculated to leave the juror in a position of hostility toward the prosecuting officer, it was proper to allow a peremptory especially where defendant had peremptories left. People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 179, 48 Pac. 75; People v. Ward, 105 Cal. 335, 38 Pac. 945; People v. Bennerly, 87 Cal. 117, 25 Pac. 266; People v. Montgomery, 53 Cal. 576. [f] But compare People v. Schmitz, 7 Cal. App. 330, 94 Pac. 407, where the court says "If the court, after a juror has been sworn to try the case, can permit him to be challenged, without cause, the words 'for cause' should be stricken from the statute," citing People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 179, 48 Pac. 75, as upholding that position.

For citation of statutes and application to challenge for cause, see supra, VII, E, 4, c.

[g] Defendant is entitled to his full number of strikes from a new jury list where he discovers after striking from the first list, and before the cause is submitted to the jury that persons thereon had served on the grand jury which brought in the bill. Cobb v. State, 45 Ga. 11.

[a] The Theory Is That the Right Is Purely Statutory.—The statute provides that the first twelve persons who shall be approved, shall be sworn, and shall try the case. A jury so sworn cannot be set aside except by consent of the party. Ayres v. Hubbard, 88 Mich. 155, 40 N. W. 111.

[b] Is Unnecessary Discharge With in Former Jeopardy Rule.—The discharge, by the state, of a juror on claimed after the jury have been sworn,³⁸ but an exception has been made to this rule where the jury is sworn in at the beginning of the term and is not sworn to try the particular case.³⁹ It is clearly too late after the case has been submitted to the jury, even though the party did not know until then of facts which would have induced the use of peremptory.⁴⁰

f. Form and Sufficiency.—The details as to the manner in which parties shall interpose their peremptory challenges is a matter within peremptory challenge after the jury had been impaneled and sworn, but before testimony given, the prisoner objecting thereto, was an unnecessary discharge of the jury within the rule as to former jeopardy. Gillespie v. State, 168 Ind. 208, 80 N. E. 829.

[a] Not a Matter of Right But Discretionary.—Permission to challenge after the juror is sworn is not a matter of right, but is wholly discretionary with the trial court. State v. Pritchard, 15 Nev. 74; State v. Anderson, 4 Nev. 265.

[b] Even Where Juror Sworn Too Soon.—After a juror has been accepted and sworn, even conceding that he was sworn too soon since the jury was not yet completed, defendant cannot peremptorily challenge him merely because he preferred to challenge him rather than the last juror examined. Hawkins v. United States, 116 Fed. 569, 53 C. C. A. 663.

39. Sackett v. Ruden, 152 Mass. 397, 25 N. E. 736, 9 L. R. A. 391.

[a] Civil and Criminal Cases Distinguished.—In civil cases the panel is divided into juries of twelve and the whole sworn. In criminal cases the jurors are called, sworn and impaneled anew in each case. So the practice has grown up, there being no statutory or court rule, of permitting challenges in civil cases at any time, "before anything else has been done." And by analogy the same rule applies to bystanders called to replace jurors on the regular panel. In criminal cases as soon as the prisoner is called to the bar, the clerk informs him of his right to challenge peremptorily any juror after he is called but before he is sworn. Sackett v. Ruden, 152 Mass. 397, 25 N. E. 736, 9 L. R. A. 391.

[b] Where Jury Sworn Generally at Beginning of Term.—The fact that in cases not capital the jurors for the week are sworn generally at the commencement of the week does not take away the right to challenge at any time before the jury is accepted. Spigener v. State, 62 Ala. 383.

40. Kurtz v. State, 145 Ind. 119, 42 N. E. 1102, juror disclosed matters on opening statement. Compare Peoria, D. & E. Ry. Co. v. Puckett, 52 Ill. App. 222, where it was said to be reversible error for the court to permit it against the objection of the other party, and after the opening statement, "without good cause shown."

[a] The reason that swearing the juror is held to determine the election is that the administration of the oath is the commencement of the trial—the submission of the issue to the jury. Spigener v. State, 62 Ala. 383.

[b] Though Matter Would Have Been Sufficient Ground for Challenge for Cause.—After the entire jury has been accepted and sworn and the prosecution has opened, it is too late to peremptorily challenge a juror though the defendant states he has learned that the juror had expressed an opinion as to defendant's guilt or innocence. Had such a request been made after juror sworn but before the jury was completed the court would have been authorized under the statute to permit the challenge. Hawkins v. United States, 116 Fed. 569, 53 C. C. A. 663.

[c] New Trial Not Granted on Discovery After Verdict.—The mere fact that something is discovered by the losing party after verdict, which, if known at the time of trial would have induced counsel to challenge the juror peremptorily, is not ground for a new trial where the juror has not the discretion of the trial judge, and will not be reviewed in the absence of abuse.⁴¹ An order by counsel to the juror to stand aside is, in effect, a peremptory challenge though no judicial action was requested;⁴² but a mere exception to a statement of the court respecting the right to challenge, is not a challenge of the juror.⁴³ The statutes usually provide that the challenge may be oral;⁴⁴ but it is sometimes provided that the challenge shall be in writing addressed to the clerk.⁴⁵

g. *Number of Challenges Generally.*⁴⁶ — (I.) In General. — Originally at common law the prosecution could challenge peremptorily without limit,⁴⁷ while the prisoner had thirty-five challenges.⁴⁸ Later, however, the right of the prosecution was entirely abrogated.⁴⁹

Statutes now generally fix the number of peremptory challenges allowed in both civil and criminal cases;⁵⁰ and the statute in force at the time of the trial governs the number to be given, in the absence of a

[4] In Rhode Island the statute provides (1) that "Either party in a civil action, or in any criminal proceeding, may, . . . challenge . . . any qualified jurors called for the trial of said cause or proceeding, not exceeding one in four." Gen. Laws, ch. 291, §2. This statute is "unique," no similar statute is to be found in any other state. The maximum number allowable to either party is five, as jurors excused for cause are not to be considered in arriving at the number in proportion to which the number of peremptories is determined. Twelve jurors not subject to challenge for cause having been obtained either party may challenge three. Six jurors being then added each party has one more peremptory; and for the two then added, one more each. Twenty-two jurors will then have been called in all, and each party will have had five peremptories. This construction limits the number of peremptories while other construction not only leaves the number unlimited but makes it depend upon and to increase without limit in proportion to the number of challenges for cause. Stevens v. Union R. Co., 26 R. I. 90, 68 Atl. 492, 66 L. R. A. 465. (2) The effect of our statute is to put crimes of every degree and all civil cases upon the same footing. The excluded offenses were formerly all capital crimes. State v. Sutton, 10 R. I. 159.

[b] Giving state unfair advantage might be unconstitutional if it gave the state so many peremptory challenges as to make it very difficult to obtain a jury at all. State v. Wilson, 48 N. H. 398.

51. Heike v. United States, 192 Fed. 83, 112 C. C. A. 615; Edmonson v. State (Tex. Crim.), 44 S. W. 154.

[a] Effect of Saving Clause in Penal Code.—Where an offense was a misdemeanor at the time it was committed, but the grade of the offense was raised to a felony by the Penal Code which went into effect prior to the trial, defendant is only entitled to peremptories as for a misdemeanor, since the saving clause of the Penal Code provides that offenses committed prior to its taking effect shall be prosecuted in the same manner and under the same procedure as if the act had not been passed. Heike v. United States, 192 Fed. 83, 112 C. C. A. 615.

[b] What Law Governs as Affected by Enabling Act.—Under the Enabling Act providing that all cases then pending "shall be prosecuted to a final determination in the state courts of Oklahoma under the laws now in force in that territory." A defendant's right to peremptories must be determined by the statute relative to the territory and not by that of the state. Harris v. United States, 4 Okla. Crim. 217, 111 Pac. 982.

restrict and make definite the maximum number of peremptory challenges,⁵³ the tendency being to restrict the privileges of defendants and increase those of the prosecution,⁵⁴ so that the prosecution and the prisoner both have the same number.⁵⁵ Increasing the number allowed to the prosecution subsequent to the commission of the crime is not void as being ex post facto law;⁵⁶ nor is the right to any particular number in the nature of a vested right which cannot be taken away.⁵⁷ Though it has been said that where the statutes were conflicting it would not be supposed the legislature intended to be more unfavorable to defendants in criminal cases than to suitors in civil cases,⁵⁸ the fact that a statute does not give the state as many peremptories for a higher as for a lower grade of offense does not affect its validity.⁵⁹ Where a proceeding is not strictly criminal, one cannot complain because he is given only the number allowed as for a civil case.⁶⁰ Where the number to be given depends upon particular circumstances, it will be presumed, if a challenge was allowed that the circumstances warranting it were shown.⁶¹

[a] Earlier Statute Construed. Where one statute provided that "in all actions . . . each party shall have" three peremptories; and another gave "each party accused" twenty, it was held that the state had three and the accused twenty. Wiley v. State, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 458.

than in others.⁶² Under such a statute, the locus fori, and not the locus delicti, governs.⁶³ Where the statute gives a different number in different courts, as is sometimes the case,⁶⁴ the number given in the court where tried governs though the case was transferred from another court.⁶⁵

(III.) Determined by Grade of Offense.—The statutes in most states determine the number according to the grade of the offense as being a felony or a misdemeanor.⁶⁶ Generally for a statutory crime not known at common law, the peremptories as for a misdemeanor should be given.⁶⁷ Where the statute does not define what is a misdemeanor and what is a felony, the common law distinction cannot be followed to determine the grade of the offense;⁶⁸ but if the offense has merely been denounced by its common law name, and it was a felony at common law, peremptories as for a felony should be allowed.⁶⁹ If the statute describ-

[a] Constitutional To Prescribe Different Number in Different Cities. The power of the legislature to prescribe the number of peremptory challenges is limited only by the necessity of having an impartial jury. There is nothing in the fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution which forbids a different number being prescribed when the jury is drawn from cities differing in size. Such a provision is an aid to the procuring of impartial jurors, and so long as the statute operates equally upon all persons similarly situated it is valid. Hayes v. Missouri, 120 U. S. 68, 7 Sup. Ct. 350, 30 L. ed. 578, affirming 88 Mo. 344.

[b] Effect of Rule.—The fact that the statute limits the number of peremptories according to the offense charged against him of itself would preclude putting defendant on trial for a crime other than that charged in the information. People v. Comstock, 55 Mich. 405, 21 N. W. 384.

67. United States v. Daubner, 17 Fed. 793, applied to making and presenting a false claim.

[a] Breaking, or attempting to break, into a post-office is purely a statutory and not a common-law crime, and is not one of the crimes known as felonies within the principles established in interpreting statutes using the term without further definition; it follows that defendant is only entitled to peremptories as for a misdemeanor. Considine v. United States, 112 Fed. 342, 50 C. C. A. 272, reviewing at length the rules for determining whether a crime is a felony or a misdemeanor.

[a] Based on Abolishment of Forfeitures.—The United States statutes not defining what is a misdemeanor, and what is a felony, it is needful to determine the line by other than the common-law distinction, which was any offense which worked forfeiture of lands, or goods, or both, since such forfeitures are abolished in most states. Considine v. United States, 112 Fed. 342, 50 C. C. A. 272.

69. United States v. Coppersmith, 4 Fed. 198, 2 Flipp. 546.

[a] Where a statute uses the word "rob" in its common-law sense, the defendant is entitled to challenges as

ing the offense states that the offender shall be "guilty of a misdemeanor," peremptories for a misdemeanor only can be given.⁷⁰

(IV.) Determined by Punishment To Be Inflicted.—The number is based directly on the punishment to be inflicted in some states.⁷¹ By the weight of authority, where the number of challenges is determinable by the penalty, the defendant is entitled to the number provided for under the maximum and not the minimum punishment prescribed for the crime charged.⁷² But it has been held that it is only where the maximum punishment is fixed by law, that the defendant is en-for a felony, robbery being a felony at common law. Harrison v. United States, 163 U. S. 140, 16 Sup. Ct. 961, 41 L. ed. 104.

[b] Counterfeiting and Passing Counterfeits Distinguished.—Though counterfeiting was a felony at common law as being a species of treason, passing counterfeit money was only a misdemeanor. The statute not defining it as a felony, and the passing being provided with the same punishment, peremptories should be given as for a misdemeanor. United States v. Copper-Smith, 4 Fed. 128, 2 Filipp. 546.

70. Tyler v. United States, 106 Fed. 117, 45 C. C. A. 247; Jowett v. United States, 100 Fed. 832, 41 C. C. A. 88, 51 L. R. A. 108, contention was that penalty made the crime a felony.

[a] Though Statutory Forfeiture Involved.—Since smuggling is only a misdemeanor, the receiving and concealing of smuggled goods cannot be of a higher grade, and hence the accused is only entitled to peremptories as for a misdemeanor. Nor does the fact that smuggled goods are forfeited to the government change the rule. This forfeiture is not in the nature of the common-law forfeitures denoting felonies. Reagan v. United States, 157 U. S. 301, 15 Sup. Ct. 610, 39 L. ed. 709.

[b] Defendant Indicted and Tried for Offense so Classified.—A defendant who has been indicted for a crime, then charged as a misdemeanor, and who is tried for a misdemeanor, is only entitled to the number of challenges prescribed for misdemeanors. *Kharas v. [a] Applied to Second Offenders. Where the defendant was indicted under the statute as a second offender and under the circumstances he might as such second offender be given a life sentence he is entitled to the number of peremptory challenges allowed where the punishment is imprisonment for life, though as a first offender if found guilty his punishment would have been for an indefinite number of years not less than three. State v. Yandell, 201 Mo. 646, 100 S. W. 466.

[b] Where the indictment charged a "second offense" and under the statute second offenses are punishable with imprisonment in the penitentiary defendant is entitled to ten peremptory challenges. State v. Bloomdale, 21 N. D. 77, 128 N. W. 682.

[c] One put on trial under an information so framed as to permit the jury or court to fix his punishment at a greater term of years because of a former conviction, is entitled to the number based upon the greater punishment. State v. Collins (Mont.), 163 Pac. 102.

[d] Applied to First Offense Where Second Punishable Capitally.—Where one is on trial for a first offense the punishment for the second of which is death he is entitled to the same number as if being tried for the second offense since a conviction may affect his life. State v. Humphreys, 1 Overt. (Tenn.) 366, To same effect, see Hooper v. State, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 422.

titled to the maximum number,⁷³ and that if the statute fails to prescribe a maximum punishment,⁷⁴ or if the situation merely is that the court might impose the maximum punishment,⁷⁵ defendant is entitled to the lesser number only. Where capital punishment has been abolished, the right to the same number has sometimes been preserved by statute;⁷⁶ but where it has not been, the same number cannot be given.⁷⁷

(V.) Statutes Fix for Specific Crimes.—Some statutes name specific crimes and fix the number of challenges to be allowed in the trial thereof;⁷⁸ for crimes not specifically named the lesser number is allowed.⁷⁹

[b] Rule Applied to Second Offenders.—(1) The crime charged being burglary the accused is only entitled to the challenges for that offense, though the indictment also charges a prior offense making defendant liable for life imprisonment, which was the sentence in the case. People v. Sullivan, 132 Cal. 93, 64 Pac. 99. (2) Where on the conviction of a person for a second offense the only punishment which could be inflicted is life imprisonment, and the party is charged in the indictment with a second offense he should be given the full number of peremptories as for a life offense. People v. O'Neil, 61 Cal. 446; People v. Harris, 61 Cal. 136.

76. See generally the statutes, and Schumaker v. State, 5 Wis. 324.

77. State v. Smith, 67 Me. 328, the statute regulated the number by the grade of the offense.

[a] Other Position Inconsistent.—It being suggested that the statute abolishing capital punishment, having been passed subsequent to the crime of which defendant was charged and that hence the number of challenges given for capital offenses should be allowed, the supreme court says that unless defendant was insisting that the death penalty be inflicted his position was inconsistent. He cannot repudiate one result and claim the other. State v. Johnston, 83 Wash. 1, 144 Pac. 944.

78. See generally the statutes, and State v. Anderson, 59 S. C. 229, 37 S. E. 820.

[a] Though the Crime Be a Felony. Larceny of live stock of a value which does not constitute grand larceny calls for the number of challenges allowed in "other cases," though the punishment prescribed for larcenies of live stock is imprisonment in the penitentiary. State v. Anderson, 59 S. C. 229, 37 S. E. 820.

[b] The offense of maliciously burning and destroying, in the nighttime, stacks of hay, grain, etc., is not "arson" within the statute though punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary for life or for a period not less than ten years. State v. Pope, 9 S. C. 273.

[a] Indictment Defective.—The indictment though not in the most approved form was held to allow peremptories only as for manslaughter and not murder. Defendant was tried and convicted of manslaughter. State v. Smith, 78 Minn. 302, 81 N. W. 17.

[b] Based on Indictment Not Conviction.—Where indictment is for felony, rule is applied thereto though the conviction was of a misdemeanor only. Smith v. State, 57 Miss. 822.

elects to prosecute for a lower degree, the peremptories are those prescribed for that degree.⁸¹ On new trial after conviction of a lesser degree than charged in the indictment one is only entitled to peremptories as for that lesser degree where the rule forbids his trial for the higher;⁸² but the indictment still governs where the rule is that the new trial operates as if no former trial had been had.⁸³ Where the crime charged is a felony, the defendant is entitled to the number provided for felonies although the prisoner's status was such that he could not be confined in the penitentiary;⁸⁴ and where it cannot be told until after trial whether one will avail himself of his status, to lessen his punishment, his peremptories should be given him as for the greater punishment.⁸⁵

[c] Verdict Does Not Cure Error in Giving Less Than Entitled.—The challenges are determined by the indictment and not by the result of the trial. So the verdict of the jury commuting the punishment to life imprisonment does not cure the error of the court in not giving the prisoner the full number he was entitled to as being indicted for a capital offense. Fowler v. State, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 573.

81. State v. Foley, 144 Mo. 660, 46 S. W. 733; State v. Talmage, 107 Mo. 313, 17 S. W. 299.

[a] The solicitor having given notice beforehand that he would not ask for a capital verdict, and the court having instructed the jury that they could not return a verdict for murder in the first degree, the defendant was not "on trial for his life" within the statute and so was entitled to but four peremptories. State v. Hunt, 128 N. C. 281, 18 S. E. 473.

[b] Though Jury Was Called To Try Higher Degree.—One indicted for a capital offense is allowed only the lesser number where the prosecution, by leave of court, enters a nolle prosequi and tries for a lesser degree, although the jury which tries is selected from the panel summoned to try the higher offense. Goins v. State, 46 Ohio St. 457, 31 N. E. 476.

[a] Where one was indicted for a "clergyable felony," since it cannot be told until asked what he has to say why sentence of death should not be pronounced against him, that he will plead his "benefit of clergy" he is "on trial for his life" within the meaning of the statute and entitled to the full number of challenges. *State v. [a] Purpose of Separate Counts as Showing Reason for Rule.—The contention that defendant is entitled to additional peremptories because there are additional counts is "entirely without merit." The purpose of the separate counts is not to combine several trials for separate offenses in one trial but to prevent mistakes by so framing the pleading that, if the evidence justifies

(VII.) Right Limited to Statutory Number.—The defendant is not entitled to any more peremptories than the statute or rule specifically allows⁸⁸ and it is not error for the court to refuse to give any more.⁸⁹ Defendant is not entitled to the peremptory challenges which have been waived by the state.⁹⁰

(VIII.) Duty of Court To Notify Party of Proper Number.—It is not the duty of the court, without being asked, to notify the accused of the extent of his right to challenge peremptorily,⁹¹ nor is it proper procedure to move that defendant is entitled to a specified number, preliminary to drawing the names;⁹² but where the practice was in doubt the court should make a ruling on request.⁹³ An incorrect preliminary ruling by the court, is not reversible error where no objectionable juror is shown to have served.⁹⁴ It is the duty of the party and his

87. People v. Sweeney, 55 Mich. 586, 22 N. W. 50. The court suggests, among other reasons, that defendant cannot object to the joining in one information of counts charging assault with intent to kill and murder, and charging assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than the crime of murder, because "By the joinder of the counts he became entitled to the greatest number of challenges allowed by law, and a greater number than he would have been, had the information contained a single count for the crime of which he was convicted." He was convicted under the second count. Both offenses were felonies.

h. Consolidation of Civil Actions.—Where civil cases have been consolidated and tried together to save the court's time, the causes being distinct and requiring separate verdicts, the peremptories should be allowed as in separate trials.⁹⁶ But where the consolidation was under a statute which contemplated that it should proceed as the trial of one action, only one set of challenges is allowed to each party.⁹⁷ In statutory proceedings brought conjunctively against a number of persons they are to be treated as one defendant;⁹⁸ but where proceedings are carried on virtually as a separate suit against each they are each entitled to the statutory number.⁹⁹ Where a joinder has worked no change in a statutory liability, but it remains several and not joint, each party is entitled to the full number.¹

i. *Consolidation of Indictments.*²—Where indictments are consolidated, they become in effect separate counts in the same indictment and only one set of challenges is given,³ and this rule applies where consolidation is of indictments against several defendants, as well as of several against one.⁴ Where there was no consolidation and the trial though before one jury was in effect a separate trial of each indictment with separate verdicts and cumulative sentences the full number should be given for each indictment.⁵

j. Joint Parties in Civil Suits. — (I.) In General. — Under some statutes only one set of challenges is given to each side though there are several parties on either side.⁶ Such statutes make no exceptions.⁷ If the court, in its discretion, has ordered trials to proceed without separation, plaintiffs are only entitled to one set of peremptories,⁸ as 38 App. Cas. (D. C.) 361, distinguishing Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Hillmon, 145 U. S. 285, 12 Sup. Ct. 909, 36 L. ed. 706, and Betts v. United States, 132 Fed. 228, 65 C. C. A. 452.

[b] Defendant's Chances of Satisfactory Jury Are the Same. — It is suggested that the only effect of combining is to give one trial instead of two and that the defendant is as likely to get a satisfactory juror in one trial with only one set of challenges as he is two satisfactory juries in two trials with two sets. United State v. Groesbeck, 4 Utah 487, 11 Pac. 542. See also United States v. Bromley, 4 Utah 498, 11 Pac. 619.

[c] Where Made at Defendant's Request for Purpose of Trial. — The consolidation having been made at defendant's request he cannot complain. Nor does the fact that his motion for consolidation was "for the purpose of trial" change the rule. The impaneling of the jury, including the peremptory challenges, is only an incident of the trial. Kharas v. United States, 192 Fed. 508, 113 C. C. A. 109.

Ct. 294, 47 L. ed. 446, as being only an admission for the sake of the argument.

7. Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Burrows, 77 Ark. 74, 96 S. W. 336, applies to joint tort feasons.

[a] Even Where There Were Thousands of Defendants. — In a special proceeding for the condemnation of land and assessment of benefits where there were thirteen thousand persons named as defendants, no complaint can be made of the ruling of the court that all must join. The statute under which the proceedings were had contained no provisions as to peremptories. Hence if defendants were entitled to any it was under the general statute which is absolute as to the provisions that the defendants must join. Newell v. Loeb, 77 Wash. 182, 137 Pac. 811. are defendants whose interests are antagonistic.⁹ In some states, though the parties are ordinarily required to join in challenge, the court may permit a severance.¹⁰

(II.) Language of Statute as Determining Rights.—In civil cases, special and unequivocal language must be used to give parties the right to sever in their challenges.¹¹ In the absence of direct provision of the statute, the question turns largely upon the construction of the general provisions of the statutes conferring peremptories.¹² These statutes by the use of the word "party" do not intend "person,"¹³ but it is used in the sense of "side."¹⁴ So where several persons bring a joint action, it is held under most statutes that they have but one set of challenges;¹⁵ and where several defendants are sued together, the number allowed by the statute is not allowed to each defendant, but is to all the defendants collectively according to many authorities,¹⁶ it being distinctly

[b] "Joining Clause" Omitted Does Not Confer Right To Sever.—In view of the actual law before that time, that the use of the term "each party" did not give each person who was a party the full number of peremptory challenges, the mere fact that the legislature has omitted a clause compelling defendants to join in their challenges does not indicate a legislative intent that they need not join. *Mullery v. held that the rule to be applied to defendants in civil cases is not analogous to that applied to defendants jointly indicted,¹⁷ and that the rule requiring the statute to be so construed as to give the full number unless a contrary intent appears does not apply in civil suits.¹⁸ On the other hand, the words "each party may challenge" has been construed to give each of joint defendants the full number of challenges,¹⁹ and it is held that to deny defendants whose interests are adverse in civil actions, the full number as is allowed to joint defendants in criminal cases, merely on the distinction between the word "party" and "person" is too narrow.²⁰

738; Blackburn v. Hays, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 227.

[a] The Language of the Two Statutes Is Different.—In civil suits it is "each party," but in criminal prosecutions it reads "the state and the defendant shall each be entitled." Blackburn v. Hays, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 227.

[b] "Party" and "Every Party Arraigned" Distinguished.—Schmidt v. Chicago & N. W. Ry. Co., 83 Ill. 405.

18. Gram v. Sampson, 4 Ohio Cir. Ct. 490, 2 Ohio Cir. Dec. 666. See also Bixbee v. State, 6 Ohio 86, the rule is based on the rule that the common law is not to be altered. But there were no peremptories in civil cases at common law.

19. Stroh v. Hinchman, 37 Mich. 490.

20. Hundhausen v. Atkins, 36 Wis. 518.

21. Hundhausen v. Atkins, 36 Wis. 518.

[a] Where the interests of defendants are several they must be considered separately as parties to the suit, and are each entitled to the full number of challenges. Levyn v. Koppin, 183 Mich. 232, 149 N. W. 993.

22. Stroh v. Hinchman, 37 Mich. 490 (any other rule would lead to absurd results); Hundhausen v. Atkins, 36 Wis. 518.

[a] If parties defendant are only nominally so and are in fact hostile to each other they are entitled to the full number of challenges each, being "parties litigant" within the meaning of the statute. Mullery v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 50 Mont. 408, 148 Pac. 323, followed in Chenoweth v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 50 Mont. 481, 148 Pac. 330.

[b] Where there is no identity of interest between the defendants, and other, and plead unrelated and independent defenses.²³ defendants are each entitled to the same number of challenges, though they may have a common ground of defense against plaintiff.²⁴ If the parties are not hostile to each other, they must join in their challenges, however.²⁵ So if defendants make no adverse claim, the one against the

the issues are not the same between them and plaintiff, or if the defendants claim adversely to each other, and their interests would be affected by the finding of the jury, each defendant is entitled to the full number. Rogers v. Armstrong Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 30 S. W. 848.

[c] Where several carriers were jointly sued for damages on contract of carriage and each claimed that it was free from negligence and that the loss if any was chargeable to the other, their interests would become antagonistic, should plaintiff establish loss and hence each was entitled to the full number of peremptories. Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Cheek (Tex. Civ. App.), 159 S. W. 427.

[d] Where under a contract of carriage, each of two carriers was liable only for damage to the goods carried which occurred on its line, there are in reality two causes of action, and it is to the interest of each defendant to make it appear so far as possible that the damage was done on the line of the other. Hence they are not one party and each is entitled to the full number. Texas, etc. R. Co. v. Staff (Tex. Civ. App.), 61 S. W. 980.

23. Healer v. Luskman, 94 Kan. 594, 149 Pac. 1172, they are not strictly "united in interest" though they are sued for a joint tort. See also State v. Durein, 29 Kan. 688.

[e] Each defendant who pleads separately by different counsel is entitled to the full number of challenges. Stroh v. Hinckman, 37 Mich. 400.

[h] General Issue Plead by Each Defendant.—Where all the defendants are not liable to the same extent, or for the same reason, or in the same manner, the plea of the general issue obviously means, or may mean, something different and those having appeared by different counsel and put in a separate plea are each entitled to the full number of peremptories. Yonson v. May, 186 Mich. 201, 152 N. W. 1031.

24. First Nat. Bank v. San Antonio, 40 R. Co., 27 Tex. 201, 77 S. W. 410.

Hogsett v. Northern Texas Traction Co., 55 Tex. Civ. App. 72, 118 S. W. 807.

[a] Where one defendant impleaded his co-defendant upon his warranty of title and prayed judgment against him and the co-defendant denied liability on the ground that he had recovered no consideration for the land, and, in the main issue the defendants were both interested in defeating plaintiff and it was to their interest to make common cause, while the plaintiff had no direct concern with the controversy between defendants, if he should be successful, that controversy would have to be decided, and the defendants were entitled each to the full number of challenges. Waggoner v. Dodson, 96 Tex. 6, 168 S. W. 813, 69 S. W. 993.

[b] Though there may not have been any real contest between two defendants as to the liability of one on his warranty of title to the other, such other having plead such warranty, and he having plead the general issue, there was an adverse issue entitling each to his full number of peremptories. Hannay v. Harmon (Tex. Civ. App.), 137 S. W. 406.

25. Chenoweth v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 50 Mont. 431, 148 Pac. 330; Mullery v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 50 Mont. 408, 148 Pac. 323.

[a] Intervener and a defendant were held to constitute but one party and so entitled only to joint challenge where their interests were not adverse. Bruce v. First Nat. Bank, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 295, 60 S. W. 1006; Baum v. Sanger (Tex. Civ. App.), 49 S. W. 659.

[b] Interveners and plaintiff were making a common fight against defendant, and there was no controversy between them, the intervener is not entitled to separate challenges. Kelley-Goodfellow Shoe Co. v. Liberty Ins. Co., 8 Tex. Civ. App. 237, 28 S. W. 1027.

[c] Attaching creditors, in a trial of the right of property, are identified with each other, and together form but other,²⁴ or if their liability depends upon the same facts,²⁵ and they join in their defense,²⁶ or could set up their defense in one answer,²⁶ they cannot each have the full number.

one party with no antagonism of interest between them and so must join in challenge. Raby v. Frank, 12 Tex. Civ. App. 123, 34 S. W. 777.

26. Mullery v. Great Northern Ry. Co., 30 Mont. 408, 148 Pac. 323; Galveston, etc. Ry. Co. v. Saunders (Tex. Civ. App.), 141 S. W. 829; St. Louis, etc. R. Co. v. Barnes (Tex. Civ. App.), 72 S. W. 1041.

[a] Plea in Abatement by One.—No Issue Thereon by Others.—That one defendant made a plea in abatement which if sustained would throw the whole burden on the other defendants does not entitle each to the full number where the other defendants did not deny the plea in abatement nor raise any issue with him. Wolf v. Perryman, 82 Tex. 112, 17 S. W. 772.

[b] Though Extent of Liability Not the Same.—So where a druggist and his clerk were jointly sued for injuries growing out of a mistake in putting up a prescription, and the fact to be proved is the same, but there is no adverse claim made by either defendant against the other, though the extent of liability of one may be greater than the other, they must join in challenges. Hargrave v. Vaughn, 82 Tex. 347, 18 S. W. 605.

[c] Success of Either Would Benefit Other.—Where neither defendant sought to obtain judgment against the other, nor to assist plaintiff in his recovery against the other, and the success of either would inure in some degree to the benefit of the other, their interests are so nearly identical as to constitute them but one party in the sense of the jury law. Jones v. Ford, 60 Tex. 127.

27. Hargrave v. Vaughn, 82 Tex. 347, 18 S. W. 605; Rogers v. Armstrong (Tex. Civ. App.), 20 S. W. 848.

28. Hall v. Hargadine-McKittrick Dry-Goods Co., 23 Tex. Civ. App. 149, 55 S. W. 747.

[a] Either by One Answer or by Several Settling Up One Defense. When several defendants in a civil action join in their defense, or, severing in their answers, set out but one defense, common to them all, they constitute one party limited to the statutory number given to a "party." Hundhausen v. Atkins, 36 Wis. 518.

[b] Where defendants are making common cause against plaintiff as is shown by the pleadings and facts they are to all intents and purposes one party and only entitled to joint challenge. Watts v. Dubois (Tex. Civ. App.), 66 S. W. 698.

[c] Where defendants had a common interest, their answers were substantially identical, and the defense was conducted in the common interest of all, they were entitled only to peremptory challenges collectively, "whatever might be the rule if different defenses, possibly antagonistic to one another, had been interposed." Downey v. Finucane, 205 N. Y. 251, 98 N. E. 391, affirming 139 N. Y. Supp. 988. See also Lane v. Fenn, 120 N. Y. Supp. 237.

[d] Making Common Fight by One Counsel.—Where parties are jointly sued, are making a common fight against plaintiff, being represented by the same counsel, and their interests are in no respect antagonistic to each other they constitute but one party and are entitled only to exercise their challenges jointly. St. Louis, etc. R. Co. v. Barnes (Tex. Civ. App.), 72 S. W. 1041. See also, Galveston, etc. Ry. Co. v. Saunders (Tex. Civ. App.), 141 S. W. 829.

[e] Where two street railway companies and a city were joined as defendants in an action for personal injuries growing out of an alleged nuisance maintained by the manner in which the track was kept, and it appeared one company having sold the track to the other, had ceased any control over it before the accident, and neither company pleaded over as against each other, or the city, but joined in a common answer, the two companies were not each entitled to the full number of peremptories. Citizens Ry. & Light Co. v. Johns, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 489, 116 S. W. 62.

29. Hundhausen v. Atkins, 36 Wis. 518, they should not be permitted to gain any advantage by separate pleadings.

(IV.) Waiver of Right To Sever.—Claim of right to sever challenges must be made when the peremptories are first called for or the right is waived;³⁰ and it is waived by a defendant who permits his co-defendant to exhaust the challenges without offering to challenge in his turn.³¹

(V.) Exercise of Challenge.—Where parties are entitled to sever in their challenges the court may permit them to consult and act together;³² but whether they will be permitted to do so is a matter of the trial court's discretion,³³ and is not reviewable in the absence of abuse.³⁴ It has been suggested that in case of disagreement as to the exercise of joint challenges, the court should apportion them between the defendants on request;³⁵ but where the statute requires them to join, the proper practice is to overrule the peremptory if they refuse to join.³⁶

k. Defendants Tried or Indicted Jointly.—(1.) In Absence of Direct Statute.—(A.) IN GENERAL.—At the common law each defendant tried jointly with others was personally entitled to the full number of peremptory challenges,³⁷ and this is clearly the rule in the absence of stat-

[a] Assuming that the trial court committed error in ruling that appellant's attorneys could not consult with attorneys of a codefendant, no reversible error is presented by the assignments, where the bill of exceptions fails to show that any juror sat on the jury who was in any wise objectionable to appellant. It must appear that some juror who sat would have been stricken off if the attorneys had been permitted to consult. Citizens' Ry. & Light Co. v. Johns, 52 Tex. Civ. App. 489, 116 S. W. 62.

35. Kelly-Goodfellow Shoe Co. v. Liberty Ins. Co., 8 Tex. Civ. App. 227, 28 S. W. 1927.

[a] Not Reversible Error To Refuse, No Prejudice Appearing.—Whether joint defendants are entitled each to a proportionate share of the challenges, but must settle how the challenges are to be exercised between them is a matter upon which the court said it was "unable to reach a satisfactory conclusion," but suggested it was the best rule to divide them, though in the case at bar substantial justice having been done, and the bill not clearly showing any prejudice, the court refused to reverse merely because the trial court had refused to so divide them. *Bruce v. [a] Under a statute reading "the prosecuting officer and the defendant shall each be entitled," etc., defendants prosecuted jointly are each entitled to the full number of challenges. Shoedler v. State, 3 Wis. 823.

[b] Right Absolute on Joint Trial in Absence of Waiver.—After a review of various authorities the court reversed for failure to allow the full number to each defendant, saying "In our opinion the great weight of authority, both English and American, is to the effect that in criminal cases each defendant is entitled to his separate peremptory challenges, and, in the absence of any express waiver, that right is in no way abridged or affected by a joint trial." People v. Caruso, 170 Mich. 137, 135 N. W. 968, Ann. Cas. 1914A, 857.

[c] Conversely Defendants Are Not Entitled To Sever.—It has never been the rule that because the prisoners were compelled to, or desired to, challenge separately, they were entitled to a separate trial. United States v. Marchant, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 480, 6 L. ed. 700.

40. State v. Durein, 29 Kan. 688, recognizing theory that right is based on personal dislike or prejudice of defendant.

[a] The theory of those cases which uphold separate challenges is "that no man ought to sit as a juror, upon a joint trial, who was not in the estimation of all the prisoners indifferent as to all." Hawkins v. State, 9 Ala. 137, 44 Am. Dec. 431.

41. Wiggins v. State, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 738; Hill v. State, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 246, statute reading "the state and the defendant shall each be entitled."

full number to the defendants jointly.⁴² Where the right to the challenge itself depends upon a statute, some cases hold that unless the statute expressly, or by reasonable construction, permits it, defendants jointly indicted are not permitted more than the full number of challenges jointly.⁴³

(B.) JOINT OR SEVERAL OFFENSE. — If the offense be such that one might be convicted and the other might be acquitted, each of joint defendants is entitled to the full number.⁴⁴ On the other hand if the acquittal of one must work the acquittal of all they are entitled only to the number jointly.⁴⁵

(C.) SEVERANCE IN TRIAL, OR RIGHT THEREOF. — By some authorities the question turns upon whether the defendants have an absolute right to sever, in which case one line of authorities considers the right to separate challenges absolute,⁴⁶ while other courts hold that though the parties could not have a separate trial they are each entitled to the full number.⁴⁷ In other jurisdictions, if the court desires to avoid the inconvenience of separate challenges, it must order separate trials,⁴⁸ and it is merely an added reason for giving each the full number of challenges that the defendants were refused a severance on demand,⁴⁹ and their election to be sued jointly does not affect their right to each have the full number.⁵⁰ But other authorities hold that unless defendants exercise their right to sever they consent to the joint trial and hence have but one set of challenges;⁵¹ and that if the court in his discretion orders a joint trial the presumption is that the defendants' interests are alike and joint challenges sufficient.⁵² Other courts hold that where defendants might sever on demand they are not entitled to each have the full number.⁵³ On separation after trial commenced it is proper to charge against the remaining defendant the peremptories already used in selecting the jury.⁵⁴

(D) PROSECUTION'S RIGHTS.—The general rule is that the state having elected to prosecute the defendants jointly is not entitled to any additional peremptories.⁵⁵ But it has also been held that the state's power to require a joint trial does not affect its right to have the same number of challenges as the defendants together,⁵⁶ and that the state may compel the defendants to join in their challenges by demanding a severance if they will not stipulate to do so.⁵⁷ The prosecution is sometimes allowed the same number as all the defendants together,⁵⁸ or its

(II.) Direct Statutory Provisions.—The statutes in some states specifically provide for additional challenges or the division of the peremptories between joint defendants.⁶¹ Where the statute by its terms only gives the full number to each defendant, the state is not entitled to an equal number;⁶² but some statutes give additional peremptories proportionate to the number given defendant.⁶³ The statutes in many states specifically provide that joint defendants tried together must join in their challenges.⁶⁴ These statutes are not unconstitutional as depriving prisoners of an impartial jury,⁶⁵ and though broad enough in terms to require joint challenge for cause, in practice apply only to peremptories;⁶⁶

(III) Exercise of Right. — Where defendants are entitled to separate challenges, the challenge of counsel will be considered a joint challenge unless it be announced for which defendant it is made.⁶⁸ The order of procedure is fixed by the court under some statutes, if the defendants cannot agree.⁶⁹ Defendants entitled to the full number of challenges each, are not compelled to raise the question in a preliminary form, in order to preserve their rights.⁷⁰ Where joint defendants do not waive their right, the state is allowed its number based upon the assumption that they intend to take their full number.⁷¹

1. Restoration of Challenges, Etc. — If the challenge to the array be sustained, the peremptory challenges used in discharging jurors from the improperly summoned panel are restored,⁷² as are they upon the discharge of the jury because of a mistrial arising through the excusing of one of the jurors,⁷³ provided the privilege is demanded.⁷⁴ But where the court under the statute simply excuses a single juror and retains the others, the peremptories are not restored.⁷⁵ Nor has the de-

[a] Where a juror is excused for cause arising before the taking of evidence has commenced, but after the jury were sworn in chief, while the remaining jurymen may be re-tendered, the defendant is entitled to all his peremptory challenges, the same as if there had been no prior empanelment. West v. State, 42 Fla. 244, 28 So. 430.

[b] Where Juror Discharged Because Ill.—Under the English practice where a juror becomes sick, the entire jury is discharged and a new one impaneled. All peremptories are thereupon restored. And the same rule applies under the statute where the trial court orders the whole jury discharged. State v. Hasledahl, 2 N. D. 521, 52 N. W. 315, 16 L. R. A. 150.

[c] On Continuance After Regular Panel Exhausted.—Where a regular panel was exhausted without a juror being chosen and the court instead of summoning talesmen continued the case for a week and then presented the regular panel for that week, it was error to take from defendant the challenges used on the former panel. It was in effect a trial de novo. State v. Briggs, 27 S. C. 80, 2 S. E. 854.

75. See the cases cited infra, this note.

[a] Under the statute providing for the discharge of a sick juror the court having the option either to retain the eleven or to discharge all and impanel a new jury, if it chooses the former method, the defendants' peremptories remain the same as they were after eleven jurors were accepted in the first instance. That is if he had any defendant any right to an additional peremptory thereupon, where his peremptories were exhausted.⁷⁶ Where the court changed its ruling on a challenge for cause it properly restores peremptories which the party was obliged to use in excluding those particular jurors,⁷⁷ and by so doing cures the error in overruling the challenge for cause,⁷⁸ though the contrary has been held on the theory that the defendant might have used his peremptories to greater advantage.⁷⁹ The court need not give an additional peremptory merely because an accepted juror failed to appear.⁸⁰ The practice of giving an additional peremptory where the court in its discretion has excused a juror after acceptance, has been approved.⁸¹

m. Examination.—(I.) Right or Necessity of Examination.—No examination is necessary on which to base the right to challenge peremptorily;⁸² and the right to examine the jurors solely for the purpose of determining whether to challenge peremptorily has been denied in some jurisdictions.⁸³ One may have the benefit of information elicited upon peremptories remaining he is entitled to use them during the selection of a juror to take the discharged juror's place. But he is not entitled to any more. State v. Hasledahl, 2 N. D. 511, 52 N. W. 315, 16 L. R. A. 150.

[b] Where a juror was excused for illness immediately after the jury had been sworn, but before the information had been read, and on defendant's motion the remaining jurors were not discharged, but another juror was drawn, the court properly overruled, as being premature, that part of the motion which requested the restoration of the entire number of peremptories. And especially was there no error where both parties had peremptories remaining yet neither exercised one on the two juror. People v. Weber, 149 Cal. 705, 86 Pac. 671.

[a] Through juror's failure to tell the truth, and defendants' failure to waive the challenge for cause, though knowing of the deceit, plaintiff was obliged to use a peremptory. State*, 72 Ark. 145, 78 S. W. 773. See also State v. Bonar, 84 Kan. 800, 81 Pac. 484.

the examination for cause, however.⁸⁴ But the trial court need not permit the examination to be unduly protracted for the sole purpose of enabling one to decide as to his peremptories.⁸⁵ By other courts it is held a matter of favor by the court, rather than of strict right, to permit the examination,⁸⁶ and in some jurisdictions one is allowed to examine as a matter of right,⁸⁷ and may ask questions for the sole purpose of disclosing facts from which he may determine whether to challenge peremptorily.⁸⁸

(II.) Time To Examine.—The practice in some states is to compel the party to finish his examination on his challenge for cause, and upon that being overruled, he may then ask questions proper to aid his de-

“There is no statutory authority for the examination of jurors solely for the purpose of a peremptory challenge, or for the allowance of questions which do not tend to prove some fact material to a challenge for cause. There is no real necessity for giving either party this privilege. It tends to encourage inquiries into matters wholly collateral to the case in hand. The field of inquiry upon subjects properly involved in the endeavor to ascertain whether the juror is free from actual or implied bias is so broad that it will give each party ample opportunity to obtain information concerning the admissibility of making peremptory challenges” (People v. Edwards, 163 Cal. 752, 127 Pac. 58, following People v. Hamilton, 62 Cal. 377, 382; People v. Brittan, 118 Cal. 409, 412, 50 Pac. 664; People v. Plyler, 126 Cal. 379, 58 Pac. 904; People v. fendant in determining whether he will challenge a juror peremptorily.” Dimmack v. Wheeling Traction Co., 58 W. Va. 226, 52 S. E. 101.

[b] Reason for Rule.—Aside from the question of taking up the court’s time, there is nothing for the court to decide. Hence there could be nothing to take exception to when the court overrules the questions or refuses to ask further questions after finding juror competent. Lundy v. State, 91 Ala. 100, 9 So. 189.

[a] Question Held Proper.—“Have any of you gentlemen any objection to a girl being employed in a factory?” while somewhat crude should have been permitted for the purpose of ascertaining the minds of jurymen in a negligence case where it was claimed the injured girl was under the statutory age at which she could be employed. Dresch v. Elliott, 137 App. Div. 252, 122 N. Y. Supp. 14.

[b] May Be Asked as to Insurance in Same Company as Deceased.—While it would not disqualify a juror to be insured in the same life insurance company with deceased, the question was proper to enable defendant to exercise his peremptories intelligently. Jahnke v. State, 68 Neb. 154, 94 N. W. 158, 104 N. W. 154.

and whether his verdict will be influenced by a particular fact,¹ and what his attitude will be if the evidence be balanced.² But it is not proper to ask him regarding his attitude toward particular witnesses,³ nor how he would decide upon an assumed state of facts.⁴ He may be asked how far if at all he will be influenced by findings of other tribunals passing upon the same question,⁵ or what he has heard about a

[a] Question Held Proper.—“Would evidence in behalf of a street car company receive less favor with you, are you in that mental state where it would receive less favor than evidence coming in in behalf of a woman here?” Chicago City Ry. Co. v. Fetzner, 113 Ill. App. 180.

[b] As to Evidence of Innocence in View of Relationship.—In a prosecution for incest juror might be asked as to whether he would require more evidence to establish innocence because of the close relationship between accused and prosecutrix. State v. Heft, 156 Iowa 21, 134 N. W. 360.

[c] Whether he would give the same weight to defendant's testimony should he take the stand, as he would to another's testimony is a proper question. Basye v. State, 45 Neb. 261, 63 N. W. 811.

[a] That Railroad Should Pay.—It is reversible error to refuse to permit defendant's counsel to ask jurymen whether they felt that because there has been an accident at a railroad crossing, the railroad company ought to pay for it. Ruby v. Chicago, M & St. P. R. Co., 150 Iowa 125, 120 N. W. 217.

2. People v. Wheeler, 185 Mich. 164, 111 N. W. 710.

[a] Questions Held Proper.—(1) “Suppose, in this case, after the evidence is all introduced, you should be here that it was evenly balanced, so that there was as much for the plaintiff as for the defendant, which way would you be inclined to lean, against or in favor of the company?” is a proper question, for the exclusion whereof reversal will lie. Monaghan v. Agricultural Fire Ins. Co., 53 Mich. 238, 18 N. W. 797. (2) Similar questions were upheld in People v. Peck, 139 Mich. 680, 103 N. W. 178; People v. Keefer, 97 Mich. 15, 56 N. W. 105; Otsego Lake Tp. v. Kirsten, 72 Mich. 1, 40 N. W. 26, 16 Am. St. Rep. 524. (3) But in People v. Caldwell, 107 Mich. 374, 65 N. W. 213, the court said that the question: “Which way would you desire to give your verdict if the evidence was all in, and you found that it was just even, as much one way as the other? Which way would you want to give your verdict, desire to give it? Which way would you lean, for the people or for the defendant?” was properly required to be reframed so as not to suggest to the juror that he would desire to lean one way or the other. And in People v. Wheeler, 185 Mich. 164, 151 N. W. 710, the question being “Supposing that the evidence in this case were equally balanced in your mind, which way would you be inclined to lean, for the people or for the defendant?” it was held not reversible error for the court to require the addition of the words “if either way.” The condition of the juror's mind is as well shown by the question with the amendment, as without. (4) See also People v. Wright, 170 Mich. 154, 135 N. W. 912, where the court says they “are content with the rule in People v. Peck, but are not inclined to extend it.”

[a] On Appeal Whether Influenced by Verdict Appealed From.—In an appeal from a sheriff's jury in condemnation proceedings it is proper to ask if the finding of value by that jury or by any member thereof would have any weight, or would in any manner stand case against a defendant jointly indicted and separately tried,⁶ or his attitude toward the other defendant.⁷

n. Effect of Errors.⁸ — In Criminal Cases. — (A.) ERRORS IN EXAMINATION. — The improper sustaining of an objection to questions, properly propounded to aid in determining whether one shall challenge peremptorily is ground for reversal.⁹ But one is not prejudiced by the failure of the court to permit questions to determine whether he will challenge peremptorily, where he knows the facts his questions would bring out,¹⁰ or where the jurors were sufficiently examined to bring the matter out.¹¹

(B.) DENIAL OF PROPER NUMBER TO DEFENDANT. — Where the defendant is denied his proper number of challenges, reversal follows.¹² It is also ground for reversal that joint defendants were not permitted the proper number.¹³

(C.) GIVING DEFENDANT TOO MANY CHALLENGES. — Defendant cannot be harmed by being given too many challenges.¹⁴ Clearly permitting joint

[a] Acceptance Cured Error.—Under a statute giving to each of two defendants jointly tried half the number of peremptories given to one, a defendant cannot complain if he be given a number greater than exactly defendants more than they are entitled to, is a matter of which neither can complain.¹⁸

(D.) GIVING PROSECUTION TOO MANY CHALLENGES. — It is clearly prejudicial error to allow the prosecution more than the statutory number of challenges,¹⁹ or to give the prosecution one where none was provided by statute;²⁰ and reversal may be had where the prosecution is allowed too many as against joint defendants.²¹ However, so long as the total number allowed the prosecution did not exceed that prescribed by statute an error in the method of computing was harmless.¹⁹

(E.) ERRORS AS TO TIME TO EXERCISE. — It is reversible error to deny defendant his right to challenge at a time when he is entitled to do so;²⁰ but merely permitting the defendant to exercise peremptory challenges out of their strict statutory order could not have prejudiced him.²¹ Permitting the prosecution a peremptory challenge at a time when the court was not bound to allow it, is harmless error, according to some authorities;²² and reversal will not lie for a mere irregularity in permitting the prosecution to exercise a peremptory out of turn where defendant is not deprived of any substantial right;²³ but other courts hold that permitting the prosecution to challenge peremptorily after the proper time is a fatal error where defendant objected.²⁴

[a] Amounts to Giving an Addi-

(I.) JUROR SERVING AFTER BEING CHALLENGED.—Where defendant peremptorily challenged a juror, but he has nevertheless served without fault of the defendant or of his counsel, a new trial must be had.²⁶

(II.) In Civil Cases.—(A.) ERRORS IN EXAMINATION.—The improper sustaining of an objection to a question put upon examination has been held reversible error;²⁷ but some courts say that prejudicial error must be shown.²⁷

(B.) DENYING OR PERMITTING TO ONE PARTY OR OTHER.—In civil cases it has been held that to deny a party his proper number of peremptory challenges is reversible error;²⁸ but the failure is harmless where there should have been a directed verdict against appellant.²⁹ Where the court permitted one party more challenges than the statute prescribed, no reversal can be had in the absence of prejudice to the other party;³⁰

tional Challenge After Tender.—Under a statute which especially provided that the prosecution should not challenge after tender to prisoner, the court had no more authority to extend the time for making peremptory challenges beyond the limit fixed by the statute than he had to increase the number allowed to the state. State v. Fuller, 114 N. C. 885, 19 S. E. 797.

[b] Error Cured by Withdrawal of Challenge.—Where the state has been permitted to challenge after a juror was accepted but before he was sworn, and upon defendant's objection the state at once withdrew its challenge and the juror was returned to the jury and served thereon, no error has been committed, especially where the court offered to let the juror serve or not as defendant wished. Leonard v. State, 66 Ala. 461.

25. Stripling v. State, 77 Ga. 108, 3 S. E. 277 (where neither defendant nor his counsel knew the jurors who served); Sherman v. State, 2 Ga. App. 148, 38 S. E. 893.

[a] Disallowed Where Counsel Ought To Have Discovered.—Where a juror was well known to defendant's counsel and through mistake, arising out of a similarity in names, he served on the jury though his name had been stricken off the list by defendant's peremptory, and that the wrong man had served was not brought to the attention of the court, or prosecuting attorney, until the jury was polled after verdict, a new trial was refused since the defendant's counsel ought to have observed the jury and discovered the mistake before trial. Cooper v. State, 65 Tex. Crim. 423, 144 S. W. 937.

26. Vandalia v. Seibert, 47 Ill. App. 477.

28. Swanson v. Mendenhall, 80 Minn. 56, 82 N. W. 1093.

[a] Must Be an Absolute Adverse Ruling.—The court during a colloquy between it and counsel stated it was inclined to hold that the right to challenge did not exist under the circumstances. Counsel excepted but did not interpose any challenge. The supreme court refused any relief saying, "For all that appears in the record the plaintiffs might have admitted the challenge if it had been made." *Fink v. United American Fire Ins. [a] No Prejudice Where Party Satisfied With Jury.—Assuming that under the circumstances plaintiff was allowed more challenges than she was entitled to, defendant is not harmed where the only effect was to put additional men upon the jury and defendant did not exhaust its challenges, thereby showing that it was satisfied with the jury.

but the contrary has been held.³¹ Permitting peremptories as to a struck jury where the statute did not allow them has been held ground for reversal though the other party was also allowed an equal number.³²

(C.) ERRORS AS TO TIME TO EXERCISE. — Permitting a challenge at a time not contemplated by the statute has been held reversible error,³³ but merely permitting a challenge out of order is harmless where no prejudice appears.³⁴ To compel one to exercise his challenge at a time when he is not obliged to do so is reversible error.³⁵

(D.) ERRORS AS TO JOINT PARTIES AND ON CONSOLIDATION. — One of joint defendants who was denied the right to exercise his proper number of challenges, is entitled to a reversal;³⁶ but it must appear that some juror remained on the jury whom appellant desired to challenge.³⁷

[b] Harmless Where Jury Was Fair. After an elaborate review of the English and American cases the court concludes the better rule to be that the mere giving of a peremptory challenge beyond what the statute prescribes is harmless even where the jury as finally selected was fair. Stevens v. Union R. Co., 26 R. I. 90, 58 Atl. 492, 66 L. R. A. 465. See also Adams v. Olive, 48 Ala. 551; Reid v. Reid, 3 Ala. 88.

[c] Substituted Juror Passed for Cause. — No reversal can be had unless it appears that the jury was rendered partial by the mistake. And that was clearly not the effect where the juror who was substituted was passed for cause. Creech v. Aberdeen, 44 Wash. 52, 87 Pac. 44.

[d] Must Appear Additional Were Used. — The bill of exceptions based on the allowance by the court of more than the statutory number of challenges to the adverse party must show that more than the full number allowed by statute were actually used. Hansley v. Harmon (Tex. Civ. App.), 137 S. W. 406.

33. Ayres v. Hubbard, 88 Mich. 155, 50 N. W. 111.

[a] Amounts to Giving an Additional Challenge. — It was giving plaintiff an undue advantage to permit him to challenge peremptorily after having passed the juror to defendant who accepted him and whose peremptories were exhausted. Dunn v. Wilmington & W. R. Co., 131 N. C. 446, 42 S. E. 802.

Time to challenge, see generally supra, VII, E, 5, e.

34. Jones v. Van Zandt, 2 McLean 611, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,502.

[a] Harmless Where Verdict Just. The court refused to reverse, "because another trial, properly conducted, could only result in a judgment for the appellees." State v. Dalton, 69 Miss. 611, 10 So. 578.

[b] Error Harmless Where Party Refused To Object to Jury. — Assuming that it was not a proper exercise of the court's discretion to permit a peremptory after both sides had accepted the jury, the error is harmless where the court announced the opposite party might make any further objections to the substituted juror and none was made. Curnaw v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 46 S. C. 79, 24 S. E. 71.

Plaintiff waives any irregularity in giving joint defendants too many peremptories where he fails to object at the time.⁴² To allow defendants too many is harmless to plaintiff where defendants do not use beyond the number entitled.⁴³ The same is true where it does not appear that plaintiff was deprived of a fair trial by defendants' use of the excess challenges.⁴⁴ On a consolidation of cases it is reversible error to confine plaintiff to the number given on a single suit, while giving each defendant his full number.⁴⁵

6. Using or Retaining Peremptories as Affecting Error.⁴² — a. Overruling Challenge for Cause Harmless Where Juror Excluded. [a] Though there can be no review of challenges for cause, the fact that defendant was obliged to use a peremptory after the overruling of his to challenge an incompetent juror if he still has peremptories,⁴⁴ and it is clearly non-prejudicial where the party must show that he has exhausted his peremptories,⁴⁵ or must show that because of the previous exhaustion of challenges he was obliged to take an objectionable juror.⁴⁶ Especially does the rule apply where the other party challenged and the juror was excused without the first party having been obliged to use a peremptory;⁴⁷ and it was mere error without prejudice where the court changed its ruling and excluded the challenged juror before the challenger used any peremptory.⁴⁸ There is authority for holding that challenge for cause does not entitle him to any relief on the theory that he has unnecessarily been deprived of a peremptory challenge. Moore v. Com., 7 Bush (Ky.) 191.

[b] Where defendant was given two more peremptories than the statute allowed, and he was thus enabled to get rid of two jurors who should have been excluded for cause he could not possibly have been prejudiced. State v. Reppert, 11 Nev. 98.

[c] Applied Where Court Refused To Strike.—It is not error for the court to refuse to strike deaf juror from panel where defendant struck him off, and no damage is shown. Anderson v. Green, 46 Ga. 361.

124, 70 N. E. 993. So far as Fletcher v. Crist, 139 Ind. 121, 38 N. E. 472, may recognize a different rule, it has been modified by Siberry v. State, 149 Ind. 684, 39 N. E. 936, 47 N. E. 458, which expressly overrules Brown v. State, 70 Ind. 576, 588.

[b] The prisoner is not prejudiced where the juror is not forced on him and the peremptory used to exclude him was not needed for any other purpose. State v. Eder, 85 N. C. 585.

[c] No Error in Civil Case Where Challenger Not Prejudiced.—Where juror is challenged peremptorily and it does not appear that the challenger's rights were in any way prejudiced by the erroneous overruling of his challenge for cause, no reversal follows. Blevins v. Erwin Cotton Mills, 150 N. C. 493, 64 S. E. 428.

the erroneous overruling of a challenge for cause in a criminal case is reversible, though the juror was excused on peremptory challenge.⁴⁹

b. *Waiver of Peremptory as Waiving Error.*⁵⁰ — After waiver of a peremptory challenge, one cannot complain of the overruling of his challenge for cause;⁵¹ nor can he complain of the manner in which he was obliged to challenge.⁵²

c. *Failure To Exhaust as Curing Errors.*⁵³ — (I.) In General. Though there is authority to the effect that the mere refusal to challenge peremptorily does not preclude one from raising objections to the ruling on the challenge for cause, if the effect of that ruling is to leave incompetent persons on the jury,⁵⁴ the general rule is that if the challenger does not exhaust his peremptory challenges, and so is not compelled to take the juror objected to, he cannot complain of the overruling of his challenge for cause,⁵⁵ especially where it appears that the

the rule obtains where at least one of the jurors was properly excused for cause. State v. Yetzer, 97 Iowa 423, 66 N. W. 737.

[a] Where Not Clear How Juror Excluded.—Though juror did not sit, and it is not clear whether he was excluded by being stricken off by defendant, or was not chosen by lot on defendant's failure to strike to the extent permitted by law, reversal follows improper overruling of defendant's challenge of a juror for not having a statutory qualification. Dowdy v. Com., 9 Gratt. (50 Va.) 727, 60 Am. Dec. 314.

[b] Reason for Rule.—A juror having been declared competent, the court says "The defendant was compelled to get rid of him by a peremptory challenge, so that, although the juror did not sit in the case, the question of his competency may be considered as fairly before this court, seeing that the circuit court deprived the accused of one peremptory challenge to which he was entitled if the juror be held incompetent." juror did not sit, though the means by which he was excused is not clear.⁵⁶ So also one who has not exhausted his peremptory challenges cannot complain of the exclusion of a juror on the other party's challenge;⁵⁷ but the erroneous allowance of a challenge for cause by the state has been held prejudicial to defendant though his challenges were not exhausted.⁵⁸ Where the party who challenged for cause did not exhaust his peremptories, error cannot be assigned upon the allowance of the challenge for cause.⁵⁹ One who still has peremptories cannot raise the question that the other party did not make his challenge for

[a] Reason for Rule.—The state's challenge for cause, even if erroneously granted would not be ground for reversal, because if disallowed the state could have removed the juror by peremptory challenge and the presumption is that it would have done so. State v. Jackson, 42 La. Ann. 1170, 8 So. 297.

cause in a manner technically correct,⁶⁰ nor question the ruling of the court as to the order in which peremptories were to be interposed,⁶¹ or the ruling of the court in giving the other party too many challenges in a civil suit,⁶² or withholding permission to withdraw a peremptory,⁶³ nor the action of the court in refusing to examine the juror as trior.⁶⁴ The fact that one has peremptories remaining may be considered on review of a motion denying a change of venue.⁶⁵

(II.) Rulings Respecting Drawing and Selection of Jurors.⁶⁶ — Where peremptory challenges are not exhausted, one is not prejudiced by a failure to call a special venire in the regular manner.⁶⁷ Nor can the defendant complain of errors in summoning, selecting, or drawing persons to serve as jurors,⁶⁸ nor of discrepancies between the special venire and the copy thereof served,⁶⁹ nor of the manner in which names are selected from the lists to serve on the trial jury.⁷⁰ If a jury is in

[a] Error Waived.—The error in compelling a defendant to exercise his peremptories in a manner not warranted by the statute is waived, where it appears defendant had unused peremptories at the time the jury was sworn. Territory v. Padilla, 12 N. M. 1, 71 Pac. 1084.

[a] Irregularity in making an order for a special venire, where his peremptory challenges were not exhausted, and he was not in any way harmed,

[a] That a special venire was improperly summoned in that certain persons were arbitrarily omitted from the list by the court, if amounting to error, would be harmless where defendant did not exhaust his peremptories. State v. Register, 133 N. C. 746, 46 S. E. 21.

[b] Unwarranted interference of the trial judge in ordering the sheriff to summon colored men on a special venire, cannot be complained of. Capehart v. Stewart, 80 N. C. 101.

fact an unlawful jury the exercise, or failure to exercise, peremptories would not cure the error.⁷¹ One's challenge to the array is not waived by his having peremptories remaining,⁷² but on review of a ruling on motion to quash a special venire, the court may consider the fact that the defendant had peremptories remaining.⁷³

(III.) Excusing on Own Motion or Out of Regular Order.⁷⁴ — That the court excused jurors who were not challenged cannot be complained of by a defendant who still had peremptory challenges left when he accepted the jury,⁷⁵ or that jurors were improperly stood aside,⁷⁶ or that he arbitrarily excused qualified jurors from the regular panel and substituted others,⁷⁷ or that the court excused a juror, after acceptance, on juror's request and for reasons which seemed proper to the court,⁷⁸ or failed to excuse a juror on his own motion on a claim of exemption,⁷⁹ or that the court exercised its discretion to discharge jurors on their re-examination after acceptance,⁸⁰ cannot be complained of where the party did not exhaust his peremptory challenges.

[b] Names Put Back in Box Too Soon.—An irregularity on the part of the clerk in putting names back into the box before the time when the statute so directed, is waived where the defendant had peremptories remaining as that shows he was satisfied with the jury he had. *State v. (IV.) Questions Improperly Overruled.⁸¹ — Where one's peremptories have not been exhausted when the jury is completed, he cannot usually complain of the overruling of questions to a juror.⁸² Thus, refusing to permit a question which would have been proper to aid in the determination as to peremptorily challenging is not ground for reversal, where no peremptory challenges had as yet been interposed,⁸³ or where the questioned juror did not serve.⁸⁴ But where a proper question was not permitted and the party has not exhausted his peremptories it has been held that reversal will lie, because he might have discovered reasons for exercising his right had the question been permitted.⁸⁵ And even conceding that one has not the right to ask questions for the sole purpose of determining whether it is advisable to challenge peremptorily, if the question asked was proper to bring out grounds to challenge for cause, and was overruled, defendant is prejudiced notwithstanding he had peremptories remaining.⁸⁶

was error to permit the prosecution to re-examine a juror and peremptorily challenge him after he had been accepted, the error is cured where the defendant had peremptories when the jury was completed. Glenn v. State, 71 Ark. 86, 71 S. W. 254.

[a] Reason for Rule And Cases Distinguished.—"The excuse is a sort of equity and is met with a sort of equity entitled to just as much consideration. The defendant had a right to a fair and impartial jury. The excuse is that she had a fair and impartial jury, and therefore was not prejudiced by the error of the court. The answer to this excuse is that she does not know whether she had or not." State v. Bresland, 59 Minn. 281, 61 N. W. 450, distinguishing State v. Lawlor, 28 Minn. 216, 9 N. of all were exhausted, or they cannot complain of the overruling of a challenge for cause;⁸⁸ and the mere fact that one of the defendants has exhausted his peremptories does not show he had to accept a juror obnoxious to him.⁸⁹ Failure to give joint parties the proper number is harmless where the party complaining did not exhaust those given.⁹⁰

d. Forcing Party To Exhaust Peremptories as Error. — (I.) In General. — Where a party exhausts his peremptory challenges, using one of them on a juror who should have been excused or challenged for cause, reversal follows in some jurisdictions,⁹¹ the right thereto being to exhaust challenges without offering to challenge in turn, see supra, VII, E, 5, j, (IV).

absolute in such a case.⁹² It must appear, however, that the party was compelled to use one of his peremptories in excluding the juror who should have been excluded for cause,⁹³ though it has been held that where a juror was improperly presented, reversal follows the use of defendant's final peremptory in removing him though he and the juror substituted were legally qualified.⁹⁴ The premature use of a peremptory challenge does not deprive accused of the right to raise the question that he has been obliged to use the peremptory to exclude a juror who should have been excused for cause.⁹⁵ But one does not gain any additional right by having his peremptory overruled where the challenge for cause was properly decided.⁹⁶

tice. The supreme court says that inasmuch as there was no intimation of any desire by the court to reconsider its ruling, they would not permit the zeal of counsel to secure a possible advantage to his client, to so operate as to deprive the accused of his right to object to the court's ruling. *Gammons v. [a] Reason for Rule.—After reviewing the cases at some length the court concludes that the whole question turns upon whether prejudice will be presumed from the mere fact that defendant was deprived of a peremptory. Adopting that rule loses sight of the principle that all defendant is entitled to is a fair and impartial jury. Since the defendant may waive one or more of his peremptories, and does so whenever he is satisfied with the jurors in the box or is not certain that he can obtain others more favorable to him, no reason appears why he might not do so as to the twelfth juror, as well as earlier. Therefore, after he has exhausted his peremptories, no presumption arises that the subsequent jurors were in any way objectionable to him. State v. Thorne, 41 Utah 414, 126 Pac. 286, Ann. Cas. 1915D, 90.

[b] Must Show Had Occasion To Use Another, or Some Juror Objectionable.—It must appear that after having exhausted his peremptories he not only had used one on a juror who should have been excluded on his challenge for cause, but that subsequent to so exhausting, he had occasion or desire to use an additional peremptory or that some one or more of the jury were not satisfactory to him. Seragg v. Sallee, 24 Cal. App. 133, 140 Pac. 706, following People v. Schafer, 161 Cal. 573, 119 Pac. 920, which explains People v. Durrant, 116 Cal. 179, 48 Pac. 75, as intending to lay down that rule, though the peremptory challenges in that case were not exhausted and distinguishing People v. Riggins, 159 Cal. 113, 112 Pac. 862, as being a case where the circumstances took the case out of the operation of the rule.

[c] Applied in Civil Case Where Verdict by Part of Jury Sufficient. The overruling of a proper challenge for cause followed by the exhaustion of the party's peremptory challenges does not constitute prejudicial error in a civil cause, where it is not shown that any member of the jury was objectionable, nor any additional peremptory desired, and the verdict, though needing the concurrence of but three-fourths of the jury, was in fact unanimous. City of Guthrie v. Snyder, 43 Okla. 334, 143 Pac. 8.

1. People v. Riggins, 159 Cal. 113, 112 Pac. 862; Wooten v. State, 99 Tenn. 182, 41 S. W. 813, compare rule under statute infra.

objectionable juror has served clearly appears when the party's subsequent challenge for cause has been overruled as to a juror who remained on the panel.² Some courts hold that there must be a specific objection or challenge to a juror after the challenges are exhausted;³ but others hold it is not necessary to actually challenge another juror and have the challenge overruled, in order to properly save the question;⁴ it is sufficient if it appears that the party was deprived of his right to challenge peremptorily because he had been obliged to use peremptories unnecessarily.⁵

Where peremptories have been exhausted, an erroneous excluding of a juror on the other party's challenge for cause is no ground for reversal unless it appears that some injury resulted through the selection of a juror obnoxious on legal grounds after the exhaustion;⁶ and the same rule has been applied where the court excluded a juror on its own motion.⁷

7. Review of Individual Challenge.⁸—Where no objection is taken to the admission or rejection of evidence or to any proceeding on the

[a] Where defendant has had a peremptory overruled after his peremptories are exhausted, and he has used one peremptory in excluding a juror who should have been excused on his challenge for cause there is clearly reversible error. Carr v. State, 104 Ala. 43, 16 So. 155.

[a] Presumed That After Accepted Juror Was Qualified.—Defendant having exhausted his peremptories before the twelfth juror was chosen, and the record being silent as to any objection made to him it will be presumed that there was no legal reason why he was not an acceptable juror. Rash v. State, 61 Ala. 89.

[b] Juror Accepted Without Question.—Where after exhausting his peremptories the defendant accepted a juror without question as to his qualification, it must be presumed that he was qualified. State v. Megorden, 49 Ore. 259, 88 Pac. 306.

[a] Objection To Panel Not Sufficient.—Where after peremptories were exhausted, a juror was taken who was neither challenged peremptorily nor for cause, there is no showing that he was objectionable simply because he had been objected to for a matter that went to the whole panel and not to the particular juror. Johns v. State, 55 Md. 350.

[b] Not a Mere Irregularity To Be Presented by Affidavit.—The impaneling of the jury is part of the trial and any ruling of the court, with respect thereto, if erroneous, is an error of law occurring at the trial and not a mere irregularity. Silcox v. Lang, 7th Cal. 118, 20 Pac. 297.

14. State v. Fields, 234 Mo. 615, 138 S. W. 518; Everton v. Esgate, 24 Neb. 235, 38 N. W. 794, the voir dire examination must be set out in the record so as to show whether a juror was interrogated upon a point which is made the basis of a motion for a new trial.

[a] Fact That New Trial Not Allowed May Be Considered.—Though the bill of exceptions contains a statement by the court that a certain question would have been allowed had its attention been specially called thereto, the supreme court will not reverse, but will assume that, had the trial court believed the question important, it would have granted a new trial. Connors v. United States, 158 U. S. 408, 15 Sup. Ct. 951, 39 L. ed. 1033.

the bill must show that the case did not fall therein.¹⁷ The bill of exceptions must show what became of the jurors excepted to.¹⁸ The reviewing court can only consider the specific objection made.¹⁹ The record must show that the party did not receive his proper number of peremptories, or reversal cannot be had therefor,²⁰ and that the challenges were exhausted,²¹ or that defendant was compelled to exercise his peremptory at a wrong time.²² Where the record is con-tion of the bill of exceptions recites that counsel requested the proper number of challenges, "which request was denied," no error appears where it is not shown that defendant exercised or offered to exercise any peremptory challenge, nor that he had exhausted his challenges when the jury was sworn. The reviewing court is merely left to conjecture as to what took place and as to whether defendant was actually denied his rights. State v. Collins (Mont.), 163 Pac. 102.

[b] Insufficient Assignment.—Where there is no reference to the record and nothing further in the brief than what appears in the assignment, the court may disregard an assignment that a juror was found incompetent. Hughes v. State, 126 Tenn. 40, 148 S. W. 543, Ann. Cas. 1913D, 1262.

17. King v. State (Tex. Crim.), 100 S. W. 387, challenge based on failure to pay poll taxes.

State* (Tex. Crim.), 64 S. W. 245.

[a] Disqualifying opinion of juror will not be considered where this alleged ground of error was not contained in the specifications of error used on the motion for a new trial and is not contained in the assignments of error, the sole ground mentioned in either being that the juror had given an affidavit used on a motion for change of venue. State v. Morse, 35 S. D. 18, 150 N. W. 293.

[b] Ruling Made on Admission of Counsel.—Where court had no discretion to permit peremptory challenges after juror sworn, but did so upon the admission of defendant's counsel that the discretion existed, the reviewing court refused to reverse on the theory that the discretion was properly exercised, the only specific objection being that the court should not have exercised its discretion upon the prosecutor's bare statement. People v. Hughes, 137 N. Y. 29, 32 N. E. 1105.

20. Clarke v. State, 87 Ala. 71, 6 So. 368, where there is no recital of the overruling of any challenge, but only a motion made that a certain number be allowed without any statement of what ruling the court made thereon, no error appears.

[a] Record Uncertain.—It appearing that plaintiff had stricken off but two jurors when defendant has stricken three, but it not appearing whether this was because defendant had stricken out of turn or plaintiff had waived a challenge, the record does not show error. Gilchrist v. Brande, 58 Wis. 184, 15 N. W. 817.

tradictory as to what was done there is nothing to review.²³ But though the record does not state the facts in a manner wholly intelligible to the reviewing court the questions may be considered.²⁴ It may be assumed that a challenge was interposed though not recited in the record,²⁵ but where error is claimed in allowing the challenge it must appear that the challenge was for cause and not peremptory.²⁶ Where the record shows that challenge was not made in time it must also show why it was not seasonably made.²⁷ It must affirmatively appear by the record that jurors have been examined on voir dire.²⁸ In many jurisdictions error as to overruling challenges cannot be considered unless all the evidence on the voir dire is brought up,²⁹ but in other jurisdictions only so much need be brought up as dis-

Roderigas*, 7 Nev. 328, where the judge in signing the bill of exceptions states that the facts were not as assumed by counsel there is no showing in the record of any irregularity.

[a] Contradiction Between Assignment and Record.—Where the bill of exceptions assigns as error the "refusal to sustain defendant's peremptory challenge" and it appears that the refusal was of a challenge for cause, technically the assignment may be overruled for not being sustained by the record. Southern Kansas Ry. Co. v. Sage, 43 Tex. Civ. App. 38, 94 S. W. 1074.

[b] Where the records were imperfect, and the parties were not in accord as to what had been done, the judgment will not be disturbed for the trial court's rulings on challenges. Cleveland v. Atkinson, 94 Iowa 621, 63 N. W. 465.

were propounded cannot be raised for the first time in the reply brief.³⁴

F. QUALIFICATIONS AND GROUNDS FOR INDIVIDUAL CHALLENGE. — 1. In General. — The purpose of all statutes and rules in reference to juries is to secure to both sides a trial by an honest, impartial, intelligent jury of resident citizens.³⁵ At the common law the qualification of a juror was summed up in the expression "liberos et legales homines de vicineto," that is, free and lawful men from the neighborhood.³⁶ For lack of any of these qualifications, principal challenge would lie,³⁷ while the causes of challenges to the favor were said to be "infinite."³⁸ The common-law causes of challenge have survived,³⁹ and the statutory requirements are in substance those of the common law, with certain additional qualifications.⁴⁰

If the words of the statute are as consistent with the creation of an exemption, as a qualification, it will be construed as the one or the other accordingly as the subject-matter was one of exemption or qualification at common law,⁴¹ but where a statute says certain persons are "liable" to jury duty it means that those persons are qualified subject to the privilege of exemption set out in the statute.⁴² So far as a particular qualification may be required by the constitution, of course the legislature cannot abrogate it,⁴³ and the constitutional guaranty of an impartial jury will not be allowed to be destroyed by the legislature's omission of grounds that clearly render the juror incompetent.⁴⁴ But in so far as a statute aims to secure honest and intelligent jurors it is in harmony with the provisions of the constitution requiring impartiality.⁴⁵ Therefore, so long as the rule requiring an impartial jury of the county is not infringed, the legislative body may prescribe practically any qualification it sees fit,⁴⁶ including additional qualifications beyond those required of a common-law jury at the time of the enactment of the constitutional provision guaranteeing such jury.⁴⁷ Also the legislature may, from motives of public policy, exclude certain persons from jury service.⁴⁸

Cases may arise which are not covered by any statute, or by any of the common-law writers and which must be determined by common-law principles,⁴⁹ but the right to challenge for cause does not spring from any especial provision of law, but rather from the general rule that the method of trial shall be according to the common law.⁵⁰ Moreover, the provisions of the codes and statutes are declaratory only,⁵¹ and the grounds of challenge enumerated in the statutes are not exclusive of all other grounds,⁵² the statutes themselves sometimes pro-

[a] Must Be Electors and From the Vicinage.—The provisions that jurors be electors and reside in the vicinage are the only qualifications which the legislature could not change. The latter qualification has always been associated with the jury system in criminal cases in both England and America. And in America where no class distinctions are recognized an elector is in the eye of the law the peer of any man. People v. Harding, 53 Mich. 48, 18 N. W. 555, 51 Am. Rep. 95.

[a] Contrary Held as to Territorial Legislature.—In Reece v. Knott, 3 Utah 451, 24 Pac. 757, it is held that a territorial legislature could not affix any qualifications unknown at common law since the federal constitution guaranteeing trial by jury has reference to a common-law jury.

48. Rawlins v. Georgia, 201 U. S. 638, 26 Sup. Ct. 560, 50 L. ed. 899, the only limitation is that there be no discrimination against persons on account of race, etc. The law may exclude certain classes on the ground that the good of the community requires that their regular occupation be not interfered with.

[a] "Fourteenth Amendment" Is Only Limitation.—"It may confine the selection to males, to freeholders, to citizens, to persons within certain ages, or to persons having educational qualifications." But the amendment prohibits discrimination as to race or color. Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S. 303, 25 L. ed. 664.

viding that other causes may be considered,⁵³ and even the elimination of what was formerly a ground of challenge does not necessarily imply that the ground no longer exists.⁵⁴

A juror must have the requisite statutory qualifications.⁵⁵ The qualifications divide into two distinct classes; those which inherently render him incompetent and those which have been prescribed from reasons of policy.⁵⁶ The codes and statutes frequently provide in terms that any want of the qualifications prescribed by the statutes shall be ground of challenge for cause,⁵⁷ with the further provision

[a] Rule Applied in District of Columbia.—The provisions of District of Columbia, Code, §§215 and 217, prescribing qualifications of jurors and exemptions from jury service, do not include the whole subject of the qualifications of jurors in that district. The common law of Maryland in force Feb. 27, 1801, remains in force in the district. Jurors must at least have the qualifications mentioned in §215; but they also must have those common-law qualifications, which are not inconsistent with the qualifications required by the code. *Crawford v. [b] Unfit Persons May Always Be Excluded.—To hold that the court could not exclude unfit persons merely because their particular cause of unfitness is not mentioned in the statute "would be monstrous." Sutton v. Fox, 55 Wis. 531, 13 N. W. 477, 42 Am. Rep. 744.

[c] Excluding Members of Family Having Feud With Prisoner's Family. In a murder trial the judge properly exercised his discretion in excluding on the state's challenge a juror, where deceased had been tried and acquitted of murdering the juror's brother, and the judge knew that there was a bitter feud between the families of the juror and the accused. State v. Kellogg, 104 La. 580, 29 So. 285.

That two of the jurors are husband and wife does not in any manner affect the validity of the verdict.⁶⁰

2. Exemption and Grounds for Challenge Contrasted.—Exemption from jury service is a personal privilege, and is not a ground for challenge,⁶¹ and the statutes frequently provide that an exemption is no ground for challenge.⁶² Exemption does not disqualify a juror.⁶³ These rules are not changed by the fact that the statute makes it the duty of the selecting officers to omit the names of exempt persons,⁶⁴ even where the officials are punishable for wilfully putting such persons on the list.⁶⁵ But the statutes sometimes make certain exemptions ground for challenge.⁶⁶

3. Distinction Between Civil and Criminal Cases.—The statutes of some states specifically provide for the same qualifications in both civil and criminal cases,⁶⁷ and for the same challenges for cause,⁶⁸ and a general provision in the statute that the same challenges shall be allowed has been held to have reference only to challenges for cause.⁶⁹ While the statement that certain sections of the one shall not apply to the other, has been construed to mean that provisions existent at the time, save those expressly excluded, do apply to the other,⁷⁰ the separate statement of criminal and civil grounds has been held to show that the grounds for challenge are not the same.⁷¹ A general provision that the jury shall be "formed in the same manner" has been construed to refer to the manner of selecting rather than to the qualifications of the jurors,⁷² though the practical construction of a similar statute has been held to be that whatever disqualifications of the one which are not by their terms applicable to that one only, applies to jurors in the other.⁷³

[a] The Grounds of Challenge in Civil and Criminal Cases Are Different. The legislature has shown its intent clearly since formerly the causes for challenge and disqualification were blended in one general statute. But on revision separate provisions were made. Some of the causes are the same, or practically the same, while others are clearly inapplicable to one or the other proceedings. But the mere fact that a cause of challenge stated in the statute applicable to one, seems equally applicable to the other is no

of jurors are determined by the law in force at the time they are presented.⁷⁶ So persons who had the necessary qualifications when selected, but lose some before being drawn on the case, are subject to challenge for cause;⁷⁷ and if persons are selected who do not possess statutory qualifications at the time of selection, challenge for cause should be sustained though they have attained the qualification subsequently, and before they are drawn on the case.⁷⁸ And if the law be changed so as to require an additional qualification, it does not affect jurors already chosen.⁷⁹ A change in the statute subsequent to the commission of the crime is not violative of the ex post facto rule,⁸⁰ and the statutes may provide in terms that they are applicable to pending cases.⁸¹

b. Rule in Federal Court.—By virtue of congressional action, the qualifications and exemptions of jurors in the federal courts are the same as those of jurors in the highest court of law in the state where summoned.⁸² The legislature may prescribe qualifications in addition to those prescribed by congress,⁸³ but if there is any conflict between acts of congress and the acts of the legislature respecting the qualification of jurors, the former controls in the federal courts.⁸⁴

Whether or not the juror's physical infirmity is such as to render him incompetent is a question of fact,⁴ and as such will not be reviewed unless unsupported by the evidence and clearly wrong.⁵ A person who has defective hearing is properly excluded on challenge,⁶ but his retention is not ground for reversal where it is clear that he heard all the evidence.⁷ It is proper to exclude one who suffers such pain that he is obliged to use morphine.⁸

b. Mental Caliber Generally.—The statutes of many states provide that jurors shall be of "sound discretion,"⁹ or of "sound judgment,"¹⁰ and "discreet,"¹¹ or shall be "judicious and discreet persons."¹² Other statutes provide that jurors should be "intelligent,"¹³ or of "ordinary intelligence,"¹⁴ or "of sufficient intelligence,"¹⁵ and "well informed,"¹⁶ or possessed of "reasonable information."¹⁷ Even in the absence of a statute one would be entitled to a jury of persons of reasonable intelligence,¹⁸ and any construction of a statute which would lead to the conclusion that the jury is not to be intelligent is absurd.¹⁹

Where the statute provides that the juror shall be a "competent and intelligent person" with a proviso that the court shall decide the competency,²⁰ the challenge thereupon is one to the favor,²¹ and though bad memory is undoubtedly ground for challenge under the statute, the decision of the trial court thereon is not subject to review.²²

c. Educational Requirements.—(I.) In General.—Some statutes require that the jurors be persons of "fair education,"²³ and under a statute requiring that they be "well informed" it has been held that they must not be "illiterate."²⁴ Inability of a juror to calculate interest does not disqualify him,²⁵ but some statutes require a knowledge of arithmetic when that is necessary to enable the juror to understand the case.²⁶

(II.) Knowledge of English.—Even in the absence of a statute, by the weight of authority, jurors must be able to understand the English language,²⁷ but other courts have held that such lack of understanding does not necessarily disqualify the jurors,²⁸ and in at least one state it is provided by statute that a person who speaks Spanish or Mexican but not English cannot be discriminated against or challenged on that ground.²⁹ The statutes of many states, however, require that the jurors shall understand the English language,³⁰ and it is made a ground of challenge for cause that he does not understand,³¹ or has a "want of competent knowledge,"³² or does not understand the proceedings before the court.³³ Aside from the rule that lack of a qualification is a "general cause" for challenge,³⁴ some statutes make it a "general cause" that a juror has a "want of knowledge of English language as used in courts."³⁵

The statutes, in terms, sometimes give the trial court discretion to decide whether the ignorance of the juror of the English language is sufficient to make him incompetent.³⁶ Under such a statute the challenge clearly lies,³⁷ and may be exercised by the prosecution as well as by the prisoner.³⁸ A challenge on such ground is one to the favor,³⁹ and the decision is one for the court's sound discretion.⁴⁰

No fixed or workable criterion of the amount and kind of knowledge of English can be laid down other than the juror's general way of talking.⁴¹ Where the statute only requires him to understand

English, he is not incompetent because he cannot read and write it.⁴² In the absence of a statute inability to read or write English is not disqualifying.⁴³ It is, however, clearly within the legislative power to prescribe ability to read and write English as a qualification for jury service,⁴⁴ and some statutes so provide,⁴⁵ with the added provision in some states that he shall be able to do so "understandingly."⁴⁶ The statutes sometimes specifically provide that inability to read and write English shall be ground for challenge.⁴⁷ Some constitutions require that the juror be able to read and write any section of it,⁴⁸ but in the absence of some such statutory or constitutional provision, inability to read and understand the federal or state constitutions does not render the juror incompetent.⁴⁹

(III.) Knowledge of Law or Legal Terms.⁵⁰ — The general rule is that a juror is not to be tested, as to his competency, by his knowledge or belief as to the law,⁵¹ and even under the statutes and rules as to understanding the English language the more usual holding is that he need not understand legal terms,⁵² but even where the statute does not specifically mention English, it has been held the court properly excluded a juror who did not understand such words.⁵³

Johnson v. Park City, 27 Utah 420, 76 Pac. 216.

[b] Erroneous Opinion of Law Contrasted With Prejudice as to Issues. In questioning jurors as to their opinions care must be taken not to confuse their beliefs and opinions as to the issues with their understanding or belief as to the law. A juror is not to be rejected because he has confused or mistaken ideas as to abstract principles of law. If he has no knowledge of the circumstances of the case, nor prejudice or bias as to defendant and has avowed his willingness to accept the law as given him by the court he is competent. State v. Kinney, 45 Wash. 165, 87 Pac. 1123.

[c] Answer Upon Erroneous Assumption as to Burden of Proof.—A mere answer to a hypothetical question based upon the erroneous assumption that the burden of proving innocence was on defendant is not sufficient to show prejudice or preconceived opinion. The court allowed the question to be answered at the same time pointing out the error in respect to the burden. State v. Heft, 155 Iowa 21, 134 N. W. 950.

[d] Juror Need Not Understand Indictment or Rule of Presumption. "That a juror should not, until advised, comprehend the office and legal effect of an indictment, or the rule of law respecting the presumption of innocence, is not a matter of wonder, and does not afford ground for challenge." is plain a statute will not be construed to make persons over age disqualified, but only as giving a personal exemption.⁶⁵ It is not error to excuse on challenge one who is exempt because over age,⁶⁶ and some statutes make over age a ground for challenge.⁶⁷ Where the statute disqualifies jurors who are over a certain age, but makes it a ground of challenge if they are beyond a certain and greater age, jurors between the two ages are exempt but not subject to challenge.⁶⁸ Where jurors are subject to challenge because over or under age they may be excluded on the state's challenge.⁶⁹

e. Sex.—Many of the statutes specifically provide that a juror must be a male,⁷⁰ and that is, of course, the practical effect of those statutes which require jurors to be electors and confine the franchise to males.⁷¹ It has also been held that the mere granting to women of the elective franchise does not render them eligible as jurors.⁷²

specifically lay against those accused of crime.¹¹ Aside from the rule that lack of qualifications is a ground for challenge,¹² the statutes of many states specifically make conviction of a felony a ground for challenge,¹³ it being "general cause" for challenge by the statutes of some states,¹⁴ and a "principal cause" by others.¹⁵ Indictment within a specified time or for a similar offense is sometimes made ground for challenge,¹⁶ as is the carrying on of an unlawful business similar to that charged against the defendant.¹⁷ But where the constitution only excludes persons convicted of infamous crime, it is not ground for challenge that the juror has been engaged in an unlawful pursuit, not amounting to an infamous crime.¹⁸ Though one tried and acquitted of carrying on an illegal business and who has not carried it on since, is not technically disqualified, it is not error to exclude him.¹⁹ Nor is it reversible error to sustain the state's challenge to a juror against whom a criminal case is then pending in the same court.²⁰ Assuming that a crime for which a juror had been sentenced to the reform school is within the statute the challenge is propter defectum.²¹

Where the statute does not expressly provide that persons who have been convicted in another state are disqualified, conviction in one state does not affect the juror's competency in another.²² The

to vote,"⁶⁰ or one "having the qualifications of" a voter or elector.⁶¹ Where such statutes prevail, persons not electors may be challenged.⁶² Under the statute one must be entitled to vote on the day of the trial.⁶³

Registration has been held not necessary, provided the juror has the constitutional right to vote,⁶⁴ and by some statutes it is expressly provided that "qualified electors" may be jurors whether they are registered or not.⁶⁵ But the constitution of some states makes registration one of the requisite qualifications of voters.⁶⁶ Where failure to register within a given time destroys the right to vote, an otherwise qualified voter is not disqualified as a juror until the time within which he may register has elapsed.⁶⁷ In some jurisdictions electors must have paid certain taxes to entitle them to vote and to become jurymen.⁶⁸

Knott*, 3 Utah 451, 24 Pac. 757, it was held that a territorial statute requiring jurors to be taxpayers was contrary to the federal constitution, the provisions of which refer to common-law juries, and the qualification of being a taxpayer being unknown at common law.

b. Freeholder or Householder.⁸⁹ -- At common law a juror was required to be a freeholder.⁹⁰ The statutes sometimes provide in terms that the jurors must be "freeholders or householders,"⁹¹ or "housekeepers."⁹² Generally there is no distinction in this respect between jurors summoned on the original venire facias or those summoned on a subsequent order.⁹³ Under the old English law the freehold must be within the county,⁹⁴ but under most statutes the freehold or occupancy qualification is not confined to the county,⁹⁵ so long as it is within the state,⁹⁶ though under some statutes the rule is otherwise.⁹⁷ Where the statute reads "householder or freeholder" a freeholder is qualified whether he be a householder or not,⁹⁸ but where the statute prescribes "householders" without mention of "freeholders," a freeholder to be qualified must also be a householder.⁹⁹ As applied to jurors a "householder" means the master of a house or family.¹ It a specified length of time during a specified time,⁶⁰ or during a specified term of the court.⁶¹ Some statutes specifically forbid the service of talesmen more than once in the same term,⁶² or during the same or the next term,⁶³ and others provide that he must not have served in the trial of more than a specified number of cases at that or the last preceding term nor have been on the regular panel for the last two preceding terms.⁶⁴

Under a statute forbidding the summoning of any juror who had been summoned and attended at any term within a stated time, talesmen must have been summoned at a previous term and not merely at another trial at the same term,⁶⁵ and under a statute forbidding service again within a specified time, jurors are not disqualified from sitting on more than one jury in the term for which they are drawn or summoned.⁶⁶ In the absence of a statute too frequent service is not ground for challenge.⁶⁷

Some statutes disqualify the persons who come within their provisions,⁶⁸ and they are then subject to challenge for lack of qualifications under the general rule,⁶⁹ but other statutes make it a specific ground for challenge for cause,⁷⁰ sometimes further characterizing it

[b] Missouri Statutes Construed. By Rev. St., 1909, §§ 7268, 7296, 7302, 7312, 7327, jurors are not to be summoned, or "not permitted to serve" in certain counties after specified jury service, while by §§ 7297, 7313, and 7328, it is ground for challenge in certain counties. The effect of these statutes is that in some counties it is ground for challenge and in others it as a ground of principal challenge,⁷¹ or of challenge for implied bias.⁷²

Where the statute forbids the service within a specified time "next preceding the trial" it applies to service within that time regardless of the terms of court,⁷³ but where the service is "at any prior term within one year next preceding," the service at such prior term is controlling though more than a year has elapsed since the service.⁷⁴ Except in so far as the statutes may exclude certain jurors,⁷⁵ the statutes apply to all juries whether common or special,⁷⁶ but some provisions of the statutes are limited to civil juries.⁷⁷

That a juror had been summoned previously in an illegal manner would not bring him within the statute,⁷⁸ but a juror having actually served, he is within the statute, though the case was dismissed without verdict.⁷⁹ Statutes providing for a certain length of service have been construed to mean actual jury service and not mere attendance on call.⁸⁰ Objection having been properly made it is reversible error to refuse to exclude the juror,⁸¹ unless the record fails to show that the juror was improperly selected.⁸²

13. Bias, Partiality or Prejudice.⁸³ — a. In General. — Technically the cases recognize a distinction between "bias" and "prejudice,"⁸⁴ but the word "impartial" as used in the cases and statutes clearly includes both.⁸⁵ In civil suits the parties litigant have the absolute right to an impartial and disinterested jury,⁸⁶ and it is unquestionably

84. Jacobs v. State, 1 Ga. App. 519, 57 S. E. 1063, "bias" means "leaning" and "prejudice" means "prejudgment."

[a] "Bias" and "Prejudice" Distinguished.—Says Russell, C. J., in Temples v. Central of Georgia Ry. Co., 15 Ga. App. 115, 82 S. E. 777: "The words 'prejudice' and 'bias' as used in regard to the qualification of a juror, do not bear their ordinary and popular significance. 'Bias,' in its legal acceptance, means only a leaning toward one of the parties rather than the other; and 'prejudice' imports the formation of a fixed anticipatory judgment as contradistinguished from those opinions which may yield to evidence." See also Willis v. State, 12 Ga. 444.

[b] Definition of Prejudice.—"Prejudice" means "prejudgment," "judgment beforehand." It follows that expressions of opinion by a juror after verdict are no evidence of his having been prejudiced before the trial. State v. Anderson, 14 Mont. 541, 57 Pac. 1.

[c] Prejudice Is Personal.—Constructing the provisions of the statute on challenges together, the word "prejudice" refers only to the person of the accused, and means hatred, ill-will, dislike, antipathy, etc. Randle v. State, 34 Tex. Crim. 43, 28 S. W. 953.

[d] "Bias" is defined (1) to be "a leaning of the mind; propensity or prepossession toward an object or view, not leaving the mind indifferent; bent; inclination." Gulf, C. & S. F. Ry. Co. v. Gilvin (Tex. Civ. App.), 55 S. W. 985; Pierson v. State, 18 Tex. App. 524. (2) "It has no definition in our codes; therefore the above, being the common acceptance and usual meaning of the word, is applicable to the statute."

Withers v. State, 30 Tex. App. 383, 17 S. W. 936, citing Webster's Dictionary.

[e] "Bias is that which sways the mind toward one opinion rather than another. Therefore a juror is biased when from any cause or influence he is inclined toward one party to the action rather than the other; or when, in a criminal case, he is inclined to convict rather than to acquit, or vice versa." Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1, 23, 7 N. W. 444. "Bias" as used in the code means "being under an influence which so sways his mind to one side as to prevent his deciding the cause according to the evidence." It is "a leaning of the mind; propensity towards an object; not leaving the mind indifferent; inclination; prepossession; bent." Haugen v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 3 S. D. 394, 53 N. W. 769.

85. Meaning of "Impartial."—According to the standard lexicographers a man who is "impartial" is one "who is not biased in favor of one party more than another," who is "indifferent; unprejudiced; disinterested." The primary idea is freedom from personal bias, indifference between the parties as persons; not prejudiced against one or the other; disinterested as between them. But in the constitution the word is not used exclusively in its primary sense, but in its secondary or more general sense—as freedom from any bias, or unindifference, or disinterestedness. Eason v. State, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 466.

[a] "Impartial means 'not partial'; not favoring one party more than another; unprejudiced; disinterested; equitable; just." . . . "As thus defined 'impartial' evidently means not favoring a party or an individual because of the emotions of the human mind, heart, or affections. It means that, to be impartial, the party, his cause, or the issues involved in his cause, should not, must not be prejudiced." Randle v. State, 34 Tex. Crim. 43, 28 S. W. 953.

86. Ala.—Citizens' Light, etc. Co. v. Lee, 182 Ala. 561, 62 So. 199. III.

the right of a person on trial for an alleged crime to have the issue determined by a disinterested jury, standing impartially between him and his accusers,⁸⁷ and the state as well as the prisoner is entitled to an impartial jury.⁸⁸ The mere difficulty of obtaining an impartial jury does not excuse failure to give one.⁸⁹

It was a cardinal rule of the common law that juries, to be impartial, should stand indifferent between the parties.⁹⁰ Under the constitution requisite degree of fairness and impartiality to qualify the jurors.⁹⁶

Where there is partiality inferable from the relations of kindred or business, or where there is personal prejudice or ill-will, or an existing controversy, the question of indifference is easily determined.⁹⁷ The broad general principle is that each juror shall be so free from either prejudice or bias as to guarantee the inviolability of an impartial trial,⁹⁸ and the better rule is to exclude any juror whose business or social relations, past or present, with either party are such that he could be suspected of possible bias.⁹⁹ The rule is that prejudice exists sufficient to disqualify the juror if it will take evidence to remove that prejudice.¹ No evidence or proof can be considered as to the weight or extent of the juror's prejudice,² and if the impartiality or bias be present the cause thereof is wholly immaterial.³ Where the juror entertains such views about the case or the parties as will pre-

[a] "Bias or prejudice is such an elusive condition of the mind, that it is most difficult, if not impossible, to always recognize its existence." Crawford v. United States, 212 U. S. 183, 29 Sup. Ct. 260, 53 L. ed. 465, reversing 30 App. Cas. (D. C.) 1.

[b] "We have not found the decisions plentiful on the precise question of what bias against a party to a suit will disqualify a venireman." Billmeyer v. St. Louis Transit Co., 108 Mo. App. 6, 82 S. W. 536.

97. State v. Wilson, 38 Conn. 126.

[a] "Actual" and "Implied Bias" Distinguished.—Block v. State, 100 Ind. 357, makes this distinction: "Actual, where a real bias for or against one of the parties exists. Implied, where the relations which the juror sustains to one of the parties are such as to raise a presumption of bias in his favor." Hence the "bias" declared by one code to be a ground for challenge, has reference, primarily, to actual bias, and implied bias "has not, therefore, been made a principal cause for challenge by our statute, but continues to belong to that class of objections to a juror which, at common law, could only be made available by a challenge to the favor."

[b] Implied Bias Based on Relationship.—Since one who is related to one of the parties might be positive he has no bias, the law "most wisely says that with regard to some of the relations which may exist between the juror and one of the parties, bias is implied, and evidence of its actual

vent him from looking solely to the evidence, he should be excluded,⁴ or if he cannot try the case solely on the law and evidence.⁵

A juror who admits that his verdict would depend on a particular fact, if proved, without reference to the other evidence in the case is clearly incompetent.⁶ That a juror expresses sympathies "which lie in every human heart" does not render him incompetent.⁷ A juror who has a preconceived idea of the rights of one party, should be excluded,⁸ but a mere preconceived idea of the law does not render him incompetent where he shows no bias or prejudice in the particular case and will take the law from the court and apply it to the facts.⁹ Bias or prejudice does not relate solely to the persons who are parties to the action but to the case as well.¹⁰ It is immaterial whether the juror is affected by a direct personal interest in the case, or an indirect interest in the result as affecting some one else.¹¹ Jurors should be

any fair-minded citizen would have for anyone in plaintiff's unfortunate condition" does not render a juror incompetent, and the trial court's discretion in overruling defendant's challenge will not be interfered with where his entire examination shows him to have been fair and frank and willing to decide solely on the evidence and instructions. *Bemis v. indifferent not only upon the particular issue to be tried, but should be impartial as between the parties,¹² but the rule as to indifference does not require merely that the juror shall be free from personal partiality, or personal malevolence.¹³ If juror has received favors from one party or the other, he is clearly incompetent.¹⁴

Though the very purpose of allowing challenges is to obtain impartiality,¹⁵ no legislative act is necessary to make partiality a ground of challenge.¹⁶ However, the statutes frequently provide in terms that it shall be a ground for challenge for cause,¹⁷ it being in its nature a challenge to the favor.¹⁸ Also in many states it is made the duty of the court to examine the juror on motion of either party with particular reference to his bias or prejudice,¹⁹ and some statutes disqualify jurors who have a bias or prejudice in favor of or against either of the parties,²⁰ which subjects them to challenge, under the general rule, for lack of qualifications.²¹

Bias in favor of either party is as much a cause of challenge as prejudice against either,²² but by the statutes it is sometimes provided that bias against one party is no ground of challenge by the other.²³ Whether a juror is, or is not, impartial, is to be determined by the court, and is not settled by the juror's oath or statement that he will be impartial,²⁴ nor by his statement that he thinks himself partial.²⁵

other faith,³⁴ or whether, in the juror's opinion, members of a certain faith are not to be believed on oath.³⁵ Prejudice against unlawful economic or political doctrines does not disqualify a juror from trying one accused of a crime growing out of the advocacy of such doctrines.³⁶ But a prejudice against a society and against defendants as members thereof is disqualifying where the society was organized for a lawful purpose and was not shown to have been connected with the crime charged.³⁷ Prejudice in favor of or against labor unions may be inquired into where it might influence the juror's verdict.³⁸

(IV.) Race Prejudice.³⁹ — If a white man will not give a negro as fair and impartial a trial as he would a white man he is clearly incompetent,⁴⁰ and jurors may be asked whether they would give a negro

[a] One may be prejudiced against communism or anarchism and yet be able to try fairly a murder claimed to have been committed by anarchists. Spies v. People, 122 Ill. 1, 12 N. E. 865, 17 N. E. 898, 3 Am. St. Rep. 320.

[b] Belief in "Direct Action."—It is proper for the state to ask the juror whether he believes in the doctrine of a certain organization which advocates "direct action," that is, physical force in redressing wrongs. People v. Warr, 22 Cal. App. 663, 136 Pac. 304.

[a] Where the action was for conspiracy (1) in which a labor union was involved it was not proper to exclude questions as to the juror's bias against such unions. Gatzow v. Buening, 106 Wis. 1, 81 N. W. 1003, 80 Am. St. Rep. 17, 49 L. R. A. 475, this goes to his competency and is also proper to determine peremptory. (2) But challenge for actual bias was properly disallowed where it was not claimed that defendant belonged to a labor union, though the juror stated he had no prejudice against organized labor, though his men had joined in a strike, but that he would believe more readily that men belonging to a labor organization would enter into a conspiracy than ordinary individuals, and that he believed there must be "more organization there." People v. Duncan, 8 Cal. App. 186, 96 Pac. 414.

[b] Case Involving Misuse of Union Label.—Mere prejudice in favor of labor unions does not disqualify one from sitting on the trial of a prosecution for the unlawful use of a trade mark which was a union label. State v. Montgomery, 57 Wash. 192, 106 Pac. 771, juror was not a member of any union, nor had he any prejudice against defendant or opinion as to his guilt.

39. Unwillingness to as readily believe witnesses of one race as those of another, see supra, VII, F, 13, b, (III).

Race or color as disqualifying, see supra, VII, F, 5, f.

[a] Questions Proper To Bring Out Racial Prejudice.—(1) "Could you give the defendant, who is a negro, as fair and impartial a trial as you could a white man, and give him the same advantage and protection as you would a white man upon the same evidence?" It was held reversible error to refuse to permit this question in a capital case. Pinder v. State, 27 Fla. 370, 8 So. 837, 26 Am. St. Rep. 75. (2) It is proper to ask a juror "if he could and would give to the defendant the same fair and impartial trial under the law and the evidence that he would give to a white man under the same circum-

the same verdict that they would a white person under similar circumstances.⁴¹ The mere fact that juror may think his race superior to all others would not render him incompetent,⁴² but to be disqualifying the prejudice must extend to the party because of his race,⁴³ and questions along this line have been refused where the juror had already answered the statutory questions in a manner showing no prejudice.⁴⁴ stances, and would try the case without regard to the question of color." Cavitt v. State, 15 Tex. App. 190.

[b] It was reversible error to refuse to permit a colored prisoner to ask a juror if "he believed he could, as a juror, do equal and impartial justice between the state and a colored man." It is clear that if the juror had answered that he could not do so he would have been grossly unfit to serve. State v. McAfee, 64 N. C. 339.

[c] Question Improper.—"Have you the same neighborly regard for this defendant, though a negro, and his race generally, as you have for individuals of the white race?" This is not directed to the issue as to whether or not he would try the case fairly and impartially. Cavitt v. State, 15 Tex. App. 190.

[d] It was not ground for reversal, though jurors were taken, over defendant's challenge, who said they could not give a black man as fair a trial as a white man in a case between a black and a white, where the defendant, a colored man, was accused of the murder of a colored boy, and the jurors had also said that in a case where all the parties interested were black, they would give a black man the same impartial trial as a white man, and that they had no prejudice against defendant in the particular case about to be tried. State v. Mayfield, 104 La. 173, 28 So. 997.

[e] The juror having already answered that he was not conscious of any bias or prejudice for or against the prisoner it was not reversible error to refuse to permit the question whether he would be influenced by the fact that the prisoner was a negro. If allowed to answer his answer must have been in the negative. State v. Bethune, 93 S. C. 195, 75 S. E. 281.

41. Fendrick v. State, 39 Tex. Crim. 147, 45 S. W. 589; Lester v. State, 2 Tex. App. 432. See also Hawkins v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 182 Mo. App. 323, 170 S. W. 459.

[a] The defendant should be allowed to ask whether under the same facts and circumstances the juror would render the same verdict where a negro killed a white man for insulting his wife as he would where a white man killed a negro for a similar insult to the white man's wife. It being a legitimate defense under the statute that defendant was excited by passion over deceased's having insulted his wife. Fendrick v. State, 39 Tex. Crim. 147, 45 S. W. 589.

42. State v. Casey, 44 La. Ann. 969, 11 So. 583.

[a] Where the record discloses that a juror is a fair and conscientious man, the mere fact that he said on his voir dire that he had a prejudice against the colored race, it appearing on further examination that he had no prejudice against the defendant, a negro, and that he simply meant that he had a feeling or belief that the colored race was inferior to the white race. Johnson v. State, 88 Neb. 565, 130 N. W. 282, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 965.

43. State v. Casey, 44 La. Ann. 969, 11 So. 583; Balbo v. People, 80 N. Y. 484.

[a] No ground for disqualification is shown though the juror admitted that he would not have a negro work for him but stated that was because his neighbors objected to negroes being in the neighborhood and that he himself had no prejudice against the negro on trial, and could and would give him the same fair trial as if he were a white man. Hubbard v. State, 43 Tex. Crim. 564, 67 S. W. 413.

[b] Mere previous statements indicating bias against the colored race, will not disqualify where the juror states he has no feeling against defendant because of his race or color and that he can give him the same fair, impartial treatment as he would a white man. State v. Buford, 158 Iowa 173, 139 N. W. 464.

44. Sullivan v. Padross, 122 Ga. 338, 50 S. E. 142.

c. Prejudice Against Particular Business.— Mere prejudice against a particular business is not disqualifying where the juror can lay aside his prejudice and try the case impartially on the evidence,⁴⁵ nor is mere prejudice against the way a business is sometimes conducted.⁴⁶ Where the business is not illegal and the prejudice is so deep seated that evidence would be required to remove it, the juror is incompetent.⁴⁷ Though one may be opposed to the policy of permitting the sale of intoxicants, he is not necessarily disqualified, either in prosecutions for the unlawful sale,⁴⁸ or in civil damage suits;⁴⁹ nor is he disqualified by the fact that he may have some prejudices against persons engaged in the traffic,⁵⁰ provided that prejudice be not directed toward the particular defendant.⁵¹ Jurors are held qualified to try offenders against the prohibition laws, though they

[a] In a suit for the violation of a liquor dealer's bond, neither bias in favor of, nor prejudice against the traffic affects the juror's competency. Grady v. Rogan, 2 Wills. Civ. Cas. (Tex.), §§259, 263.

46. Press Pub. Co. v. McDonald, 73 Fed. 440, 19 C. C. A. 516, assuming that a prejudice against a party's business might make him incompetent.

[a] If a business be illegal a prejudice against it amounts only to a prejudice against crime and so is not disqualifying under the general rule that juror may be competent though he is prejudiced against crime. United States v. Borger, 7 Fed. 193, 19 Blatchf. 249.

As to prejudice against crime or unlawful acts, see infra, VII, F, 13, d.

47. Winneshiek Ins. Co. v. Schueller, 60 Ill. 465, a deep seated prejudice against insurance companies and the insurance business, where it "would have required as much evidence to remove his unfounded prejudice as to convince him of the justice of the defense," clearly made the juror incompetent to try a case arising out of an insurance policy.

48. Territory v. Pratt, 6 Dak. 483, 43 N. W. 711; Stoots v. State, 108 Ind. 415, 9 N. E. 380. See also Remer v. State, 3 Okla. Crim. 706, 109 Pac. 247.

[a] Reason for Rule.—In a county where the local option law absolutely forbids the sale of liquor it would be practically impossible to get a jury which did not have a prejudice against persons engaged in the traffic; since the majority of people are law-abiding, and have a natural prejudice against acts of lawlessness which prejudice would extend to any person engaged in the business which was unlawful. Territory v. Pratt, 6 Dak. 483, 43 N. W. 711. As to prejudice against crime, see infra, VII, F, 13, d.

50. Stoots v. State, 108 Ind. 415, 9 N. E. 380.

[a] Prejudice Against Unlawful Clubs.—Jurors having stated that they had no bias against defendant and had not formed any conclusion or expressed any opinion in the case at bar, it was not material whether they had any prejudice against unlawful beer clubs run in a local option precinct. Arnold v. State, 38 Tex. Crim. 5, 40 S. W. 735.

[b] A mere general prejudice against saloon keepers as a class, not coupled with any bias or prejudice against defendant is clearly not disqualifying in a murder case, though defendant is a saloonkeeper. People v. Thiede, 11 Utah 241, 39 Pac. 837, affirmed in 159 U. S. 510, 16 Sup. Ct. 62, 40 L. ed. 237.

[a] Jurors who say they can fairly and impartially try may be permitted to sit notwithstanding prejudices which the court believed from their statements, appearance, and manner, they could lay aside. Territory v. Pratt, 6 Dak. 483, 43 N. W. 711.

are prohibitionists,⁵² and a juror is not disqualified though he contributed to a fund to help carry on an election contest over the prohibition law.⁵³ Even though the general prejudice against the business amounts to a belief that moral men would not engage therein, the juror is competent where the prosecution is for illegal sale,⁵⁴ but the dealer being licensed, and indicted for keeping his saloon in a disorderly manner, the juror was incompetent.⁵⁵ Where the question before the jury is whether an applicant for a liquor license is a man of moral character, a juror's fixed opinion that any man who sells liquor is immoral necessarily makes him incompetent,⁵⁶ or where his opposition to the traffic is so strong that he would not grant a license under any circumstances,⁵⁷ but his disbelief in the policy of a license law does not necessarily disqualify him.⁵⁸ Jurors are incompetent who disclose that their prejudice is so fixed that they would not give as much credit to the testimony of witnesses engaged in the traffic as to those not so engaged.⁵⁹ But where, despite their belief, they will accept the testimony of persons so engaged on the same

[a] Prohibitionists.—In State v. Tomlinson, 7 N. D. 294, 74 N. W. 995, jurors were held qualified to try offenders under the prohibition law who said they had no prejudice whatever against defendant, but were prohibitionists, had a very strong prejudice against the unlawful traffic, and would gladly render a verdict against anyone shown by the evidence to be guilty of violating the liquor laws.

[b] A juror is not disqualified who states that he voted for the local option law, that he is in favor of the law and its enforcement, that he is opposed to the saloon business or has conscientious scruples against it, and that he believes in prohibition. The question being tried is not the policy of the law but whether or not defendant has been guilty of its violation. People v. Keefer, 97 Mich. 15, 56 N. W. 105.

53. Taul v. State (Tex. Crim.), 61 S. W. 394, juror had made no contribution to aid prosecution of case at bar.

54. Territory v. Pratt, 6 Dak. 483, 43 N. W. 711 (jurors believed traffic immoral whether licensed or not but had no personal prejudice); Shields v. State, 95 Ind. 299; Elliott v. State, 73 Ind. 10, no personal prejudice shown.

[a] In prosecution for sale of liquor to a minor, questions as to the juror's belief as to the morality of persons engaged in the licensed selling of liquor is not pertinent to any issue in the case. Pemberton v. State, 11 Ind. App. 297, 38 N. E. 1096.

55. Swigart v. State, 67 Ind. 287, juror who declared he thought a man engaged in selling liquor was an immoral man was held incompetent though he said he could give a fair and impartial trial according to the law and evidence.

59. Stoots v. State, 108 Ind. 415, 9 N. E. 380.

[a] Civil Damage Case; Two Classes Distinguished.—Of two jurors called in an action for damages for selling liquor to a drunkard, one who confessed to prejudice against men who were engaged in selling liquors but would "be governed by the evidence and the law," was properly permitted to serve, but another who said he had a great prejudice against the traffic, and could not give testimony of a person engaged in the same business the same weight as he could a man engaged in another business should have been excused on challenge for bias. Robinson v. Randall, 82 Ill. 521. To same effect see Kroer v. People, 78 Ill. 294; Meaux v. Whitehall, 8 Ill. App. 173.

[b] Contrary Intimation.—It has been suggested that bias or prejudice basis as the testimony of others, they are competent.⁶⁰ It is proper to inquire whether the jurors have any prejudice against defendant because of his being engaged in the business,⁶¹ and to aid in exercise of the right to challenge peremptorily, a juror's prejudice for or against the liquor business and persons engaged in it may be inquired into under proper circumstances.⁶² So, where the prosecution is for violation of a prohibition law, a juror may be asked whether he believes that it is a good law,⁶³ except where that is not one of the statutory questions,⁶⁴ and the same is true in other prosecutions where the offense grew out of an attempt to enforce the prohibition law.⁶⁵ against witnesses who are liquor sellers would not prevent juror from standing indifferent in a prosecution for unlawful sale. But the case was decided on other grounds. Com. v. Poisson, 157 Mass. 510, 32 N. E. 906. See also Com. v. Burroughs, 145 Mass. 242, 13 N. E. 884; Com. v. Thrasher, 11 Gray (Mass.) 57.

60. Smith v. State, 24 Ind. App. 688, 57 N. E. 572.

[a] The juror's belief as to the morality of selling liquor under a license would not affect his competency where he said he would accept the testimony of persons so engaged on the same basis as testimony of others. Pember-ton v. State, 11 Ind. App. 297, 38 N. E. 1096; Dolan v. State, 122 Ind. 141, 23 N. E. 761.

61. Carpenter v. Hyman, 67 W. Va. 4, 66 S. E. 1078, civil damage case.

[a] General Question May Be Sufficient.—It appearing that the general nature of the proceeding had been explained to the jurymen, who must have understood therefrom that the defendant was being sued for damages for selling liquor, the general question whether any juror knew of any reason why he was not impartial, sufficiently included the matter sought to be inquired of, and it was not an abuse of the court's discretion "to refuse to permit a more direct and searching question, though it would have been better practice to have done so." Carpenter v. Hyman, 67 W. Va. 4, 66 S. E. 1078.

62. See cases infra, this note.

Right to examine as basis for peremptory challenge, see supra, VII, E, 5, m, (f).

[a] Where violation of the liquor laws is charged (1) a juror may be questioned as to his view of the immorality of the traffic, for the purpose of determining peremptories. State v. Munch, 57 Mo. App. 207. (2) For the same purpose jurors may be asked whether they have any prejudice against persons who from their occupation or surroundings might be suspected of being in a position to enable them to violate the law. Patrick v. State, 45 Tex. Crim. 587, 73 S. W. 947.

63. Question as to Belief Not Argumentative.—After stating to the jurors on their examination that the law made it a felony to engage in or pursue the occupation of selling intoxicants in local option counties the district attorney asked them if they believed that was a good and wholesome law which should be enforced like other laws. This was not open to the objection that it was "argumentative, tending to prejudice the facts in the case, and get the facts in advance." Wilson v. State, 69 Tex. Crim. 567, 154 S. W. 571.

[a] Jurors may be asked their opinion as to the constitutionality of liquor laws, and whether they could convict or acquit a person indicted under such laws, notwithstanding their views differed from the instructions of the court on the constitutionality of the law. Pierce v. State, 13 N. H. 536.

65. Territory v. Lynch, 18 N. M. 15, 133 Pac. 405, it was reversible error to refuse to permit any inquiry. "The least that can be said in favor of permitting the inquiry is that it was necessary in order that the defendant might intelligently exercise his right to peremptory challenge."

d. *Prejudice Against Crime or Criminal Acts.*⁶⁶—A mere bias or prejudice against crime, is not disqualifying,⁶⁷ nor against a criminal or unlawful act,⁶⁸ nor against immorality,⁶⁹ nor against a mean or dishonest action,⁷⁰ nor even against the particular crime which the prisoner is accused of committing, provided that prejudice does not amount to a bias against the particular defendant.⁷¹ If, however, the of the local option law and defendant claiming that certain witnesses for the state were adverse to him because of some previous local option cases. Not permissible even for determining peremptories. Yardley v. State, 50 Tex. Crim. 644, 100 S. W. 399, 123 Am. St. Rep. 869.

[b] In a prosecution for bribing an officer not to enforce the prohibition laws court may refuse question as to whether juror's belief in that law would require a different degree of faithfulness to duty than under any other law. State v. Smith, 72 Vt. 366, 48 Atl. 647.

[b] Prejudice Against Charivari Parties.—Applying the rule that it is not proper to ask a juror whether he has any prejudice or bias against crime or against the particular crime charged, it was improper in an action for shooting a member of a charivari party, to ask a prospective juror whether he had any prejudice against such parties. prejudice be personal, having the defendant for its object, the juror is incompetent as a matter of law,⁷² and it has also been recognized that a juror's prejudice against particular criminal actions might be so strong as to disqualify him.⁷³ It is proper to ask a juror whether he thinks that a certain act is not a crime.⁷⁴ Also for the purpose of determining peremptories one may be asked whether he would be prejudiced against defendant merely because he was accused of crime,⁷⁵ and, at least for the same purpose, it may be proper to ask a juror as to his being prejudiced by the doing of a particularly reckless, if not criminal, act.⁷⁶

e. Prejudice Against Particular Actions.—Prejudice against a particular kind of action may be so strong as to disqualify one for jury service in such an action.⁷⁷ Such prejudice does not disqualify one as a matter of law,⁷⁸ but it must extend to the particular parties

[d] General Prejudice Because of Accusation.—The mere fact that the juror said in effect that a charge of having committed a heinous crime would, to a certain extent, create in the juror's mind a prejudice against one so accused, does not render him incompetent where he had no disqualifying opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the particular defendant. *Bridges v. [a] As to Effect of Rigging a Spring Gun.—It was error to overrule questions as to the effect upon the juror's mind of the fact, if it should be shown, that defendant had put a spring gun, or gun so rigged as to be discharged, by any one who should open his trunk. The defendant was entitled to find out if such an act by him would, of itself, prejudice the juror against him. This both for the purpose of interposing a challenge for cause, or to exercise his right of peremptory challenge, though the affirmative answer might not of itself show that the juror was so biased as to be disqualified. *State v. or the particular case at bar.⁷⁹ So if the juror says he can lay aside his prejudice and try the case on its merits on the evidence adduced he may be retained on the jury,⁸⁰ but if the juror admits, or his answers show, that he cannot lay aside the prejudice, he should be excluded.⁸¹ Disqualifying prejudice appears where the juror admits evidence would be required to remove his prejudice,⁸² or where he will not say that he would be willing, if plaintiff, to have his own case tried by a juror in his then frame of mind.⁸³

f. Prejudice Against Particular Defenses.—Neither prejudice against, nor bias in favor, of any particular defense raised in a criminal action, is, of itself, disqualifying.⁸⁴ At the same time prejudice against a particular defense may be strong enough to disqualify.⁸⁵ The true test is whether the juror can give the accused the benefit of all reasonable doubt as to guilt, whether raised by the particular defense or not.⁸⁶ It is proper to ask as to the juror's prejudice against a particular defense, for the purpose of determining peremptories.⁸⁷

Where the plea is insanity a mere prejudice against sham, bogus, or simulated defense of insanity, is not disqualifying,⁸⁸ if it does not

[a] A juror is competent who states he can give the defendant a fair and impartial trial, and that if the plea of insanity was established to his reasonable satisfaction he would find defendant not guilty; notwithstanding he says he is "prejudiced against the bogus plea of insanity and had mighty little use for it." State v. Welsor, 117 Mo. 570, 21 S. W. 443.

[b] Jurors who say they will treat it like any other defense the defendant might urge and would follow the court's instructions though different from their own ideas on the subject, are competent. State v. Howard, 30 Mont. 518, 77 Pac. 50. See also Cannon v. State, 41 Tex. Crim. 467, 56 S. W. 351.

[c] Juror Confused as to Distinction Between Intoxication and Insanity. A juror who at first said he had a prejudice against the defense of insanity where caused by excessive use of intoxicants was properly held competent when further examination by the court showed that he had confused the difference between rules governing insanity and intoxication as defenses, and he said he would give defendant the benefit of the defense of insanity under the law. State v. Croney, 31 Wash. 122, 71 Pac. 783.

90. People v. Sowell, 145 Cal. 292, 78 Pac. 717; State v. Welsor, 117 Mo. 570, 21 S. W. 443.

[a] Juror is competent who says that if it is shown that the defendant at the time of commission of the offense was legally insane under the evidence adduced and the instructions of the court, he would give proper credit to such defense. State v. Casey, 34 Nev. 154, 117 Pac. 5.

[b] Notwithstanding he first said "beyond reasonable doubt" (1) juror is competent where on further examination in which the whole matter is explained, he says he would follow the court's instructions and give defendant the benefit of the defense if proved by a preponderance of the evidence. Maxey v. State, 66 Tex. Crim. 234, 145 S. W. 952. (2) But where after an elaborate examination on the effect of proof of insanity the juror had said in effect that if he was convinced by a preponderance of the evidence the prisoner was insane at the time of committing the crime, he would acquit if the court so charged, but in answer to the direct questions said the evidence would have to be "overwhelming," he was not competent. Jones v. State, 60 Tex. Crim. 139, 131 S. W. 572.

91. State v. Duestrow, 137 Mo. 44, 38 S. W. 554, 39 S. W. 266.

[a] Though a juror may in some of his answers state that he "does not believe in hereditary insanity," he is competent when from his whole examination it appears that all he meant was that the plea of hereditary insanity would have to be proven before he would believe it. State v. Royse, 24 Wash. 440, 64 Pac. 742.

[b] Where the rule is that insanity must be shown by preponderance of evidence, jurors are competent who say they will acquit if they believe the prisoner insane, and it was proper to refuse to permit the question whether they would acquit if they had "reasonable doubt" as to prisoner's insanity. Jones v. State, 60 Tex. Crim. 139, 131 S. W. 572.

92. People v. Collins, 105 Cal. 504, 39 Pac. 16; Franks v. State, 47 Tex. Crim. 638, 88 S. W. 923, no plea of insanity was made.

disqualified by expression of his personal views as to the defense of insanity arising from other sources.⁹³ Prejudice against insanity as a defense can only be considered on a challenge for "actual bias."⁹⁴

g. *Prejudice Against Certain Witnesses.*⁹⁵—A juror to be impartial, is not obliged to say that he will give equal credence to every witness who testifies,⁹⁶ especially where the witness in question is one who under the law is not entitled to the same credit as witnesses generally.⁹⁷ Mere prejudice against an important witness of the challenging party is not ground for objection,⁹⁸ and a juror may be qualified though he is friendly toward one of the state's principal witnesses.⁹⁹ So a juryman may be competent who says he would believe a white man sooner than he would a Chinaman.¹ And a mere inclination to discredit negro witnesses generally, is not necessarily disqualifying.²

93. Gammons v. State, 85 Miss. 103, 37 So. 609, juror said he was not prejudiced against insanity arising from the sources relied upon.

94. State v. Hanley, 34 Minn. 430, 26 N. W. 397, it is not one of the grounds enumerated as the basis of a challenge for "implied" bias.

[a] But compare State v. Arnold, 12 Iowa 479, which holds that though inquiry as to the juror's attitude toward particular defenses, as insanity, is proper under some circumstances, it is not proper to ask him whether he has formed or expressed an opinion on the subject, for the purpose of challenging for actual bias in having formed or expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of prisoner. State v. Arnold 12 Iowa 479.

[b] In a civil case it is not proper to ask jurors merely as to their opinion on the subject of insanity. That being an issue, they may be asked whether they have expressed such an opinion on that issue as would influence their judgment. McComas v. Covenant Mutual Ins. Co., 56 Mo. 573.

96. Queen v. Leong Man, 8 Hawaii 339.

[a] To ask of a juror whether he would attach to the word of a preacher, outside of court, more importance or credibility than to the word of any other gentleman, or whether he would place more credence to the testimony of a certain named minister than to any one else, is improper and irrelevant, and properly disallowed. State v. Holedger, 15 Wash. 443, 46 Pac. 652.

2. Moore v. State, 52 Tex. Crim. 336, 107 S. W. 540, but one white witness was called and his testimony was not material.

[a] Compare Woodroe v. State, 50 Tex. Crim. 212, 96 S. W. 30. The following question was proposed, "Would you give the same credence to colored witnesses that you would to white witnesses when they testify with the same degree of intelligence and with the same degree of apparent credibility, and who have the same opportunity to know the facts?" Several answered negatively and the state's attorney's objection that the question was upon the credibility of witnesses and not subject to inquiry was sustained. The reviewing court refused to reverse in the absence of any showing that any juror who had so answered sat in the case.

But in all these cases the discrediting must not go to the extent of refusing a fair trial on account of the party's race or color,³ and there must be no ill-will or prejudice against the party based on his race or color.⁴ It has been held reversible error to refuse questions based on such prejudice against certain classes of witnesses, because they are proper for the purpose of determining peremptories.⁵

Prejudice against hired detectives as witnesses, may be inquired into⁶ at least for the purpose of laying a foundation for peremptory challenges.⁷ But the mere fact that a juror expresses a prejudice against such testimony does not subject him to challenge for cause.⁸

h. Prejudice Against Circumstantial Evidence.—Jurors who state they will not convict upon circumstantial evidence are properly excused on the commonwealth's challenge for cause.⁹ Under some stat-

[d] Such as Would Leave No Doubt. (1) One who said he would not convict upon circumstantial evidence unless it was such as would leave no doubt whatever in his mind was properly excused, his further answers showing that he did not mean reasonable doubt. People v. Fanshawe, 137 N. Y. 68, 32 N. E. 1102. (2) A juror having said

utes the state alone can challenge on this ground.¹⁰ But elsewhere a juror who will not give force and effect to circumstantial evidence to acquit may be excused on defendant's challenge.¹¹ The juror's mind may be searched to learn just what his views on the subject are.¹² The defendant is not entitled to cross-examine a juror who says he will not convict on circumstantial evidence.¹³

The right to challenge does not depend upon whether the evidence in the case will be direct or circumstantial,¹⁴ and that it subsequently he could convict on circumstantial evidence "if the evidence proved the crime beyond a doubt," it was proper to permit the solicitor to ask: "Suppose the evidence was such that while it left some doubt in your mind, still your mind was satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt, would you convict then?" Mann v. State, 134 Ala. 1, 32 So. 704.

[b] Proper to ask jurors whether they had any conscientious scruples in regard to the infliction of the death penalty for crime in cases depending wholly upon circumstantial evidence. Johnson v. State, 44 Tex. Crim. 332, 71 S. W. 25.

13. State v. Thompson, 116 La. 829, 41 So. 107.

[a] When Cross-Examination Proper.

But where the juror discloses scruples the court may elucidate by giving hypothetical examples which if the defendant think too drastic, he may further cross-examine to bring out any disqualification based on his belief. Morrison v. State, 40 Tex. Crim. 473, 51 S. W. 358.

14. Calhoun v. State, 143 Ala. 11, 39 So. 378 (to hold otherwise would be to compel the cause to be twice tried—first by the judge to ascertain qualification of the jurors and second by the jury); Coleman v. State, 59 Miss. 484, for it cannot be known in advance in any case how far it may depend on circumstantial evidence.

[a] Even Though Killing Is Admitted by Accused.—Before jurors who had been excused left the court room, counsel for prisoner announced that circumstantial evidence would cut no figure as the killing was admitted and justification pleaded. The supreme court among other reasons given for refusing to reverse suggests "there are very few cases in which all the evidence is purely positive." State v. Barker, 46 La. Ann. 798, 15 So. 98.

[b] If under the evidence a verdict of death might be required, though the evidence was only circumstantial, a juror who says he is not willing to find a verdict of guilty on circumstantial evidence, if the effect would be punishment by death is properly excluded on the prosecution's challenge. People v. Warner, 147 Cal. 546, 82 Pac. 196; People v. Ah Chung, 54 Cal. 398.

[c] Challenge by Accused.—Notwithstanding a juror said he did not believe in circumstantial evidence, and would not give force and effect to it, either to convict or acquit, the trial judge properly overruled defendant's challenge when counsel refused to inform the court what part circumstantial evidence would play in the case. State v. Anderson, 52 La. Ann. 101, 26 So. 781.

transpires that the state's case does not rest on circumstantial evidence, does not render the allowance of the challenge erroneous.¹⁵

These rules are applied most frequently in capital cases,¹⁶ being applied in cases where the jurors said that they had no conscientious scruples against the death penalty as such,¹⁷ and where their "opposition" to capital punishment extends only to convictions based on circumstantial evidence.¹⁸ In the absence of a contrary statute,¹⁹ the rule is not limited to cases involving capital or penitentiary punishment.²⁰

State*, 34 Fla. 564, 16 So. 582, which was a capital case, and where it is said to be improper to ask a venireman whether he would find defendants guilty on circumstantial evidence, and that the question was not properly framed to disqualify the juror under the section relating to scruples against capital punishment.

18. State v. Bauerle, 145 Mo. 1, 46 S. W. 609.

[a] A juror who says that he is "opposed to capital punishment as far as circumstantial evidence goes," is properly excluded on the state's challenge. Johnson v. State, 34 Neb. 257, 51 N. W. 835.

[b] Though the juror may not have a fixed opinion against either form of punishment, he is subject to challenge if he is only in favor of penitentiary punishment where the conviction is based on circumstantial evidence. Tatum v. State, 82 Ala. 5, 2 So. 531; Garrett v. State, 76 Ala. 18.

tions.²² But by statute, in some states, persons having a belief that the punishment fixed by law is too severe for the offense are not permitted to serve,²³ it being made a ground for challenge.²⁴ One who cannot on his oath conscientiously find against the accused for a statutory crime, should not be permitted to try an indictment therefor.²⁵ It has been held proper to refuse to permit defendant to ask jurors whether they had any prejudice against the suspended sentence law.²⁶ It seems that a juror who would refuse to consider the question of a recommendation in any case that life imprisonment be substituted for the death penalty, would be subject to challenge,²⁷ and it is proper to examine the jurors along that line to aid in determining as to peremptories.²⁸

(II.) Scruples Against Capital Punishment.²⁹ — (A.) IN GENERAL. On common-law principle, and in the absence of statute, jurors who swear they have conscientious scruples against capital punishment are properly excluded on challenge.³⁰ The statutes of many states provide in effect that a juror shall be neither allowed nor compelled to serve

[a] In a prosecution of a Mormon for bigamy in contracting a "plural marriage," members of the Mormon church are properly interrogated as to their belief in the practice, and are properly excluded where it appears that they believe the practice under the rites of their church to be a law of God superior to human laws. The ground of exclusion is not their religious belief but their bias and prejudice growing out of a natural disinclination to punish a fellow member for practicing that which they believe it a religious duty to perform. *United States v. 27. State v. Thorne, 41 Utah 414, 126 Pac. 286, but juror should not be excluded on ground that he is opposed in the particular case. The statute provides no test as a basis of the recommendation and the court cannot charge the jury thereon nor the counsel state a hypothetical case and ask juror how he will decide.

(B.) EXTENT OF OPPOSITION. — In the absence of statute mere opposition to capital punishment is not ground for excusing where the juror states he will not let that opinion interfere with his verdict.⁴⁰ If his conscientious scruples would cause him to hesitate to impose the penalty he might not be disqualified if he declared he could and would observe the law,⁴¹ or if his opinion only was that the law ought to be abolished.⁴² The distinction has been drawn between having "conscientious scruples" and belonging to a religious denomination opposed to capital punishment; the former disqualifying, and the latter not;⁴³ and under some statutes a distinction is made between "conscientious scruples" which a juror cannot lay aside and matters of opinion which he might.⁴⁴ The only test is that the jurors shall have no bias in favor of or prejudice against either form of punishment,⁴⁵ and that they shall stand indifferent between the parties on

44. People v. Stewart, 7 Cal. 140, the statute reading "conscientious scruples," it was error to exclude a juror who was only opposed to the punishment "from principle."

[a] Distinction Between Scruples and Matters of Opinion.—In Stephenson v. State, 110 Ind. 358, 11 N. E. 360, 59 Am. Rep. 216, in discussing whether the juror came within the letter or spirit of the statute the court calls attention to the fact that while jurymen may lay aside opinions in cases arising under the rules as to expression of opinion, or even prejudices as in the case of prejudices against particular businesses, a conscientious scruple against capital punishment might well affect jurymen who were to assess the punishment, though they believed from the evidence defendant was guilty and though they were inclined to act impartially. Nothing occurring at the trial could be expected to change a conscientious scruple. See also Driskill v. State, 7 Ind. 338; Gross v. State, 2 Ind. 329.

[b] Whether such scruples would control or bias his judgment must be left to the juror to decide. If "upon examination of his own heart" he is satisfied that he can fairly weigh the testimony and without bias render a true verdict he ought not to be excluded. Distinguishing the rule from that which obtains where the juror has expressed a disqualifying opinion which his mere statement that he is not biased is not permitted to overthrow. Williams v. State, 32 Miss. 389, 66 Am. Dec. 615. See also Com. v. Henderson, 242 Pa. 372, 89 Atl. 567 (it is discretionary with court to excuse juror who has made such statements); Com. v. Gross, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 281. But see O'Brien v. People, 36 N. Y. 276, 3 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 368; Walter v. People, 32 N. Y. 147.

[c] It is proper to ask the question, "Notwithstanding your opposition to capital punishment, do you believe if you should be sworn upon this jury you could give a verdict according to the evidence?" The juror had stated that he was "opposed to capital punishment," but he had not said that his opinions were such as to prevent him from conscientiously finding a verdict of guilty. Savage v. State, 18 Fla. 909.

this as on other questions.⁴⁶ If his scruples are such as to bias his judgment, influence his consideration of the evidence and retard his arriving at a verdict, he should be excluded;⁴⁷ as where his conscientious scruples are such that he would not inflict the death penalty even where the evidence justifies and the law authorizes it,⁴⁸ or no matter how strong the evidence,⁴⁹ or what the circumstances are.⁵⁰ The statute does not require that his conscientious scruples be so strong as to absolutely forbid him from inflicting the punishment.⁵¹ The competency of the juror depends not upon the necessity, but upon the possibility, that the death penalty may be inflicted.⁵² The statute

[a] The juror cannot be questioned as to whether he would require "mitigating circumstances" before rendering the qualified verdict. Even the court cannot prescribe rules for the jury to follow. Funk v. United States, 16 App. Cas. (D. C.) 478; Snell v. United States, 16 App. Cas. (D. C.) 501. See also Horton v. United States, 15 App. Cas. (D. C.) 310.

[b] A juror is competent who says he will not require any greater evidence to convict a man for murder in the first degree where the penalty is death, than to convict him where the penalty is life imprisonment. The whole examination showed a willingness to receive the law from the court who stated that the evidence must convince beyond a reasonable doubt in either case. State v. Boyce, 24 Wash. 514, 64 Pac. 719.

[c] Proper to ask juror whether he would as readily vote for the death sentence as for life imprisonment should he find defendant guilty from all the evidence. Coppenhaver v. State, 160 Ind. 540, 67 N. E. 453, followed in Smith v. State, 165 Ind. 180, 74 N. E. 983.

[a] Jurors must be free to impose either the death penalty, or life imprisonment, as the evidence shall in their judgment warrant. [c] A juror who says he has scruples "to a certain extent" is properly excluded. People v. Abbott, 66 Cal. xviii, 4 Pac. 769.

[d] Juror in Doubt as to Convicting.—Where the juror said he had "conscientious scruples" about capital punishment and did not know whether he would convict the prisoner even if the evidence proved murder in the first degree, he was properly rejected on the commonwealth's challenge. *Clore v. makes no distinction as between unusually aggravated, or ordinary homicides,⁵³ nor between different crimes punishable with death.⁵⁴

(C.) WHERE JURY FIXES PUNISHMENT. — The rule authorizing challenge because of aversion to the death penalty has been recognized as being peculiarly applicable where the jury fixes the punishment,⁵⁵ even where the juror says he will be governed by the law and evidence,⁵⁶ or though he says his opinion will not prevent his finding defendant guilty and imposing life imprisonment.⁵⁷ The fact that the statute authorizes the jury to fix the punishment does not remove this objection to a juror.⁵⁸ Even where he says he has no conscientious scruples the juror should be excused if he indicates his unwillingness to inflict the death penalty.⁵⁹

(D.) EVIDENCE. — The juror's own testimony is admissible on the question of his scruples against capital punishment.⁶⁰ To ask whether he has conscientious scruples against the death penalty is not objectionable as Majors, 65 Cal. 138, 3 Pac. 597, 52 Am. Rep. 295. Vt.—State v. Shaw, 73 Vt. 149, 50 Atl. 863.

53. Kirk v. Territory, 10 Okl. 46, 60 Pac. 797, the court is allowed no discretion and should not question the jurors along that line, nor in such a manner as might raise the juror's vindictiveness.

54. Sawyer v. State, 39 Tex. Crim. 557, 47 S. W. 650, juror having stated that, he had conscientious scruples against the penalty except in extreme cases of murder, the court properly excused him where he was not certain whether he had such scruples or not in a case of rape which was the case at bar.

[a] That in a case of willful and deliberate murder juror says he would be in favor of life imprisonment, but that he is opposed to hanging, is sufficient to exclude him. *People v. [a] Reason for Rule. — "Jurors should possess such qualifications as would enable them to fully conform to the provisions of the statute, and if the testimony developed upon the trial should show a case of such an aggravated character as demanded the infliction of the highest punishment they would do so." State v. Wooley, 215 Mo. 620, 115 S. W. 417.

[b] The object of the statute giving the jury the right to qualify the verdict in capital cases was not intended to satisfy the scruples of jurymen but to qualify the verdict if the jury believed there were extenuating circumstances. State v. Stewart, 45 La. Ann. 1164, 14 So. 143.

[c] Such a statute passed subsequent to the statute providing for the challenge does not repeal the latter. Rhea v. State, 63 Neb. 461, 88 N. W. 789; Hill v. State, 42 Neb. 503, 60 N. W. 916. See also Smith v. Com., 100 Ky. 133, 37 S. W. 586.

[a] Question Held Proper. — "Then you believe that a killing which is murder may be surrounded by such circumstances as to make it the duty of the jury to return a verdict of murder in the first degree and fix the death tending to his disgrace or dishonor,⁶¹ and for the purpose of determining peremptory challenges he may be asked as to his attitude regarding capital punishment.⁶² Nor is it any objection that some jurors were so questioned in the presence of others already chosen.⁶³ The juror having at first given answers which leave the matter in doubt the court may permit further questioning and excuse him as the result of the whole examination,⁶⁴ and it is harmless to merely repeat the question in another form after the jurors have said they had no conscientious scruples.⁶⁵ Where the juror's answers do not go so far as to render him incompetent the court before excluding him should give defendant an opportunity to examine him further.⁶⁶ Where the penalty and hang the defendant?" The question properly states the law and does no harm to defendant. Rodriguez v. Territory, 14 Ariz. 166, 125 Pac. 878.

[b] Proper to ask jurors "if they had such scruples against capital punishment as would prevent them from finding the defendant guilty where their verdict would mean his execution." Bell v. State, 120 Ark. 530, 180 S. W. 186.

[c] A question practically in the words of the statute is proper. Greenley v. State, 60 Ind. 141; Johnson v. State, 34 Neb. 257, 51 N. W. 835.

[d] Question on Circumstantial Evidence Not Proper.—A question as to whether a venireman would find defendants guilty on circumstantial evidence is not properly framed to elicit facts rendering him incompetent under this section. Lambright v. State, 34 Fla. 564, 16 So. 582.

61. Jones v. State, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 475.

[a] Case is not analogous to that of a witness whom it is sought to disqualify on account of atheism. Also if the juror does not object to answering the prisoner cannot complain. State v. Mullen, 14 La. Ann. 570.

62. State v. Dooley, 89 Iowa 584, 57 N. W. 414.

[a] Question Held Proper.—"Have you any preconceived opinions or notions against capital punishment, when the statute prescribes it, and the evidence is sufficient to warrant it?" State v. Foster, 91 Iowa 164, 59 N. W. 8.

63. Ray v. State, 108 Tenn. 282, 67 S. W. 553, the juror questioned was peremptorily challenged on the court's overruling challenge for cause.

64. State v. Ward, 39 Vt. 225, statements contradictory as to whether his scruples would lead him to decide contrary to the evidence.

[a] Juror first stated he was opposed to the punishment in case of extreme youth but having been put upon the court as trier, there was no error in permitting further questions and finally excusing him upon his explaining that he was conscientiously opposed to such punishment even though the accused was over fourteen years of age. Bell v. State, 91 Ga. 15, 16 S. E. 207.

[b] Juror's State of Mind Left Doubtful.—Juror who first said he had scruples, then said if the evidence warranted he would render a verdict which would carry the penalty, but finally in answer to question by the court said he was opposed to hanging, showed such a state of mind as justified his exclusion. State v. Jackson, 42 La. Ann. 1170, 8 So. 297.

[c] The overruling of a proper question on cross-examination directed toward a question the prosecution had propounded to test juror's scruples, is not reversible error unless prejudice appears. State v. Garner, 135 La. 746, 66 So. 181.

That challenge is to be determined from whole examination see supra, VII, E, 4, k.

65. Jones v. Com., 14 Ky. L. Rep. 223, 19 S. W. 844, permitted to answer the question whether they would inflict the death penalty, if the proof justified it.

66. Smith v. State, 55 Miss. 410, all the juror said was "I would not like for a man to be hung."

[a] But after challenge has been allowed against a juror who states that he has conscientious scruples against the death penalty the court may refuse statute disqualifies him, evidence of his previous statements may be received to show his opinion.⁶⁷

(E.) DETERMINATION. — Whether the scruples or opinions of the juror are such as disqualify him for a juryman presents a non-reviewable question of fact,⁶⁸ and where the scruples are only made a ground of challenge, the determination of the juror's competency is left to the trial court's discretion,⁶⁹ not being subject to review unless that discretion be abused.⁷⁰ Thus where the juror's answers did not bring him strictly within the statute the court's action in excusing him will not be disturbed,⁷¹ and conceding that the circumstances would have warranted overruling the challenge, excusing is no ground for reversal in doubtful cases,⁷² though there is authority for the proposition that excluding a juror for a reason beyond the statutory one is reversible error.⁷³ It seems that retaining a juror who had conscientious scruples would not prejudice the prisoner.⁷⁴

14. Interest in Case at Bar.⁷⁵ — a. In Subject-Matter of Suit. At common law no person having any interest in the outcome of the suit was competent to sit as a juror therein,⁷⁶ and if he had any direct interest he was subject to principal challenge,⁷⁷ and by statute in some states it is made a principal cause for challenge, that one has an interest in the cause or action,⁷⁸ while other statutes disqualify jurors who are directly or indirectly interested in the subject-matter to permit defendant to examine him further. People v. Collins, 105 Cal. 504, 39 Pac. 16; People v. Goldenson, 76 Cal. 328, 19 Pac. 161, it is no abuse of discretion.

67. Metzger v. State, 18 Fla. 481, juror was properly excused who had stated before two witnesses that if he were on the jury "he would not go for capital punishment."

68. State v. Jones, 50 N. H. 369, 9 Am. Rep. 242; State v. Ward, 39 Vt. 225.

71. Stephenson v. State, 110 Ind. 358, 11 N. E. 360, 59 Am. Rep. 216.

[a] A juror who did not have any conscientious scruples but who said in effect that he "would hate to vote for the death penalty but, if the evidence warranted such a verdict, he could vote for it" having been excused on the state's challenge, the supreme court refused to reverse on the theory that defendant had no right to the particular juror, and that the court properly excuses any juror on its reasonable doubt as to his qualifications. State v. Buralli, 27 Nev. 41, 71 Pac. 532.

73. People v. Stewart, 7 Cal. 140, where under statute reading "conscientious scruples" a juror who was only "opposed from principle" to capital punishment, was held improperly excluded.

74. State v. Ford, 42 La. Ann. 255, 7 So. 696, so suggests. The error, if one it was, was harmless because the juror did not sit.

of the suit,⁷⁹ when they are subject to challenge under the general rule.⁸⁰ By other statutes the court is required to examine the jurors and excuse all who have any interest in the cause.⁸¹ Interest in the event of the action or in the main question involved is ground for challenge under many statutes,⁸² being cause for challenge for "implied bias" in some states.⁸³ By statute the injured party is not competent in some states,⁸⁴ and even without a statute he is subject to principal challenge in a criminal prosecution for the infliction of the injury.⁸⁵ It has been said that the better practice is to permit a general inquiry as to the direct or even contingent interest of jurors in the result of the litigation, or in the parties to it, when there appears to be any reasonable ground to believe some of them may have such an interest,⁸⁶ and the court should exclude the juror if there is reasonable ground to believe he has such an interest as will render him not impartial,⁸⁷ and a more rigid rule of exclusion is recognized as to jurors than as to magistrates.⁸⁸ The smallest degree of interest is said to be a decisive objection to a juror in a criminal case,⁸⁹ and pecuniary interest, however slight, has been called disqualifying in civil cases.⁹⁰ It is recognized, however, that the interest may be so remote that it ought not to be considered as rendering a person incompetent.⁹¹ In every case the question is to be determined not by specific instances and mere precedents but by the broad general rules of human experience.⁹² Where the proposed jurors are stockholders of corporations who are directly or indirectly interested in the result they are not competent.⁹³ A depositor of a bank which defendant is charged with defrauding has a direct interest, and should be excluded on challenge,⁹⁴ and persons who are particularly interested in the contemplated improvement are not competent to sit on the jury to condemn land taken therefor.⁹⁵ Also a person who is living on the land involved in the controversy would be subject to challenge.⁹⁶

b. Bail or Surety for Party.—The prisoner's bail is properly excluded on the state's challenge for cause,⁹⁷ and the surety or recognizance of a joint defendant is properly excluded although he is indifferent as to the other defendant.⁹⁸ Any person who is security on any bond or obligation for either party is also subject to challenge,⁹⁹

[c] Stockholder of Company Interested Though Not a Party.—A juror who owned stock in a corporation which had agreed to a division of the net income of itself and another corporation, based on the proportion of the cost of each corporation's road, is pecuniarily interested and cannot sit as a juror to award damages for the taking of land by such other corporation. *Page v. c. Taxpayers, Residents and Citizens.—At common law, the weight of authority is that a resident taxpayer of a municipality which is a party to a suit is incompetent because of his interest,² but there is authority that the interest in suits against a city for damages is too remote to render them incompetent.³ In the absence of a statute making them competent they are properly excluded on challenge according to many authorities,⁴ and there is clearly no abuse of discretion in excluding jurors who admit their interest might influence them,⁵

and even where the common-law rule has been abrogated the juror may be asked as to his being influenced, for the purpose of determining peremptories.⁶

Where the common-law rule has not been modified some courts say it is to be strictly observed,⁷ but many interests have been held too slight to affect the juror's judgment, both at common law and under the statute,⁸ and the disqualification has been said to be more theoretical than practical.⁹ Generally taxpayers of a county are not incompetent to try a case against a county even though there be no statute making them competent,¹⁰ but it has been held that where the county has a right to obtain a change of venue challenge for implied bias will lie.¹¹

The common-law disability has been abrogated by statute in many to exclude a taxpayer resident of a certain ward where he said he did not think it fair inhabitants of that ward should pay taxes and get no gas, but that he had no opinion which would disqualify him in the case at bar, which was on a contract between the gas company and the city regarding street lighting. *Davenport Gas Light & C. 8. State v. Lynn, 3 Penne. (Del.) 316, 51 Atl. 878, interest in fine.

[a] Juror's interest in a fine or recognizance payable to the town, is too small to overbalance the interest and feeling of all men fit to be jurors, to provide public justice and protect the innocent. Treasurer of Middletown v. Ames, 7 Vt. 166.

[b] Smallness of Juror's Tax Considered.—The court doubts whether the mere fact that the juror was the son of one whose total tax for the support of the poor was eighty cents a year was disqualified merely because the will he was to pass upon established a trust in favor of the poor of the town. Fiske v. Paine, 18 R. I. 632, 28 Atl. 1026, 29 Atl. 498.

[c] Liability for Proportion of Attorney's Fee.—Where a policeman had been murdered, and the mayor and council had employed counsel to prosecute the alleged murderer; this was not sufficient to disqualify as jurors all persons residing within the corporate limits on the ground that they would be liable to taxation to satisfy the attorney's fee. Doyal v. State, 70 Ga. 134.

[b] Reason for Different Rule.—A different rule prevails not only because of the slight extent of the personal interest of the individual taxpayer, but because it would be almost impossible to get a jury of residents of the county who were not taxpayers. The Code §3505, subd. 1, gives the party the unqualified right to change of venue and this is a sufficient protection to the party. Wilson v. Wapello, 129 Iowa 77, 105 N. W. 363.

states,¹² and they are no longer subject to challenge,¹³ but a statute making residents of an interested county competent does not extend by implication to resident taxpayers of an interested city.¹⁴ A general statute prescribing that jurors shall be taxpayers does not abrogate the common-law disqualification.¹⁵ If a person be a resident and not a taxpayer he is competent,¹⁶ and that jurors are officers and councilmen of a city does not disqualify them to act as jurors in the hustings court of that city.¹⁷ The city as well as the adverse party may challenge.¹⁸ By statute citizenship does not disqualify one to act as a juror where the state is directly or indirectly a party.¹⁹

[a] Statutes of this sort have been upheld upon the ground that the interest of the juror is so remote, trifling, and insignificant that it may fairly be supposed to be incapable of affecting the judgment of the juror. Meyer v. San Diego, 121 Cal. 102, 53 Pac. 434, 66 Am. St. Rep. 22, 41 L. R. A. 762.

[a] City Having Attributes of County.—Under previous statute applying only to counties, jurors who were tax paying inhabitants of a city which had peculiar attributes as a quasi county were held competent. O'Brien v. Vulcan Iron Works, 7 Mo. App. 257.

[b] Provisions as to County and Penal Actions Construed Together in Assumpsit Action.—How. St., §12932, provides that it shall be no ground of challenge in penal actions that juror "liable to pay taxes in any county, city, village, township or district, which may be benefited by such recovery." How. St., §950. "On the trial of every action in which a county shall be interested, the electors and inhabitants of such county shall be competent . . . jurors." In City of Detroit v. Detroit Railway, 134 Mich. 11, 95 N. W. 992, 99 N. W. 411, 104 Am. St. Rep. 600, construing these statutes together and taking into consideration the fact that judges had always been held competent when similarly situated, notwithstanding section 12600 which provides that judges shall be disqualified on the same ground that jurors are excluded, it was held that one cannot be challenged on the ground of interest merely because he is a taxpayer of a city which is plaintiff in an action of assumpsit.

15. Watson v. Tripp, 11 R. I. 98, 33 Am. Rep. 420, the references in the statutes as to their being taxpayers is one merely making them generally liable to jury service. It does not cure their disability in particular cases.

c. Person Who Is To Be Witness. — At common law a juror was not incompetent because he was a witness in the cause,²⁵ but by statute it is made ground for challenge that the juror has been summoned as a witness, or that he is a witness for either side.²⁶ Though

[a] Justice of the peace who received the affidavit and issued the warrant which was the basis of the accusation should have been excused on challenge propter affectum. Evans v. State, 13 Ga. App. 700, 79 S. E. 916.

[b] Deputy prosecuting attorney stands as the representative of the state, as well as the attorney for the state and was "impliedly biased" against the defendant, and so was incompetent as a juror. Block v. State, 100 Ind. 357.

[c] Deputy sheriffs are incompetent to act as jurors since the sheriff is interested in the securing of convictions, his salary being payable out of fees earned and collected, and they are his employees. Gaff v. State, 155 Ind. 277, 58 N. E. 74, 80 Am. St. Rep. 235.

Zimmerman v. State, 115 Ind. 129, 17 N. E. 258.

22. Patswald v. United States, 5 Okla. 351, 49 Pac. 57, the affidavits were to the effect that no bias or prejudice existed in the county and so could not have prejudiced the juror.

23. State v. Morse, 35 S. D. 18, 150 N. W. 293, at most it is a question of actual bias, and the affidavits in the case at bar showing no bias against defendant the challenge was properly overruled.

24. Campbell v. State, 144 Ga. 224, 87 S. E. 277, assuming there may be quasi prosecutors the court doubts whether there can be any such thing as a voluntary defendant.

the statute does not specifically mention the writ, one is clearly subject to challenge for cause who has been subpoenaed;²⁷ but it is not necessary that he should have been subpoenaed.²⁸ The mere fact that the prosecutor states he will not use the juror as a witness does not justify overruling defendant's challenge for implied bias of one who testified before the grand jury.²⁹ Nor is error in overruling a challenge cured by the fact that the juror was not actually called as a witness.³⁰ The statute does not apply to witnesses called on a motion for change of venue.³¹ Persons summoned merely as character witnesses have been held not to be disqualified,³² but such witness may be excluded on the state's challenge though he knows nothing about the merits of the case.³³

b. Actions Between Juror and Party to Action at Bar.—That another action was pending between the juror and a party to the action at bar, was ground for challenge at common law.⁴⁰ If the action was of such a nature as to imply malice or ill-will, the challenge was for principal cause, otherwise it was to the favor.⁴¹ Under some statutes it is ground for principal challenge that an action is pending between the juror and any party to the action on trial.⁴² And many statutes provide that it shall be ground for challenge in a criminal trial that the juror is a party adverse to the defendant in a civil action, or has complained against, or been accused by him, in a criminal prosecution,⁴³ being usually made ground for challenge for implied bias.⁴⁴

c. Another Suit Pending at Same Term.—By statute it is ground for challenge for cause in many states that the juror has an action pending in the same court at the term for which he is drawn.⁴⁵

The time at which the case may be heard at the term does not affect the incompetency.⁴⁶ Some statutes have been construed as disqualifying jurors whose cases have been continued over the term.⁴⁷

d. Witness in Other Suit or Proceeding.—By statute in many states it is ground for challenge that the juror in a civil action has been a witness on a previous trial between the same parties for the same cause of action,⁴⁸ and witnesses either for or against the prisoner on the preliminary trial, or before the grand jury are subject to challenge under some statutes.⁴⁹ Even where there is no statute a witness in another case involving the same facts is incompetent because of the bias they must have produced in his mind.⁵⁰ at issue in the superior court," their names are taken off the list. The object of the statute is to disqualify one who has a suit which is triable at the term for which he is drawn. Hence the suit must not only be "pending" but must be "at issue," for if it became at issue during the term it would not be triable until the next term. In the case at bar the suit was not only not "at issue" but the juror had been granted time, until after the term, in which to answer. State v. Snarr, 121 N. C. 669, 28 S. E. 549. (2) This is the only specific ground of challenge prescribed by the statutes. State v. Vick, 132 N. C. 995, 43 S. E. 626. 74. Commander v. State, 60 Ala. 1. [a] Simpson v. People, 47 Colo. 612, 108 Pac. 169, the court reversing for another reason, suggests that the interests of both public and prisoner would have been better served by sustaining a challenge for cause based on the fact that the juror had formerly expressed.⁷⁵ By some statutes persons who sat on a former trial are disqualified,⁷⁶ and so subject to challenge under the general rule.⁷⁷ In civil actions having served as a juror on a previous trial between the same parties for the same cause of action is ground for challenge for cause under many statutes,⁷⁸ being a principal ground for challenge under some statutes,⁷⁹ and for implied bias under others.⁸⁰

In criminal prosecutions it is ground for challenge for cause under many statutes that the juror had served on a petit jury which was discharged after hearing evidence, or rendered a verdict that was set aside;⁸¹ it being frequently made ground for challenge for implied bias.⁸² The challenge is properly one to the individual juror and not to the array.⁸³ It does not matter whether any additional or different witnesses are to be examined.⁸⁴ But the rule has been held not to apply where the first jury was discharged without having heard any testimony,⁸⁵ or where the jurors were re-summoned after motion for a change of judge was granted,⁸⁶ or the jurors had tried merely defendant's plea in bar.⁸⁷ The rule does not apply as to jurors who served in a partial trial of the same cause.

[a] Jurors who have tried the special plea of autrefois acquit, and have found against the plea, may sit as jurors on the trial of the main issue. The jurors had heard nothing of the testimony except that one witness had spoken of the prisoner's "confession," but was told not to say anything about the confession, and the jurors all stated they had no impression of the guilt or innocence of the prisoner, and could give him a fair trial on the evidence. *Page v. have been excused at the former trial, on peremptory challenge.⁸⁸

c. In Another Action or Prosecution Against Accused.—By statute in many states one who has previously served as a juror in a civil case brought against the defendant for the act charged as a crime is subject to challenge for cause on the trial of the indictment,⁸⁹ it being ground for challenge for implied bias under many statutes.⁹⁰ The challenge is properly to the poll and not to the array.⁹¹ The general rule is that where a verdict in the former prosecution necessarily involved a determination of the main issue in the case at bar the juror is incompetent,⁹² though the evidence is to be different in some particulars,⁹³ and though the juror thinks he can find impartially.⁹⁴ But if the offense charged be entirely different in all its essential features, the juror is not incompetent,⁹⁵ even though it be for a similar offense.⁹⁶ But at least for the purpose of determin-

[a] Different Instrument Forged. Jurors are subject to challenge for cause who had tried defendant for the forgery of a signature upon another instrument, the parties upon whom the forgery was practiced being the same, the instruments having been transferred at the same time, and the principal facts being the same in both cases. Curtis v. State, 118 Ala. 125, 24 So. 111.

[b] Evidence of Transaction Introduced in Former Case.—Juror who had served in another case against defendant, in which evidence of the transaction under consideration was introduced, is incompetent. Jackson v. State, 103 Ga. 417, 30 S. E. 251.

[c] Sale of Liquor at Different Time.—In a local option case jurors who had found defendant guilty of selling liquor to a particular person at one time were incompetent to try him in a second case for selling liquor to the same person at another time, all the evidence being practically the same. *Holmes v. [a] Members of a jury who tried defendant for selling liquor illegally to

ing peremptories, the juror may be asked whether if the facts are shown to be similar, he has a fixed opinion.⁹⁷

d. On Trial of Another for the Offense Charged.—One who has served on a jury which tried another for the offense charged against the prisoner is subject to challenge for cause under the statutes,⁹⁸ it being usually made ground for challenge for implied bias.⁹⁹ A juror is incompetent where he has sat on the jury that tried another jointly indicted defendant,¹ even though he says he has formed no opinion and can try defendant impartially.² Challenge to the poll and not motion for a continuance is the proper practice in such cases.³ Jurors are not incompetent who were on the panel to try a co-defendant but were excused on peremptory challenge by either state or defendant.⁴

e. On Trial of Another for a Different Offense.—That jurors by their examination in a similar case have shown themselves to be incompetent does not establish their incompetency in the case at bar.⁵ The statutes forbidding one to serve on a jury which has tried another for the offense charged⁶ do not have reference to the trial of another for a like offense.⁷ Hence where prosecutions are of differ-

one person are not disqualified to act on a jury to try the same defendant for sales made to another, the environments in the two cases being entirely different, the witnesses not being the same nor the issues the same. *Engman v. ent persons for different offenses, the jurors are competent to sit in both cases though the prosecutions are for the same kind of crime.⁸ The mere fact that the prosecuting witness is the same does not change this rule,⁹ nor does the fact that the crimes were committed on the same person.¹⁰ But where all the evidence and circumstances were the same, and the cases turned on the credibility of the chief witness, the only difference being the different defendants, a juror who had convicted one was held incompetent to try the other.¹¹ Also if the main issue is the same jurors who tried the one defendant are incompetent to try the other.¹² But generally where there is no connection between the two cases except that they grew out of the same controversy the juror is competent,¹³ and where the offenses are of an entirely different nature the mere fact that some of the witnesses are the same does not make the jurors incompetent.¹⁴ If counsel believe that criticism by the judge of the jury in another case, has influenced the jurors in the case at bar, he may ask as to service in that other case in order to determine as to peremptories.¹⁵

f. In Actions Between Different Parties.—By statute it is sometimes provided that one shall not serve within a certain time after he has been a juror in a suit by or against either of the parties,¹⁶ and some statutes provide that one cannot sit as a juror in a civil case who has served as a juror in a criminal action against either party upon substantially the same facts or transaction,¹⁷ but generally it is not proper to ask jurors as to their feeling in another case against the same party by a different plaintiff.¹⁸ Jurors are not necessarily incompetent because they have served in an action of a similar nature where only one of the parties is the same.¹⁹ The mere fact that some of the facts involved in both cases are the same, does not make the juror subject to challenge.²⁰ It has been held that a juror who has tried another case growing out of the same condemnation proceedings is not competent,²¹ but jurors who have been impaneled to try the entire issue in condemnation proceedings do not become disqualified to determine the damages as to some parcels because they have already determined as to others.²²

[b] Possession of Free Tickets Given by Party.—In Shepard v. Lewiston, etc. St. Ry., 101 Me. 591, 65 Atl. 20, it was held that the mere possession by a jurymen of tickets entitling him to ride free, issued to him as trustee of a certain society and of trivial value, was not of itself indicative of bias or prejudicial feeling in favor of defendant, there being nothing to show any corrupt motive on the part of anyone.

[c] That the juror had received passes from defendant railroad company, and might receive others, said passes being issued to him as the employe of another road and only on the request of the officials thereof, he not being at the time of the trial the holder of any pass nor the recipient of any present favor from defendant, does not disqualify him. Temples v. Central of Ga. Ry. Co. (Ga. App.), 91 S. E. 502.

a corporation of which defendant corporation was a large customer was competent though he stated that he wanted to keep in the good graces of defendant and would do it any little favor that would not be against his conscience, but that he had no prejudice against plaintiff and that if selected as a juror he would try the case according to the law and evidence. His rejection went beyond the limit of judicial discretion and amounted to giving plaintiff an additional peremptory. Joyce v. Metropolitan St. Ry. Co., 219 Mo. 344, 118 S. W. 21.

[e] That a party is president and principal owner of a bank of which jurors are depositors or debtors, is too indirect a relationship to make them incompetent as a matter of law. Twitchell v. Thompson, 78 Ore. 285, 153 Pac. 45; Harrison v. Pacific Ry. & N. Co., 72 Ore. 553, 144 Pac. 91.

[f] Unfriendly Feeling Growing Out of Business Relation.—An action being against a corporation, the mere fact that a juror had an unfriendly feeling growing out of business difficulties he had had with the president of the corporation, which feeling was personal to the president and did not extend to the corporation, does not make him incompetent. Heucke v. Milwaukee City Ry. Co., 69 Wis. 401, 34 N. W. 243.

[g] Both Parties Formerly Physicians of Juror.—Where two physicians were being sued for malpractice the fact that each of them had previously been the juror's physician either for himself or his family, and that he was on friendly terms with both, though neither had been employed by him for eighteen months, does not render the juror incompetent where the juror says he can try fairly despite his acquaintance with defendants. Van Skike v. Potter, 53 Neb. 28, 73 N. W. 295.

33. Rogers Grain Co. v. Tanton, 136 Ill. App. 533, he said he did not know the party and could try fairly.

panty as deceased.³⁴ But business relationships between the juror and one of the parties, if of such a nature as is calculated to influence his verdict, make him incompetent.³⁵ The matter is one for the trial court's discretion.³⁶ By statute it is sometimes made ground for challenge for cause that the juror is "united in business" with either party to a civil action,³⁷ or in a criminal prosecution, that the juror is "engaged in business" with the defendant, or the person injured, or on whose complaint the prosecution was instituted.³⁸

b. Debtor or Creditor.—The mere fact that a juror is debtor or creditor to a party does not necessarily disqualify him;³⁹ at most it gives rise to a challenge in the nature of the common-law challenge to the favor.⁴⁰ By statute in many states it is cause for challenge in civil suits that the juror stands in the relation of debtor or creditor

Co. v. Cook*, 37 Neb. 435, 55 N. W. 943.

[b] That juror disposed to favor railroad company because of business dealings and would give it benefit of doubt if evenly balanced is ground for challenge. This did not amount to statement that he would decide on preponderance of the testimony. Denver S. P. & P. R. Co. v. Driscoll, 12 Colo. 520, 21 Pac. 708, 13 Am. St. Rep. 243.

39. Rumping v. Arkansas Nat. Bank, 121 Ark. 202, 180 S. W. 749, juror indebted to defendant bank.

[a] Mere indebtedness to defendant bank is not a disqualifying relationship. "To hold, as a legal presumption, that such relationship would be likely to warp the judgment would be, in our opinion, to estimate too cheaply integrity under the sanction of an oath." Richardson v. Planters' Bank, 94 Va. 130, 26 S. E. 413.

[b] That juror was creditor of bank which prisoner was accused of defrauding does not disqualify him. The assets of the bank would be neither increased nor diminished by conviction or acquittal. Imboden v. People, 40 Colo. 142, 90 Pac. 608.

[c] Proper to ask him if he is drawer or indorser of any note in defendant bank. Mechanics' & Farmers' Bank v. Smith, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 115.

[d] Indebtedness Held Disqualifying.—Juror to whom defendant in execution was indebted in a small amount, and who was contingently liable for a judgment on a forthcoming bond, the said defendant being insolvent, was clearly not competent, especially where he said he felt himself unfit to sit on the jury. Ferriday v. Selser, 4 How. (Miss.) 506.

40. Thompson v. Douglass, 35 W. Va. 337, 13 S. E. 1015, if the juror were shown to be so greatly indebted that he felt under special obligation, or at his mercy, it might be ground for exclusion. But it was improper to exclude jurors on a mere showing of to either party,⁴¹ and in criminal prosecutions it is ground for challenge for implied bias that the juror is debtor or creditor to the defendant, or to the person injured, or to the person on whose complaint the prosecution was instituted.⁴²

c. Partners.⁴³—A member of a commercial partnership is incompetent to sit as a juror when his partner is a party,⁴⁴ and by statute it is ground for challenge for cause in civil actions that the juror is a partner;⁴⁵ so, being partner of defendant, or person injured, or on whose complaint the prosecution was instituted, is also ground for challenge for implied bias under some statutes.⁴⁶

d. Fellow Employes.—A juror is not rendered incompetent by the mere fact that both he and plaintiff are employed by the same concern.⁴⁷

e. Master and Servant, Employer and Employe, Principal and Agent.—At common law if the relationship of master and servant existed between the juror and a party challenge would lie,⁴⁸ and it is generally held that an employe is incompetent to act in any trial involving the rights or interests of his employer,⁴⁹ notwithstanding he

It is enough that it might possibly be the case. And he is subject to challenge as for implied bias though he says he is without any prejudice because of his relationship or otherwise. Crawford v. 54. Sansouwer v. Glenlyon Dye Works, 28 R. I. 539, 68 Atl. 545.

[a] A juror is incompetent who is an employe of a corporation in which the defendant corporation was largely interested though a minority stockholder, where his sole means of income depended upon his position which was terminable at his employer's pleasure. Defendant would have some voice in determining whether the juror would retain his position and it did not appear juror knew how much influence defendant might have or might exercise should it feel the verdict was defendant charged with murder,⁵⁵ but that the employe of one who contributed to pay counsel to defend accused is not disqualified as a matter of law.⁵⁶

By statute it is ground for challenge for cause in many states that the juror and a party occupy the relation of master and servant, principal and agent, or employer and clerk,⁵⁷ and that the juror is employer, employe or agent of either party is ground for principal challenge in some states.⁵⁸ In criminal prosecutions it is usually ground for challenge for implied bias that the juror and defendant are in the relation of master and servant or employer and employe on wages,⁵⁹ this being extended by some statutes to include the person injured, or on whose complaint the prosecution is instituted.⁶⁰ Mere occasional employment to do odd jobs is not sufficient to disqualify the juror,⁶¹ and that he has been in the employ of a party at a time prior to the date of trial is not ground for challenge.⁶²

not been removed by the statute abolishing distraint.⁶⁵ A tenant under a crop lease, who has delivered the stipulated share of the crop prior to trial, is not disqualified,⁶⁶ but it has been held ground for principal challenge that one is tenant of a stockholder of plaintiff bank.⁶⁷ By statute in some states it is ground for challenge for implied bias in a civil action that the juror stands in the relation of landlord or tenant to the adverse party,⁶⁸ and in criminal cases it is usually ground for challenge for implied bias that the juror stands in that relationship to the defendant,⁶⁹ the statutes being sometimes extended to include the person injured or on whose complaint the prosecution was instituted.⁷⁰

76. Viou v. Brooks-Scanlon Lumb. Co., 99 Minn. 97, 108 N. W. 891. So in Spoonick v. Backus-Brooks Co., 89 Minn. 354, 94 N. W. 1079, it being contended that the plaintiff might save his rights by use of peremptories, the court suggests, "It is his right first to learn the facts, and he must do so to exercise intelligently his right to challenge peremptorily."

77. Goff v. Kokomo Brass Works, 43 Ind. App. 642, 88 N. E. 312.

[a] Question Held Proper.—"Are you acquainted with" certain named insurance agencies and companies, "or with any member of that company" was held proper, under the rules theretofore laid down, but two of the judges dissented on the ground that the practice of questioning as to mere acquaintance was carrying the rule too far. Northwestern Fuel Co. v. Minneapolis St. Ry. Co. (Minn.), 159 N. W. 832.

78. Goff v. Kokomo Brass Works, 43 Ind. App. 642, 88 N. E. 312.

79. Meyer v. Gundlach-Nelson Mfg. Co., 67 Mo. App. 389, counsel for defendant having virtually admitted that a certain surety company was the real defendant, it was proper both for the purpose of challenging for cause and peremptorily, to ask questions to ascertain fully the situation of jurors as respected that company.

[a] In Girard v. Grosvenordale Co., 82 Conn. 271, 73 Atl. 747, it was held a proper exercise of the court's discretion to permit inquiry as to whether the jurors were stockholders, officers, agents, or employes of the company which defendant's counsel admitted had insured defendant. But plaintiff's counsel brought the matter out in the absence of the jury and it appeared that he was acting in good faith "for the genuine purpose of learning whether any of the jurors were disqualified by interest, and not for the purpose of getting before the jurors a fact not in issue in the case for the purpose of prejudicing them."

80. Kinney v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 261 Mo. 97, 169 S. W. 23, it is proper to ask jurors whether they are connected in a business way with a specified insurance company, the attorney of which is in court ostensibly as attorney for the defendant making a defense which was really in behalf of along this line are clearly proper, at least for the purpose of determining peremptories.⁸¹ It is not necessary that the insurance company be named as a party to the suit.⁸² Some cases hold that if the record fails to show any connection or claim of connection between insurance companies named, and the suit being tried, questions as to the business relations of jurors, with those companies and their agents is wholly immaterial.⁸³

By some authorities the jurors may be questioned as to their interest in a certain named company, though it does not yet appear that particular company is interested,⁸⁴ but other courts hold it is particularly objectionable to limit the questions as to a certain company, and then call defendant's counsel to prove that particular company is the indemnitor,⁸⁵ and some courts permit the jurors to be asked generally with respect to their connection with any indemnity company,⁸⁶ even though the record does not show that any such company his company which was not a party to the proceeding. See also Iroquois Furnace Co. v. McCrea, 191 Ill. 340, 61 N. E. 79, affirming 91 Ill. App. 337, where the question was permitted, an attorney of the company being present at the trial.

82. Spoonick v. Backus-Brooks Co., 89 Minn. 354, 94 N. W. 1079, it is the interest the company has in the result that governs.

[a] Though there is some conflict the better rule is that counsel have a right to ascertain just what, if any, relationship does exist between jurors and an insurance company who is interested in the case though not a party thereto. Egner v. Curtis, T. & P. Co., 96 Neb. 18, 146 N. W. 1032, L. R. A. 1915A, 153.

[a] In Vindicator Consol. G. M. Co. v. Firstbrook, 36 Colo. 498, 86 Pac. 313, followed in Cripple Creek Min. Co. v. Brabant, 37 Colo. 423, 87 Pac. 794, the rule is stated that while the jurors may be asked as to their interest even in a particular company it must not be done in a manner calculated to prejudice the insured party, but such questions may be asked in good faith.

[b] Good Faith of Question.—In Duncan Coal Co. v. Thompson's Admr., 157 Ky. 304, 162 S. W. 1139, the court says in effect that owing to its liability to abuse the question should never be asked except in good faith "and the good faith of plaintiff's counsel will depend on whether or not he has reasonable grounds to believe that defendant carries indemnity insurance, and that one or more of the jurors are in some way interested in the insurance company."

85. Odell v. Genesee Const. Co., 145 App. Div. 125, 129 N. Y. Supp. 122, it was held improper to limit the inquiry as to whether the juror was a stockholder or director in any insurance company, to a particular company and then call defendant's counsel to prove that defendant was insured therein.

[a] It is reversible error to compel defendant's attorney to testify as a part of the examination of the juror, whether a certain insurance company is interested in the litigation. This gives too much prominence to the matter and brings into the case an immaterial matter. Chybowski v. Bucyrus Co., 127 Wis. 332, 106 N. W. 833, 7 L. R. A. (N. S.) 357.

86. Brusseau v. Loner Brick Co., 133 Iowa 245, 110 N. W. 577, following Foley v. Cudahy Packing Co., 119 Iowa 246, 93 N. W. 284; Dow Wire Works Co. v. Morgan, 29 Ky. L. Rep. 854, 96 S. W. 530.

[a] "There is no doubt that the

was in any way interested,⁸⁷ at least for the purpose of determining as to peremptories.⁸⁸

How far the juror may be interrogated as to his connection with surety companies depends largely upon the spirit in which it is done.⁸⁹ There must be nothing which indicates any lack of good faith,⁹⁰ and all inquiry along this line is excluded if it appears that the questions are propounded merely for the purpose of influencing the verdict, by bringing prominently before the jurors, the fact that the party is indemnified against loss, through the judgment founded on their verdict.⁹¹ The line between prejudicial and non-prejudicial remarks can-right exists to ascertain whether any of the jurors own stock in or are employed by an insurance company writing employes' liability insurance in cases in which a party to the suit carries such insurance." Gordon Jones Const. Co. v. Lopez (Tex. Civ. App.), 172 S. W. 987.

[b] It was proper to ask jurors whether they were connected with any insurance or indemnity company, and whether they carried accident insurance, and as to one who was an insurance agent it was proper to ask whether he handled indemnity insurance. There was no further attempt to advise the jury that the defendant carried liability insurance. Armstrong v. Yakima Hotel Co., 75 Wash. 477, 135 Pac. 233, distinguishing numerous previous Washington cases as being cases in which it was attempted to bring out the fact that the insurance company and not defendant would have to pay any damages, and approving and following Hoyt v. Independent Asphalt Paving Co., 52 Wash. 672, 101 Pac. 367, where questions, as in the case at bar, were upheld as being but a reasonable necessity to enable counsel to exercise peremptories intelligently.

87. Dow Wire Works Co. v. Morgan, 29 Ky. L. Rep. 854, 96 S. W. 530, counsel may have had information and were within their rights in asking whether jurors were engaged in or connected with the accident insurance business.

[a] A general question addressed to the jury as a body whether any of them "had ever been employed as an agent of an employer's liability insurance company," having been permitted without any preliminary questions having been asked, the supreme court, reversing on other grounds, said they were not entirely agreed upon a disposition of the question as presented, and so left the matter without further discussion, other than to say that while the existence of an immaterial fact should never be suggested to the jurors, "a plaintiff is . . . entitled to put a question like the one objected to if found essential to his protection, even though prejudicial to the defendant." *Fowlie's Admx. v. not be drawn readily, as each case depends largely on its own circumstances.⁹² No exact rule can be laid down as to the best method to be pursued in presenting the matter.⁹³

Wire Works Co. v. Morgan, 29 Ky. L. Rep. 854, 96 S. W. 530.

[a] The evident purpose being to advise the jurymen that one of the parties is indemnified against loss, the question is improper. Crowley v. Stretsenreuter, 174 Ill. App. 538. See also Mithen v. Jeffery, 259 Ill. 372, 102 N. E. 778 (reversing 174 Ill. App. 602); Aetitis v. Spring Valley Coal Co., 150 Ill. App. 497 (where similar questions were upheld as not tending to intimate to the jury that appellant was indemnified. The question was general, no particular company being named and the court said the questions "did appellant no harm"), distinguishing McCarthy v. Spring Valley Coal Co., 232 Ill. 473, 83 N. E. 957.

[b] It must not be made a cloak to get before the jury by indirection what could not be directly brought to their notice, i. e., that the defendant is insured against liability. Mithen v. Jeffery, 259 Ill. 372, 102 N. E. 778, reversing 174 Ill. App. 602.

[c] Under guise of such examination counsel must not make prominent the fact that a party is indemnified, and seek to influence and prejudice the jurymen against that party because of that fact. Cripple Creek Min. Co. v. Brabant, 37 Colo. 423, 87 Pac. 794; Vindicator Consol. G. M. Co. v. Firstbrook, 36 Colo. 498, 86 Pac. 313.

92. Faber v. C. Reiss Coal Co., 124 Wis. 554, 102 N. W. 1049, so the statement by plaintiff's counsel that a certain named insurance company had insured defendant, having been made in answer to the court's inquiry, and the court having ruled and instructed in reference to the whole matter, there was no reversible error.

93. Gordon Jones Const. Co. v. Lopez (Tex. Civ. App.), 172 S. W. 987.

[a] No Fixed Rule Between the Extreme Views.—"Many authorities hold flatly that it is reversible error to bring before the jury in any form, even by examination on the voir dire, the fact that the defendant is insured against any adverse result of the action on trial. (Citing cases.) On the other extreme, some precedents allow them to question the jurors not only about their possible interest in a given insurance company, but also as a basis therefor to show that the defendant is insured in that particular concern. (Citing cases.) Between the two extremes are many varieties of opinion shading into each other like the colors of the spectrum so that it is impossible to deduce from them any fixed rule by which all disputes may be mathematically settled." Putnam v. Pacific Monthly Co., 68 Ore. 36, 130 Pac. 986, 136 Pac. 835, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 256, 45 L. R. A. (N. S.) 338.

[b] Presenting by Motion to Court To Examine.—In Citizens' L., H. & P. Co. v. Lee, 182 Ala. 561, 62 So. 199, plaintiff presented a motion in writing setting forth the name of the insurance company claimed to be interested and asking the court to qualify the jurors "as to their being employees, stockholders, or interested in" said company. Defendant's counsel objected to the motion's being read in presence of jury; to its being filed; and to evidence being introduced in support thereof. Before hearing evidence the court gave defendant an opportunity to agree to the facts which was refused, and the plaintiff then proved the existence of the policy. The supreme court, while holding that any attempt to prejudice the jury by getting before them the fact that other persons than the parties would be benefited or injured by their verdict also held that the purpose of the motion and evidence was proper, under the circumstances, and there being no showing of any improper motive there could be no reversal. It would be presumed that the trial court gave the jury a proper cautionary in Ala. 561, 62 So. 199.

[c] Plaintiff should proceed in a proper way under the direction of the trial judge as pointed out in Camp v. Churchill, 186 Ala. 173, 65 So. 336; Citizens' L., H. & P. Co. v. Lee, 182 Ala. 561, 62 So. 199.

[d] Serving Notice on Defendant's Counsel To Produce Policy.—The good faith of counsel in asking questions was held to appear where he had served notice on defendant's attorney

The examination should be kept strictly within the limits of the right,⁹⁴ by direct questions and without any suggestion or comment from counsel which may convey improper and prejudicial information to the jurors.⁹⁵ The court will assume that the jurors will obey their oaths and will be guided solely by the testimony without regard to the question of indemnity,⁹⁶ and if the question be asked in a prejudicial manner the court has discretion to remove that prejudice.⁹⁷ Mere discussion of the question in the juror's presence, is non-prejudicial where the trial court did not permit the question to be put.⁹⁸

The determination as to good faith is one within the sound discretion of the trial court,⁹⁹ and his rulings will not be disturbed unless to produce any insurance policy. Had defendant's counsel then wished to keep the matter from the jury he might have taken it up in a manner analogous to that followed where prejudicial matter is offered in evidence. That is by requiring offer in writing or orally to the court out of the jury's hearing. The vice of raising the question orally and then objecting lies in the fact that even if the jury be excluded the matter is brought to its attention which is the very thing sought to be avoided. Vion v. Brooks-Scanlon Lumb. Co., 99 Minn. 97, 108 N. W. 891.

[e] It is often possible to avoid the use of the word "insurance" altogether, and to get at the facts indirectly by questioning each juror separately as to his occupation, past and present, and by general questions ascertain in what companies or corporations he owns an interest. His acquaintance with employes of insurance companies may be probed by asking as to particular persons by name. Gordon Jones Const. Co. v. Lopez (Tex. Civ. App.), 172 S. W. 987.

[f] Preliminary Basis Condemned. It is not necessary to affirmatively lay a basis, as well as make a showing of good faith on the part of counsel, before questioning along this line. On the contrary the practice is to be condemned as tending to impress the jurors unduly with the importance of the insurance company's connection with the case. The proper practice is to ask the juror, without any announcement to the court, whether he is directly or indirectly concerned in any casualty company. While such a preliminary announcement with an extended colloquy between the court and counsel for both sides in which defendant's counsel charged bad faith on plaintiff's counsel and plaintiff claimed that an assistant of defendant's counsel was in fact an insurance company's adjuster, was condemned as bad practice, the court refused to reverse for that error alone. Howard v. Beldenville Lumb. Co., 129 Wis. 98, 108 N. W. 48.

98. Antletz v. Smith, 97 Minn. 217, 106 N. W. 517.

[a] The mere asking of the question and the refusal to permit it to be answered or repeated is not prejudicial. Egner v. Curtis, T. & P. Co., 96 Neb. 18, 146 N. W. 1032, L. R. A. 1915A, 153; El Paso Elect. Ry. Co. v. Shaklee (Tex. Civ. App.), 138 S. W. 188, distinguishing Harry Bros. Co. v. Brady (Tex. Civ. App.), 86 S. W. 615, and Lone Star Brew. Co. v. Voith (Tex. Civ. App.), 84 S. W. 1100.

99. Swift & Co. v. Platte, 68 Kan. 1, 72 Pac. 271, 74 Pac. 635.

[a] The only reasonable principle to be laid down is that in taking testimony the scope of the examination is subject to the discretion of the court which should exclude any attempt to prejudice the jury against foreign corporations, and at the same time permit such proper inquiry as to the interest, direct and indirect, of the jury as will avoid a packed jury. Putnam v. Pacific Monthly Co., 68 Ore. 36, 130

the discretion is abused.¹ Where the questions should have been permitted a refusal to allow them has been held reversible error.² Permitting counsel to go further than the rule allows despite the objection and exception of the other party may alone constitute sufficient ground for reversal,³ but it has been held harmless error where no person was excused because of his connection with the company, and the appellant did not exhaust his peremptories.⁴

20. Fiduciary Relationships.—a. *Attorney and Client.*⁵—That the juror and a party stand in the relation of attorney and client is ground for challenge at common law.⁶ Some statutes make it ground for challenge for cause in civil actions,⁷ being ground for principal challenge under some statutes,⁸ and for implied bias under others.⁹ Also it is ground for challenge for implied bias in criminal prosecutions that the relation exists as to the defendant,¹⁰ or as to the person injured or on whose complaint the prosecution was instigated.¹¹

[b] Discharging the Panel Because of Bad Faith.—Where the trial court entertains any doubt as to the good faith of the question, the proper practice is to discharge the panel at the offending party's cost. Duncan Coal Co. v. Thompson's Admr., 157 Ky. 304, 162 S. W. 1139.

[a] Practice Condemned Without Reversing.—Without deciding that it was sufficient alone to cause reversal the court holds that it was an indiscretion for the trial court to permit the inquiry to become "a feature in the examination of every juror, in various forms, from asking whether the juror was acquainted with the corporation, to whether he was a stockholder in it." It would have served every legitimate purpose to ask the jurors whether they had any interest in the result of the case, or in the principal question involved, considering the remoteness of probability that the average juror of that county was a stockholder of, or interested in, a corporation of London, England. Putnam v. Pacific Monthly Co., 68 Ore. 36, 130 Pac. 986, 136 Pac. 835, Ann. Cas. 1915C, 256, 45 L. R. A. (N. S.) 338.

It is the personal relationship that constitutes the ground of challenge.¹²

Where the relationship has terminated, no ground for challenge remains.¹³ The statute does not apply to the relation of attorney and client existing between the juror and the prosecuting attorney,¹⁴ nor does the fact that an attorney in the case is the juror's attorney in some other proceeding constitute ground for challenge,¹⁵ except where the statute so provides,¹⁶ though it is proper to inquire as to such relationship, and it is proper to ask whether the attorneys of record in the case were in the employ of the juror in order to determine as to peremptories,¹⁷ or as to the juror's acquaintance with the attorneys,¹⁸ as an aid in the exercise of peremptories.

[a] That juror has a high opinion

lenging party's counsel.²¹ So it is not proper to ask the juror whether he is prejudiced in favor of one attorney, and against the other.²² That the juror is a client of an attorney who is to be a witness in the case in no manner affects his competency.²³

In a civil case whether the relationship is disqualifying is for the trial court to determine in its discretion where the statute does not make it ground for challenge.²⁴

b. Guardian and Ward.—By statute the relationship of guardian and ward between the juror and a party to a civil action is ground for challenge for cause,²⁵ constituting implied bias under some statutes.²⁶ It is also ground for challenge for implied bias that the relationship exists between the juror and the defendant in a criminal prosecution,²⁷ or between him and the person injured or on whose complaint the prosecution was instigated.²⁸

21. Member of Family.—By statute in some states it is ground for challenge for cause in civil actions that the juror is a "member of the family" of one of the parties.²⁹ It is also made a ground for their kinsmen were members of the mutual insurance company whose policy was being sued on is immaterial. Moore v. Farmers' Mut. Ins. Assn., 107 Ga. 199, 209, 33 S. E. 65.

[c] Ignorance of Interest of Relative.—In an action on a promise by defendant's testator to plaintiff's intestate, that juror was related to one whose claim had been allowed against the intestate's estate, is not ground for new trial where the juror had no knowledge of the existence of such claim until after the trial. McLellan v. Crofton, 6 Greenl. (Me.) 307. But see Lyens v. State, 133 Ga. 587, 600, 66 S. E. 792, where ignorance both of the relationship and the fact that the relatives had contributed to a fund by which a special prosecutor was employed, was held immaterial, and it was held that a new trial should be granted. Compare Hardy v. Sprowle, 32 Me. 310.

38. Hardy v. Sprowle, 32 Me. 310.

[a] He may declare that he feels no prejudice in the case; and yet the law cautiously incapacitates him from serving on the jury because it suspects prejudice, because in general persons in a similar situation would feel prejudice. *Per Marshall, C. [c] That the juror does not have any personal acquaintance with the party, does not affect his disqualification by relationship to the party. Hardy v. Sprowle, 32 Me. 310.

[d] Juror Not Excused But Precedent Not To Be Followed.—A juror having said plaintiff was a second or third cousin of his wife and that he might be inclined to listen more favorably to plaintiff's evidence, but that he could try the case impartially, the supreme court said it would hesitate where the juror is not able to say just what the relationship is the ground of challenge may not be sufficiently established.³⁹

b. To Party.—At common law, relationship by consanguinity or affinity, within the ninth degree, to a party to the action, is good ground for challenge.⁴⁰ And according to the strict common-law rule even a remoter relationship might be disqualifying,⁴¹ but if it was within the ninth degree it was ground for principal challenge.⁴² In the absence of statute the common-law rules have been applied in some states,⁴³ but where a lesser degree is declared disqualifying as to judges and justices the same rule has been followed as to jurors,⁴⁴ and a general statute as to degrees of relationship for persons required to be disinterested, applies to jurors.⁴⁵

In civil cases many statutes provide that consanguinity, or affinity, within a specified degree to either party to the suit shall be disqualifying,⁴⁶ and so subjects the juror to challenge under the general to reverse for the mere overruling of the challenge for cause but that the precedent should not be followed. Mahaney v. St. Louis & H. R. Co., 108 Mo. 191, 18 S. W. 895.

rule.⁴⁷ Other statutes specifically make such relationship ground for challenge for cause,⁴⁸ being for "implied bias" under some statutes,⁴⁹ and principal cause for challenge under others.⁵⁰ In criminal cases it is made by statute ground for challenge for cause that the juror is related, by consanguinity, or affinity, to the defendant,⁵¹ the challenge being usually for "implied bias."⁵²

Under some statutes persons of kin to the defendant are absolutely disqualified.⁵³ But under others the court on motion examines the jurors as to their relationship to either party and excludes those who appear not indifferent.⁵⁴ Under the latter statutes the challenge is in effect one to the favor,⁵⁵ and the court need not inquire into the relationship unless requested to, in which case he must do so.⁵⁶

c. To Guardian Ad Litem.—The guardian ad litem is not a party within the statute disqualifying persons who are related by consanguinity or affinity to a party.⁵⁷

d. To Employers or Employees.—Relationship to the employer or employe of party does not of itself disqualify the juror,⁵⁸ nor is the employer or employe of a relative incapacitated.⁵⁹

e. To Person Injured or Prosecutor.—At common law the disqualification by relationship extended to those who were related to the person injured,⁶⁰ whether it also extended to relationships with the deceased in a prosecution for murder has been doubted.⁶¹ By statute persons of kin to the injured party or prosecutor are sometimes disqualified,⁶² and so are subject to challenge under the general rule;⁶³ and by specific statute in many states relationship by consanguinity or affinity to the prosecutor or person alleged to be injured is ground for challenge for cause,⁶⁴ it being usually made ground for challenge for implied bias.⁶⁵ The effect of these statutes is to make the prosecutor a party to the proceeding in so far that his relatives cannot sit.⁶⁶ And the statute has been held to extend to those related to persons who contributed to a fund with which special counsel was employed to aid in the prosecution,⁶⁷ though this latter rule does trend of modern decisions is in the direction of limiting rather than extending the disqualification,⁸⁵ and it is now generally conceded that if the opinion or impression is derived from mere rumor or newspaper reports, and is merely hypothetical or conditional, and the juror is free from any actual bias or prejudice he is competent.⁸⁶ The mere formation of an opinion does not disqualify,⁸⁷ if the verdict would not be influenced thereby.⁸⁸

The real question in every case is can the juror act fairly and impartially despite the opinion he holds,⁸⁹ or is the opinion so strong of itself, or impliedly, because of the grounds upon which it is based,

that the juror's mind is in a state prejudicial to the substantial rights of the party.⁹⁰ So the rule has sometimes been stated that a preconceived opinion, if fixed and determinate, though not characterized by malice or ill-will, is generally regarded as a ground of principal challenge, while an opinion based upon rumor and which does not appear to have taken firm hold of the juror's mind, is regarded as cause for challenge to the favor only.⁹¹

By the weight of modern authority the mere formation and expression of an opinion does not necessarily render the juror incompetent,⁹² or disqualified.⁹³ Incompetency depends more upon the character of the opinion, than upon the formation and expression of it,⁹⁴ and it is not the existence, but the strength of the opinion as shown by the grounds on which it is formed, that is decisive.⁹⁵ But there are cases holding that the formation and expression of an opinion disqualifies the juror per se.⁹⁶ By most of the authorities, at common law it was ground for principal challenge that the juror had formed and declared his opinion touching the matter in controversy,⁹⁷ and by

[b] That a juryman "had declared his opinion on either side" was a principal cause of challenge at common law on the ground that he was not the early cases it was ground for principal challenge,⁹⁸ but there is authority that even where a juror expressed his opinion upon the merits and indicated ill-will or malice, the challenge was only to the favor,⁹⁹ but the effect of the modern view and of the statutes is to change the character of the objection from a ground of principal challenge, to a ground of challenge to the favor.¹ The statutes do not imply that one who has an opinion is competent,² nor is it intended that everyone who has heard or read of an alleged crime shall be barred from the jury.³

juror's own statement under oath as to his then state of mind may become a controlling factor.⁷ It follows that in all cases the court should consider the character of the expression, the sources of the information and the circumstances under which the expression was used.⁸

b. Statutory Rules Generally.—Under statutes permitting challenge for any ground that unfits for jury service one may be challenged for having expressed an opinion about the merits of the case, though the statutes do not specifically mention that ground.⁹ Some statutes merely provide that it shall be good ground for challenge that the juror has a fixed opinion as to the guilt or innocence of defendant which would bias his verdict.¹⁰ This merely re-affirms the common-law rule,¹¹ and has been held to apply to both criminal and civil cases.¹² Under some statutes, having formed or expressed an opinion from rumor merely is specifically stated to be no ground for challenge.¹³

The statutes of some states provide in terms that having formed or expressed an unqualified opinion or belief that the prisoner is guilty or not guilty of the offense charged is ground for challenge for implied bias.¹⁴ This provision has been said to be only a simplification of the common-law rule,¹⁵ and under it the belief of the juror as to his ability to try the case fairly in spite of such opinion, is not a proper subject for inquiry.¹⁶ He is disqualified if the expression of the opinion be unqualified in form, though in the mind or thought of the juror the opinion was qualified.¹⁷

Many statutes provide that, in civil cases, having an unqualified opinion or belief as to the merits of the action founded upon knowledge of its material facts or of some of them is ground for challenge for cause.¹⁸ Another form of statute makes it good cause for challenge that the juror has expressed an opinion as to which party ought to prevail,¹⁹ or on the merits of the controversy,²⁰ or on the issue, or any material fact to be tried,²¹ unless founded only on newspaper reports or rumors and which are not such as to bias or prejudice the juror.²² The opinion must be such as will influence the juror's judgment in his consideration of the cause.²³

In many states the statutes provide for an examination of the juror under oath as to whether he has expressed or formed any opinion or is sensible of any bias or prejudice and the court excludes him if he appears not indifferent,²⁴ sometimes with a special provision as to opinions based on newspaper reports or rumor.²⁵ The theory of these statutes is that citizens who are fit to serve will not permit their previous opinions to control and that it is properly left to the trial court to determine their fitness, despite that opinion,²⁶ and, whether or not they are merely declaratory of the common law, the word "indifferent" is used in the common law sense.²⁷ And this has been held to be the general rule has been applied that a juror is disqualified who has formed an opinion on the issues unless it appear that he can find an impartial verdict on the evidence without being influenced by his opinion. Haugen v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 3 S. D. 394, 53 N. W. 769.

[b] But under a similar statute not mentioning the juror's knowledge, it is held that though the opinion was based on mere rumor or newspaper report and the juror states he can try the case fairly, those facts cannot be considered in determining his competency. That would be important, under the statute, if this were a criminal trial. But the provisions of the Criminal Practice Act (Rev. Code, §9264) in this regard have never been carried into the Civil Practice Act (Rev. Code, §6741). This leads to the conclusion that the legislature intended the more stringent rule of the common law should prevail in civil cases. Shane v. Butte Electric Ry. Co., 37 Mont. 599, 97 Pac. 958.

[a] Not Disqualified as Matter of Law.—It cannot be said as a matter of law that jurors are disqualified, who were strangers to the defendant, and to everyone "connected with the tragedy;" who were candid in their answers and plainly free from prejudice, the newspaper accounts which they had read and the rumors which they had heard had not closed their minds to a fair consideration of the evidence or to the giving of an intelligent, honest verdict. State v. Stewart, 85 Kan. 404, 116 Pac. 489.

[b] Opinion Requiring Evidence To Remove.—Juror is not rendered incompetent because he states that from rumor and from reading newspapers he has formed an opinion as to defendant's guilt, which it will take evidence to remove, where he also states that for the purposes of the trial he can disregard his opinion and can give the defendant a fair and impartial trial, and it appears he is indifferent in the case. Dewein v. State, 114 Ark. 472, 170 S. W. 582, following Hardin v. State, 66 Ark. 53, 48 S. W. 904 (where the court says it did not appear that the juror "entertained any prejudice against defendant"), and distinguishing Sullins v. State, 79 Ark. 127, 95 S. W. 159 (where a juror was held incompetent but it appeared that his brother-in-law in whom he had great confidence, and who was also a witness for the state, had published the newspaper reports). See also United States v. Schneider, 10 Mack. (D. C.) 381.

[c] Under a statute providing for examination by the court as to the juror's indifference, the proper test is "can and will the juror render a verdict according to the evidence heard upon the trial, impartially and fairly, under his oath so to do, regardless of his preconceived opinions; and if the juror declares upon his voir dire oath that he can and will so decide, there is no cause for sustaining a challenge on the ground of such previously formed opinion." Jones v. People, 6 Colo. 452.

[d] The opinion is shown not to be fixed, and hence not disqualifying where the juror states on his voir dire that he can nevertheless, try the case fairly on the law and evidence as given on the trial, and that he is free from prejudice and bias. State v. Hebert, 104 La. 227, 28 So. 898.

[e] In Pennsylvania if the opinions or impressions of the juror are founded on rumors or reports or even newspaper statements which the juror feels conscious he can dismiss, and he has no fixed prejudices or belief and he is able to say he can try the prisoner fairly on the evidence, freed from the influence of such impressions it is within the discretion of the court to permit him to serve. [a] The statute is "really in aid, and consequently not subversive, of the constitutional guaranties that a jury in a criminal cause shall be impartial." Stout v. State, 90 Ind. 1.

[b] "The constitution does not prescribe rules of evidence; it only requires the fact of the impartiality of the jury to exist; and a statute cannot be said to contravene its guaranty, which leaves the judicial mind free to find the fact, from the evidence submitted, according to the truth." Cooper v. State, 16 Ohio St. 328.

33. State v. Miller, 46 Ore. 485, 81 Pac. 363, the legislative declaration is in effect that the opinion shall not be of itself sufficient to sustain the challenge, but the court must be satisfied, from all the circumstances that the juror cannot disregard the opinion. See also State v. McClear, 11 Nev. 39; Kumli v. Southern Pac. Co., 21 Ore. 505, 28 Pac. 637.

34. Eason v. State, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 466, jurors who have formed or expressed opinions which are disqualifying because of their foundation or strength are not "impartial" within the meaning of the constitution, and no statement of theirs can make them so. Hence a statute attempting to qualify them upon their statement is unconstitutional.

[a] Since that practically makes the juror the judge of his own fitness. Coughlin v. People, 144 Ill. 140, 33 N. E. 1, 19 L. R. A. 57, distinguishing the constitutional Illinois statute from one in Tennessee found unconstitutional in Eason v. State, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 466. See also Stokes v. People, 53 N. Y. 164, 13 Am. Rep. 492, making the same distinction of the Tennessee statute and case. So in Jones v. People, 2 Colo. 351, the court calls attention to the fact that "the court is required to ascertain that jurors will determine the case impartially."

H. 488, 32 Atl. 831, which says, however, that the practice in New Hampshire and in most of the states is to excuse jurors who have heard about the case, "except on the rare occasions of difficulty in obtaining a jury." To same effect see State v. Howard, 17 N. H. 171.

[a] The very reason for drawing the jury "from the town, parish or hamlet nearest the place where the questions to be tried originated" was that they had a better and more certain knowledge of the facts. Waters v. State, 51 Md. 430.

[b] At common law the personal knowledge which a juryman had of the crime, he was supposed to use in determining his verdict. Therefore his facts should not be permitted to serve.³⁷ One who has formed no opinion is competent though he may have been told about the case.³⁸

Jurors who have merely read accounts in newspapers and say they have not formed or expressed any opinion are clearly not disqualified,³⁹ and the mere fact that juror has read newspaper accounts is not ground for challenge for cause.⁴⁰ So a juror is clearly competent who has knowledge was not ground for challenge. See People v. Mol, 137 Mich. 692, 100 N. W. 913, 68 L. R. A. 871. For an elaborate review of the common law rule that knowledge was a prerequisite rather than a disqualification, see State v. Sawtelle, 66 N. H. 488, 32 Atl. 831.

[c] Mere knowledge of a former verdict against defendant would not disqualify jurors. Arnwine v. State, 54 Tex. Crim. 213, 114 S. W. 796, 802; Moore v. State, 52 Tex. Crim. 336, 107 S. W. 540.

[d] Mere knowledge of facts of a former prosecution for a different crime would not disqualify, see Woodroe v. State, 50 Tex. Crim. 212, 96 S. W. 30.

[a] One who was at the scene of the killing, if not at the very time thereof, so soon thereafter as to become a witness to material facts, having located the wound in the body of deceased and being cognizant of the main salient features of the case, should not have been accepted as a juror. *Nelson v. [d] Where he heard the testimony on a preliminary examination before a magistrate he is not necessarily disqualified and should not be excluded where he says he formed no opinion that would influence him in the case. Wade v. State, 12 Tex. App. 358.

39. Palmer v. State, 121 Tenn. 465, 118 S. W. 1022.

[a] Not Proper To Require Juror To Read Article.—A juryman having said that he had not formed or expressed an opinion but that he was a subscriber to a certain paper and usually read it carefully, but did not recall having read about the matter being tried, it was proper to refuse to permit counsel to show him certain news items and editorials in said paper and ask him if he had read them. He clearly having no opinion it would have been idle to have him read an article to see whether he would form an opinion. Palmer v. State, 121 Tenn. 465, 118 S. W. 1022, distinguishing Ward v. State, 102 Tenn. 724, 52 S. W. 996, where the prisoner was held entitled to have exhibited to the venireman, and to examine him thereon, the very newspaper report which the venireman said he had read.

[a] Reasons for Rule.—(1) "If the rule were otherwise, in this day of intelligence, when nearly everybody read an account but does not even remember the name of the person killed, though he may have formed an opinion.⁴¹

d. Opinion Without Any Knowledge.—According to some cases there can be no disqualifying opinion, unless it is based upon knowledge or reliable information of facts,⁴² and that though a juror admits having expressed an opinion he is clearly competent where he has no bias or prejudice and knows nothing about the facts.⁴³ But generally a juror may be rendered incompetent or subject to challenge because of opinion, although it is not founded upon knowledge or reliable information, if it be such as to prevent him from acting impartially.⁴⁴

e. Necessity That Opinion Be Expressed.—At common law an opinion, formed but not expressed, did not disqualify,⁴⁵ and that is the rule laid down in some of the early cases.⁴⁶ But provided the opin-reads the newspapers, and if the reading of reports in the newspapers should disqualify one from acting as a juror, the courts would be able to get very few qualified jurors; and those qualified to serve would be generally the most ignorant in the community. West v. State, 79 Ga. 773, 4 S. E. 325. (2) As said by Field, C. J., in Com. v. Trefethen, 157 Mass. 180, 31 N. E. 961, "It is plainly impossible to exclude every juror who has read in the newspapers some statement of the case, because this might exclude every intelligent man in the county." See also Com. v. Webster, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 295, 52 Am. Dec. 711. (3) "In these days of newspaper enterprise and universal education, every case of public interest is almost, as a matter of necessity, brought to the attention of all the intelligent people in the vicinity, and scarcely any one can be found among those best fitted for jurors who has not read or heard of it." Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 25 L. ed. 244.

[a] Where Juror Could Not Recall Its Purport.—The mere formation of ion is of a disqualifying character,⁴⁷ or has been received from a disqualifying source,⁴⁸ other and later authorities hold the opinion itself is disqualifying though it has not been expressed,⁴⁹ some saying that it disqualifies per se,⁵⁰ others that it prima facie disqualifies the juror.⁵¹

f. *Time of Opinion.*⁵²—The inquiry must be directed to the present state of the juror's mind,⁵³ but where a jurymen has expressed his opinion so strongly as to show prejudice he should be excluded though he states he no longer has any resentment against defendant.⁵⁴

g. Subject Matter of the Opinion or Knowledge.—(I.) In General. Though an unqualified opinion usually involves both a belief in the facts and a conclusion drawn from them,⁵⁵ one is not necessarily disqualified merely because he may have an opinion, knowledge, or belief as to some of the matters involved in the case,⁵⁶ nor because he has an an unexpressed opinion, even the purport of which the juror could not recall at the time of trial is not disqualifying. People v. Murphy, 45 Cal. 137.

[a] It is not necessary to examine jurors as to what opinions they may have had prior to that time, when they disclose no present fixed opinion. Hawes v. State, 88 Ala. 37, 7 So. 302.

[b] Juror who has forgotten his opinion is competent. He said he had heard some talk about the case at the time the alleged offense was committed, and that he might have had some opinion about it at that time but did not recollect, and had no present opinion and was impartial. *Lyles v. [a] Juror knew defendant was a public official, and believed public moneys were missing. But had formed no fixed opinion as to whether defendant was guilty or innocent of the crime of embezzling public moneys as charged. State v. Spaulding, 24 Kan. 1.

[b] Mere knowledge that there is a local option law in force or that the juror knows there was an election the result of which was to suspend the general laws of the state as to selling liquor, does not disqualify. People v. Keefer, 97 Mich. 15, 56 N. W. 105.

[c] One who had heard only some of the circumstances; that the body of opinion upon or knowledge of a conceded fact,⁵⁷ as that the homicide was committed by accused,⁵⁸ or in a particular way,⁵⁹ or was the result of a certain controversy.⁶⁰ The opinion must be upon the merits of the case,⁶¹ or as to a material fact, or the issue to be tried,⁶² or the man that was killed was found in a river and that the prisoner was in some way connected with that circumstance, is not incompetent. Carroll v. State, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 315.

[d] Opinion as to Evidentiary Fact Consistent With Innocence.—A mere opinion that the defendant, who was charged with embezzling funds entrusted to him in his official capacity, had loaned money, the juror stating that he had no idea whether it was defendant's own money, or moneys of the city which he was so loaning, is not disqualifying. State v. Krug, 12 Wash. 288, 41 Pac. 126.

[e] Knowledge of facts tending to show guilt, though acquired in another trial involving some of the same circumstances, does not necessarily disqualify where the court is satisfied that the juror will be impartial. Howell v. State, 4 Ind. App. 148, 30 N. E. 714.

[a] Though a juror was on a grand jury that returned another indictment against accused he is not necessarily rendered incompetent though he has expressed an opinion that if the evidence in the case at bar is as strong as that before said grand jury he would convict him. The juror had not, however, formed any opinion as to defendant's guilt or innocence. Robinson v. Com., 104 Va. 888, 52 S. E. 690. As to guilt or innocence of accused, see infra, this section.

[a] Where a jury is being impaneled to try the special plea of former jeopardy, it is proper to refuse to interrogate the jurors as to their having formed or expressed opinions of the guilt or innocence of the prisoner; and to confine the inquiry to such expressions or opinions as to the issue then to be tried, and as to any personal bias, animosity, or ill or good will to the prisoner. Josephine v. State, 39 Miss. 613.

[b] The words "material fact" do not relate solely to those matters which are material in the sense that they must be proved as part of the crime. The idea is rather that it be a controverted fact or a fact over which the trial court can see there is likely to be controversy. No very exact rule can be laid down. But in the case at bar the mere fact that a juror had simply a knowledge of the identity of cattle alleged to have been stolen, and had an opinion that they had at one under some statutes must be as to the "main question involved" in the case.⁶³ In a criminal case the foundation of the disqualification is that the juror has formed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused,⁶⁴ and the investigation should be directed to that general question.⁶⁵ The disqualification does not depend upon whether the time belonged to the person alleged to have been the owner at the time of taking, does not make him incompetent. In determining the question the reviewing court considers not only the nature of the fact but whether the record shows it was controverted. State v. Martin, 28 Mo. 530.

[c] Jurors who have formed an opinion adverse to the validity of the title under which defendants in ejectment claim are incompetent to sit and should be excluded on defendant's challenge for cause. White v. Moses, 11 Cal. 68.

63. See supra, VII, F, 23, b.

[a] Determination as to What Is "Main Question."—Where it was impossible from the pleadings, or facts then before it, for the trial court to determine what are the main questions in the case, the challenger must, unless the other party will agree, prove by some competent evidence that the matter upon which the juror admits having a fixed opinion is in fact one of the main questions. In the case at bar from the whole of the juror's examination it appeared that his fixed opinion was not as to the matters in controversy. Weill v. Lucerne Min. Co., 11 Nev. 200.

64. People v. King, 27 Cal. 507, 87 Am. Dec. 95; People v. Reynolds, 16 Cal. 128; State v. Williams, 49 La. 1148, 22 So. 759.

[a] Challenger Must Always Show Bias Against Himself.—In neither civil or criminal cases can the challenge be allowed without some showing by the challenger that the bias is against him. So the juror having stated he had formed and expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner he should have been asked the direct question whether he had formed and expressed an opinion that the prisoner was guilty, or there is no error in overruling the prisoner's challenge. State v. Efler, 85 N. C. 585. See also State v. Benton, 19 N. C. 196.

[b] Form of Question.—The prisoner having asked the juror whether he had formed or expressed the opinion that the prisoners at the bar, or either of them was guilty of murder or manslaughter, there was no prejudicial error in the court's requiring the question to be put in its usual form whether either was guilty, explaining that the inquiry covered both murder and manslaughter. State v. Matthews, 80 N. C. 417.

[c] Error Cured by Similar Question Asked.—State v. Armstrong, 43 Ore. 207, 73 Pac. 1022.

[d] Distinction Between Belief as to Guilt and Belief That There Is Some Evidence of Guilt.—The juror having testified unequivocally that he never had heard of the case, and that he had no impression or opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the defendants, the court properly ruled that he was competent notwithstanding he said that the fact of an information having been filed led him to presume that there was some evidence of guilt. This is only presuming that the officers of the law have done their duty and have not filed an information without having some evidence supporting it. State v. Kinney, 45 Wash. 165, 87 Pac. 1123.

65. State v. Arnold, 12 Iowa 479 (it is not proper to question him upon a defense which may or may not be made and ask whether he has formed or expressed an opinion upon the subject of that defense); Leach v. State, 99 Tenn. 584, 42 S. W. 195.

[a] Impression That Defendant Connected With Crime Contrasted With Opinion of Guilt or Innocence.—That jurors have an impression that defendant was connected with the crime, and a feeling that unless it appeared from the evidence he was not so connected they would not be inclined to let him off, does not render them incompetent, where there is no showing of a formation or expression of such an opinion as to guilt or innocence as would prevent the rendition of a true verdict on the evidence. State v. Brown, 130 Iowa 57, 106 N. W. 379.

[b] In a prosecution for a seditious libel the juror could not be asked whether he had formed an opinion that opinion is favorable or unfavorable to the accused,⁶⁶ but it is reversible error to refuse to permit a juror to be asked whether his opinion is for or against defendant's innocence after he has admitted the formation of the opinion.⁶⁷

A declared opinion as to a matter of law does not render the juror incompetent.⁶⁸ Nor is it disqualifying that the juror has an opinion or impression that persons who commit crimes should be punished.⁶⁹

a certain book was libelous, but the question must be limited to whether the juror had formed an opinion as to the charge. United States v. Calender, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,709.

[c] Question May Be Stripped to Material Fact.—In a prosecution for keeping a house of assignation defendant's counsel having admitted the ownership of the house, it was proper to strip the question of everything immaterial and to ask the juror whether he had heard any statement concerning the character of the house by reason of which he had formed an opinion as to the character of such house as being a house of assignation. It was reversible error for the court to hold that the questions must be confined to opinions, from what the juror had heard, as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant. State v. Bresland, 59 Minn. 281, 61 N. W. 450.

[d] Questions Held Proper.—"What is your opinion now from what you have read as to the guilt or innocence of the defendant?" People v. Brown, 72 Cal. 390, 14 Pac. 90. "From the opinion you have formed in the case, and which you say is a qualified opinion, do you believe the defendant to be guilty, or do you believe her to be innocent?" People v. Abbott, 13 Mete. (Mass.) 120, it will be presumed he will follow the law as laid down by the court. It was sought to ask him whether he would consider the counsel's argument.

Opinion as to conceded fact, see supra, this section.

[a] Less Evidence of Malice Required Where Woman Killed by Man. A juror, otherwise unbiased, is competent though he admits he will require less evidence of malice if the evidence shows defendant killed a woman than if he had killed a man. The court says in effect that this is ered incompetent by his opinion as to the guilt or innocence of another person who has been tried for a crime growing out of the same transaction.⁷¹ The juror's belief that the prisoner is a bad man is not necessarily disqualifying.⁷²

(II.) As to Whether Crime Has Been Committed.⁷³ — That the juror believes a crime has been committed does not disqualify him.⁷⁴ On the other hand it is not necessarily disqualifying that the juror believes but the opinion of most men, growing out of the well known fact that a woman is weaker than a man and her weakness in comparison with his strength is an item of evidence having a material bearing upon the question of guilt, especially as it affects the defenses of justification, excuse, or mitigation. *People v. [b] Juror Had Read of Prisoner's Deportation.—Juror was not subject to challenge for implied bias though he had an impression that defendant was a bad man, gained from reading newspaper accounts of his having been deported by the vigilance committee, and believed that he would be more likely to commit a crime than a man about whom he had not heard such things, where he said he had no bias against the prisoner and he would endeavor to be governed by the evidence. People v. Mahoney, 18 Cal. 180.

[c] An expression of an opinion that defendant is a "tough citizen" is not evidence of the possession by the juror of an opinion that the defendant is guilty of the particular crime charged, where on voir dire he says he knows nothing of the facts and has no opinion as to the guilt or innocence of defendant. State v. Anderson, 14 Mont. 541, 37 Pac. 1.

[a] May Presume Crime Has Been Committed.—Where the law presumes innocence the jury must indulge the same presumptions, but where the law presumes that a crime has been committed, a juror is not incompetent for indulging a like presumption. State v. Ware, 58 Wash. 526, 109 Pac. 359.

[b] Though a juror has heard that poison had been found in the victim's stomach and believed that to be the fact, it would not necessarily disqualify him from serving on a jury to try defendant for administering the poison. He is competent where he has no impression as to the guilt or innocence of defendant though he may believe a crime has been committed. People v. Fogelson, 116 Mich. 556, 74 N. W. 730, characterizing as dictum so much of People v. Thacker, 108 Mich. 652, 66 N. W. 562, as seems to lay down a different rule.

[c] Belief That a Conspiracy Existed.—Where the prosecution was for murder of a prison guard during an attempt at prison break the court said "any man of sufficient intelligence to be a juror would, after reading in the newspapers of the break and escape, be of the opinion that there was some agreement or concert of action among the convicts engaged in the escape." Therefore a jurymen was competent though he said evidence would be required to remove his opinion of the existence of such a conspiracy, and that the killing was done while carry-the prisoner committed the act charged, where no opinion has been formed as to the criminality of the act under the circumstances.⁷⁵ A mere expression of just indignation on hearing of the crime does not disqualify.⁷⁶

h. *Character of Expression.*⁷⁷ — At the common law an opinion did not disqualify in a criminal case unless it indicated malice or prejudice against the accused.⁷⁸ And there is still authority for the proposition that a formed and declared opinion is not ground for challenge unless the expression was out of malice or ill-will towards the party.⁷⁹ Gen-

ing out the conspiracy, where his information came solely from newspapers and common rumors; he had no opinion as to the guilt or innocence of defendant nor as to whether defendant was engaged in the conspiracy; and he could and would, notwithstanding his opinion, act impartially and fairly in the case. People v. Murphy, 146 Cal. 502, 80 Pac. 709.

[d] A mere opinion that deceased had been unlawfully killed by some one, that a crime had been committed, which opinion would take evidence to remove does not disqualify jurors who have formed no opinion as to who had killed deceased. State v. Haworth, 24 Utah 398, 68 Pac. 155.

[e] An opinion that in killing deceased the defendant had committed a crime is not disqualifying, when founded solely on public rumor and statements in public journals, and, being subject to removal by evidence, it appears to the trial court that the juror will act impartially and fairly upon the evidence. People v. Sowell, 145 Cal. 292, 78 Pac. 717. See infra, VII, F, 23, j. (VII).

Where also conceded, see supra, this section.

76. State v. Perioux, 107 La. 601, 31 So. 1016, juror expressed no opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused.

77. Expressions indicative of feeling against the act rather than opinions of defendant's guilt, see supra, VII, F, 23, g.

78. United States v. Schneider, 10 Mack. (D. C.) 381; State v. Flower, Walk. (Miss.) 318. See Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 25 L. ed. 244. But see Boon v. State, 1 Ga. 618, malice is inferred from the declaration where the opinion remains fixed.

[a] Distinction Between Civil and Criminal Cases.—At common law not only must the opinion have been expressed, but it must appear that it was expressed from ill-will. This is the reason for the common-law rule that juror cannot be questioned as to his opinion in criminal cases, though he could be in civil cases. It tended to his dishonor in a criminal case. Boardman v. Wood, 3 Vt. 570.

[b] It was the malice or ill-will, rather than the opinion which was the ground of the challenge. State v. Sawtelle, 66 N. H. 488, 32 Atl. 831; State v. Howard, 17 N. H. 171.

L. 196, which says that was the common-law rule, from which the court is not disposed to depart. This case was approved in State v. Fox, 25 N. J. L. 566, and both are quoted from and approved in Moschell v. State, 53 N. J. L. 498, 22 Atl. 50. And see Clifford v. State, 61 N. J. L. 217, 39 Atl. 721; Mann v. Glover, 14 N. J. L. 195.

[a] "There should be found some other circumstances of relationship, partiality, prejudice, hostility or ill-will, acting at the same time upon the mind and giving it a bias, or the juror should be accepted." State v. Wilson, 38 Conn. 126. The court quotes with approval State v. Potter, 18 Conn. 166, wherein it was said that, under the principles laid down by Hawkins and other common-law writers, the expression of opinion formed even from a personal knowledge of the case, and not out of ill-will to the party, is no cause of challenge, and the opinion expressed must be such as to indicate hostility, or a want of indifference in the jury. See also State v. Allen, 46 Conn. 531.

erally, however, under modern statutes malice or ill-will is not material or essential, but the character or source of the opinion and its effect upon the ability of the juror to act impartially, are the only matters considered.⁸⁰ Where the rule is that an expressed opinion will not disqualify unless it was indicative of malice or ill-will, the expression itself does not establish malice or ill-will, under a principal challenge, nor bias or partiality, under a challenge to the favor.⁸¹

Where the challenge can only be for actual bias it has been held that there must be prejudice either with reference to the facts or the parties to the action.⁸² If the juror's opinion was formed out of corrupt motives, or through ill-will toward the defendant, it would of course render him incompetent no matter what ground it might rest upon,⁸³ but if the cause of ill-will has been removed since the expression of opinion the court may find the juror competent.⁸⁴

A mere statement of an opinion made for the purpose of keeping off the jury, does not disqualify.⁸⁵ And a mere casual declaration is not disqualifying where the juror's answers show that he had no fixed opinion.⁸⁶

i. Character of Opinion. — (I.) Fixed or Hypothetical. — The fixedness or strength of the existing opinion is the essential test of a juror's competency, and the court should look specially to such state of mind in passing upon the question of qualification.⁸⁷ The question is always [a] An opinion founded on malice or ill-will may not be within the terms of the act for malice and ill-will may be distinct grounds of challenge. Solander v. People, 2 Colo. 48.

[b] Where a juror has malice against the prisoner, growing out of his fixed opinion that prisoner stole from him, he is not an impartial juror even though he might be able to qualify as a juror by showing that his remark that prisoner was guilty of the crime charged and ought to be hung, was based merely on rumor. Riddle v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 401.

[b] The test of qualification is not merely the existence of a previously formed opinion but whether or not the mind of the juror is at the time of his examination free from bias and prejudice, and its capacity to act and render a verdict uninfluenced by such opinion. State v. Baker, 33 W. Va. 319, 10 S. E. 639; State v. Schnelle, 24 W. Va. 767.

[c] The rule is that an opinion fully made up and expressed is good ground one of degree.⁸⁸ At common law a juror who had a fixed opinion as to the merits of the cause was disqualified,⁸⁹ and under the statutes a juror who has such a fixed opinion that it will be controlling on him is disqualified.⁹⁰ The term used most frequently in the statutes is "unqualified,"⁹¹ which has been defined as being a "fixed, settled and abiding conviction" as to the guilt or innocence of defendant.⁹² Various terms are used in statutes and cases to define this same idea.⁹³ But in effect for principal challenge and as a matter of law the juror is excluded; but if the opinion is imperfectly formed, or hypothetical, the challenge is to the favor and the exclusion depends upon how the trier shall find the fact of indifference. State v. Collins, 70 N. C. 241, 16 Am. Rep. 771; State v. Benton, 19 N. C. 196.

[a] It is only when the juror has "such a fixed attitude of mind that it would control his actions in some appreciable degree when he assumes the new relation of a trier of the fact involved in litigation that such a mental state will disqualify him." State v. Humphrey, 63 Ore. 540, 128 Pac. 824. See also State v. Caseday, 58 Ore. 429, 115 Pac. 287; State v. McDaniel, 39 Ore. 161, 65 Pac. 520; State v. Tom, 8 Ore. 177. So in State v. Morse, 35 Ore. 462, 57 Pac. 631, a juror was competent where the examination "indicates that his opinion was not of a fixed and determined character, but was so unsubstantial that contradiction from any reliable source would be as readily accepted as true as the statements upon which such opinion was formed, and would remove any impression he then had."

[b] To state that defendant "was not justifiable" in killing deceased, and to couple that statement with a comparison of a certain other murder trial showed a "matured opinion," a conclusion to which the juror had come by deliberation, and the juror was incompetent. Jeffries v. State, 74 Miss. 675, 21 So. 526.

[c] "I have formed my opinion"—"I believe he ought to be hung," were said, in Brakefield v. State, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 215, to be "in the strongest terms of opinion, conviction and prejudice," and show a disqualifying opinion.

The rule is almost universally laid down by these words, or words of similar import." Kumli v. Southern Pac. Co., 21 Ore. 505, 28 Pac. 637.

[a] "Where the opinion is of such a character as partiality or prejudice may be inferred from it, then of course the person is not a qualified juror." Waters v. State, 51 Md. 430.

[b] The terms "unqualified opinion or belief" are used to define the nature of the opinion or belief and to distinguish between a hypothetical opinion or casual impression, and a decided fixed opinion. People v. Reynolds, 16 Cal. 128.

[c] The wording of the code provision "having an unqualified opinion or belief," means such a settled conviction founded upon a knowledge of the facts as would raise a strong presumption of partiality, but a hypothetical opinion, founded on hearsay or information, and unaccompanied with malice or ill-will, will not support a challenge for implied bias. Also, the additional words of the statute, "founded upon knowledge of its material facts, or of some of them," shows that there must be a distinction drawn between a fixed opinion formed after hearing what purported to be the facts and a mere impression formed upon rumor or hearsay evidence. That the juror has read or heard a statement of the facts does not of itself disqualify him. There must have been more than a suspicion or inclination of mind toward a conclusion; there must have been a conclusion reached. There must be both a belief in the facts and a conclusion from them. Haugen v. Chicago, M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 3 S. D. 394, 53 N. W. 769.

95. Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 25 L. ed. 244.

[a] "Opinion" and "Impression" Defined and Distinguished.—(1) An opinion is "a conclusion or judgment held with confidence, but falling short of positive knowledge." An impression is "a notion, remembrance, or belief, especially one that is somewhat indistinct or vague." Lindsay v. State, 69 Ohio St. 215, 69 N. E. 126. (2) In State v. Taylor, 134 Mo. 109, 35 S. W. 92, the court, distinguishing between impressions and opinions, says in effect that the average juror frequently means the former, when he says he has the latter.

[b] No challenge lies for actual bias where the evidence shows an "impression" entirely founded on public rumor and statements in public journals, and that juror can and will act that if the opinion is only hypothetical, the partiality is not so manifest as to necessarily result in the exclusion of the juror.⁹⁶ Where an opinion is based upon the hypothesis that certain facts exist but the truth thereof is still an open matter in the juror's mind his opinion is only hypothetical and he is competent.⁹⁷ Despite the statutes, if the impartially and fairly. People v. Nunley, 142 Cal. 441, 76 Pac. 45. See also People v. Collins, 105 Cal. 504, 39 Pac. 16; People v. Brown, 59 Cal. 345.

[c] If the whole examination shows that the juror has only an impression and not a fixed opinion he is not subject to challenge for implied bias. People v. Symonds, 22 Cal. 348; People v. McCauley, 1 Cal. 379.

[d] A mere impression gained from reading a newspaper account would not disqualify even before the statute. O'Brien v. People, 36 N. Y. 276, 3 Abb. Pr. (N. S.) 368; Sanchez v. People, 22 N. Y. 147. See infra, VII, F, 23, j, (VII).

[e] It must be such an opinion as would be likely to bias or prevent a candid judgment upon a full hearing of the evidence. State v. Pike, 49 N. H. 399, 6 Am. Rep. 533.

[f] Jurors having only vague, indefinite or "floating impressions" may properly be found competent. State v. Carey, 15 Wash. 549, 46 Pac. 1050; State v. Krug, 12 Wash. 288, 41 Pac. 126; State v. Murphy, 9 Wash. 204, 37 Pac. 420; Rose v. State, 2 Wash. 310, 26 Pac. 264.

[a] "The settled rule is that if, upon the whole examination, it appears that the opinion is decided or substantial, the juror is incompetent. On the other hand, if the opinion is merely hypothetical, or so slight that it will, in all probability, yield to the evidence, especially if he says he believes he can give the prisoner a fair trial, he is competent; and the court must determine upon the particular circumstances of each case, whether the opinion be decided or substantial, or hypothetical merely." *Hall v. [c] Terms Used To Express.—A "conditional," "hypothetical," "contingent," "indeterminate," "floating," "indefinite," "uncertain" opinion will not render juror incompetent. Kumli v. Southern Pac. Co., 21 Ore. 505, 28 Pac. 637.

[a] Opinion Conditioned on Truth of What Had Heard.—A juror was properly held competent who was not acquainted with defendants nor deceased, nor with any person in the neighborhood where the homicide occurred. He had heard some reports of the inquest and some statements about confessions attributed to defendants. He had a decision, conditioned on the truth of what he had heard, but no juror retain a fixed opinion he is disqualified, because he is not then indifferent,⁹⁸ and he is not necessarily competent to act because his opinion is merely hypothetical if in connection with other circumstances it appears that he will not be impartial.⁹⁹

fixed opinions and could give a fair and impartial consideration to the evidence, including that bearing on whether the confessions were freely and voluntarily made. He also stated that he would take the law from the court and render a verdict after fairly weighing the evidence and without prejudice. State v. Humphrey, 63 Ore. 540, 128 Pac. 824.

[b] Opinion Dependent on Correctness of Report.—Though jurors have read newspaper reports of a preliminary examination of defendant, which purport to give the evidence thereat, they are not incompetent where such opinions as they have, or may have expressed are dependent upon the correctness of the report, and their minds are not so biased that they cannot return a verdict based solely on the evidence adduced at the trial. State v. Meyer, 58 Vt. 457, 3 Atl. 195.

[c] One who qualifies his statement (1) as to his opinion by saying in effect that his opinion is fixed, only if what he has heard is true, has not, in fact, a fixed opinion (Leigh v. Territory, 10 Ariz. 129, 85 Pac. 948); (2) as where the opinion was preceded by the remark "if that were so." Mercer v. State, 17 Ga. 146. (3) A statement that defendant "ought to be hung if he did that," shows that his opinion was based on a hypothetical case, and hence is not disqualifying. Ellis v. State, 92 Tenn. 85, 20 S. W. 500. (4) So where a juror said "from what he had heard" or "from what he had found out," defendant ought to be hung or imprisoned for life, there is nothing in these expressions to indicate that his opinion was founded on any statement made by any witness or anyone who had talked with a witness. Johnson v. State, 11 Lea (Tenn.) 47. See also Mann v. State, 3 Head (Tenn.) 373.

[d] Whatever the source of the information, if there is no conviction of mind, an opinion unmixd with prejudice, which is wholly contingent upon the truth or falsity of the information, and would yield readily to testimony, is no disqualification. State v. Morrison, 64 Kan. 669, 68 Pac. 48.

[e] If he has no opinion or conviction as to the information he has, he is impartial within the meaning of the constitution. Palmer v. State, 42 Ohio St. 596.

[f] One who says he has heard a story and believed "there was something in it;" "believed it like other reports," obviously had an opinion or belief which was likely to be changed by the statements of the next person he might meet and was not an "unqualified opinion or belief." People v. O'Loughlin, 3 Utah 133, 1 Pac. 653.

People*, 4 Neb. 68, where it is suggested that the statute by its terms "evidently applies to cases where the opinion is merely hypothetical, and excludes all cases where there is bias or a decided opinion."

Juror's statement of impartiality does not qualify him if his opinion is in fact fixed, see infra, VII, F, 23, k, (I).

Sources of information are not important if opinion is in fact fixed, see infra, VII, F, 23, j, (I).

99. See cases infra, this note.

[a] Though the statute (1) makes the expression of an unqualified opinion bias in law, a much less decided opinion, if expressed, may be sufficient in connection with other circumstances to render him incompetent for actual bias. People v. Reynolds, 16 Cal. 128. (2) An opinion less than one which is "unqualified" may be sufficient of itself, or in connection with other proof, to exclude a juror if it appear that the opinion will prevent him from acting with entire impartiality. Brady v. Territory, 7 Ariz. 12, 60 Pac. 698.

which requires evidence to remove,¹ that fact alone being considered sufficient to show that his opinion is fixed,² as where he says he cannot lay aside his fixed opinion until he has heard evidence enough to remove it.³ If at the time of his examination his opinion is fixed, he is clearly incompetent though he says he might change it on evidence,⁴

1. Shane v. Butte Elect. Ry. Co., 37 Mont. 599, 97 Pac. 958.

[a] Jurors who testify on their voir dire (1) that they have formed such an opinion as to the guilt of the defendant as would require evidence to remove should be excused on challenge. Scribner v. State, 3 Okla. Crim. 601, 108 Pac. 422, 35 L. R. A. (N. S.) 985. (2) Such a juror is properly excused. Marion v. State, 20 Neb. 233, 29 N. W. 911, 57 Am. Rep. 825.

[b] Prior to the enactment of the statute, a juror was not impartial who either from hearing the evidence, conversing with witnesses, or from rumor only had formed an opinion which it would require evidence to remove. Green v. State, 72 Miss. 522, 17 So. 381; Logan v. State, 50 Miss. 269; Alfred v. State, 37 Miss. 296; Sam v. State, 13 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 189.

[a] Where the juror discloses that his so-called "impression" is of such a nature that it will require evidence to change or remove it, his opinion is fixed and he is not an impartial juror. People v. Shufelt, 61 Mich. 237, 28 N. W. 79; People v. Barker, 60 Mich. 277, 27 N. W. 539, 1 Am. St. Rep. 501; Stephens v. People, 38 Mich. 739.

[b] One is incompetent who says he has "no doubt" as to the correctness of his opinion and would continue to entertain the same until it should be removed by evidence. State v. Miller, 29 Kan. 43.

[c] So one was incompetent who said he had no opinion, but also said that in order to be acquitted the defendant must prove himself innocent, and that he had such an abhorrence of the offense charged, it would accord with his feelings to convict unless the evidence satisfied his mind that the accused was innocent. State v. Vogan, 56 Kan. 61, 42 Pac. 352.

[d] If a juror has an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of a defendant, so far fixed that evidence would be required to remove it, he is disqualified, notwithstanding that he can, or believes he can, disregard such opinion and try the case according to the law and evidence as given on the trial. State v. Riley, 36 Wash. 441, 78 Pac. 1001, distinguishing the following cases: State v. Croney, 31 Wash. 122, 71 Pac. 783; State v. Farris, 26 Wash. 205, 66 Pac. 412; State v. Boyce, 24 Wash. 514, 64 Pac. 719; State v. Royse, 24 Wash. 440, 64 Pac. 742. See also State v. Stentz, 30 Wash. 134, 70 Pac. 241, 63 L. R. A. 807; *State v. [e] The state's challenge to a juror was properly allowed where he stated he had formed an opinion regarding the merits of the case, and that it would require evidence to remove that opinion, and that he had advised with the defendant, and had told the prosecuting attorney that it was against the interests of the prosecutrix to have the case prosecuted. State v. Neel, 23 Utah 541, 65 Pac. 494.

[f] Taken in Connection With His Knowledge, etc.—Challenge should have been sustained where a juror stated he had formed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of defendant, which would require evidence to remove, "when taken in connection with his acquaintance with the deceased, his presence at the home of the deceased, his visit to the spot where the tragedy occurred, his remaining at the hotel where (defendant) was boarding, his intimate knowledge of so many of the facts and of the condition of the minds of those" who thought defendant guilty. Wilson v. State, 87 Neb. 638, 128 N. W. 38.

3. Com. v. Sushinskie, 242 Pa. 406, 89 Atl. 564. Compare Com. v. Nye, 240 Pa. 359, 87 Atl. 585; Curley v. Com., 84 Pa. 151.

4. People v. Johnston, 46 Cal. 78; State v. Crofford, 121 Iowa 395, 96 N. W. 889, where a juror was held incompetent who said he believed what he had heard and read, that his mind or though the opinion is based upon a source which is ordinarily not such as to make the opinion disqualifying." So a juror has been held incompetent where it would take "pretty strong evidence," or "strong and clear evidence" to remove his opinion,⁶ or where it would yield only to evidence "materially different,"⁷ or where he said it would take "conclusive evidence."⁸ On the other hand, it is frequently held that the mere fact that the juror will carry his opinion into the jury box, and that it will take some evidence to remove it, is not necessarily disqualifying,⁹ on the theory that a man's mind does not change without was made up, and that it would take evidence to change it.

[a] Long Standing Opinion Frequently Expressed.—Juror who had formed an opinion that the prisoner was guilty when he first heard of the case, which opinion had remained with him for two years, and which he had frequently expressed in discussing the case with others, was incompetent where he admitted evidence differing from what he had heard would have to be introduced to remove his opinion, although he said he could lay the opinion aside. Rothschild v. State, 7 Tex. App. 519.

As to present existence of opinion, see supra, VII, F, 23, f.

5. Eason v. State, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 466.

[a] Even where the opinion is based on rumor and the juror says he can try the case impartially he is incompetent where he says he has an opinion which will take evidence to remove. People v. Gehr, 8 Cal. 359, under former statute. See also People v. Suesser, 132 Cal. 631, 64 Pac. 1095.

[b] Juror had talked with one who while not himself a witness was telling the facts which he had learned from witnesses, and from this conversation juror formed an opinion which he still entertained. He said it would take proof to remove the opinion, but the opinion would not have any weight with him in making his verdict, if the proof were sufficient. He was incompetent. Mahon v. State, 127 Tenn. 535, 156 S. W. 458.

As to what sources of information are disqualifying, see infra, VII, F, 23, j.

some cause, such as evidence.¹⁰ This is particularly true where the opinion is one based upon hearsay rumors and reports or newspapers, and the juror indicates that he will be governed by the evidence,¹¹ or English v. State, 31 Fla. 340, 356, 12 So. 689.

[d] Juror Not Conscious of Bias or Prejudice.—Where the juror says he has formed or expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused which it would take evidence to remove, but also declares that he is not conscious of any bias or prejudice and would decide the case according to the evidence, uninfluenced by such opinion, the court does not commit any error of law in holding him competent. State v. Hayes, 69 S. C. 295, 48 S. E. 251; State v. Williamson, 65 S. C. 242, 43 S. E. 671.

Core*, 70 Mo. 491.

[f] Vague Impression.—A juror is competent though he says he has heard something of the matter, and that it would require some testimony to remove his impression, which was, however, "vague," and that he had no bias or prejudice, nor had he talked with the parties nor with anyone who pretended to know the facts. *Estes v. [a] "In belief, as in the material world, changes do not occur without reason. Opinions are not formed or abandoned without cause. If all the residents of the county (being otherwise competent) whose opinion of this case could only be changed by evidence were excluded from the jury, the defendant could not be tried." The question was not whether they "could change their minds without cause, but whether they could and would disregard the information they had received and the opinions they had formed concerning the case, and render a verdict on nothing but the evidence given them during the trial." State v. Sawtelle, 66 N. H. 488, 32 Atl. 831. "If one has an opinion, speaking in the abstract, undoubtedly it would require evidence to remove it." Carter v. Territory, 3 Wyo. 193, 18 Pac. 750, 19 Pac. 443.

[b] One who merely reads a newspaper must receive some impression therefrom and that impression is not sufficient of itself to disqualify the juror even though he says that some evidence would be required to remove it. State v. Croney, 31 Wash. 122, 71 Pac. 783; State v. Gile, 8 Wash. 12, 35 Pac. 417.

[c] Juror who had an impression made by reading newspapers but said it would yield to evidence; that he could give prisoner a fair trial and that the partial opinion he had formed would not influence him; that he had no prejudice against prisoner and would not be willing to act on what he had

where the opinion "will yield readily" to the evidence.¹² So it has been held that an opinion does not necessarily disqualify the juror even though he says he will retain it if the evidence corresponds to the facts as he has heard them,¹³ and though he would require "strong," or "very strong" or "strong enough" evidence to remove the opinion,¹⁴ or where he refused to differentiate between "considerable" and "some" evidence.¹⁵ But still other cases, while holding to the rule read, was competent. Hall v. Com., 89 Va. 171, 15 S. E. 517.

[d] In Tennessee.—There is some conflict in the early cases. In Palmer v. State, 121 Tenn. 465, 118 S. W. 1022, the court says the modern doctrine begins with the cases of Conatser v. State, 12 Lea 436, and Spence v. State, 15 Lea 539. Without attempting to reconcile this early conflict the court reviews at length the Spence case; Woods v. State, 99 Tenn. 182, 41 S. W. 811; Leach v. State, 99 Tenn. 584, 42 S. W. 195; State v. Robinson, 106 Tenn. 204, 61 S. W. 65; Turner v. State, 111 Tenn. 593, 69 S. W. 774; and Wilson v. State, 109 Tenn. 167, 70 S. W. 57, and concludes that jurors whose opinions are based on mere rumors, though it would require evidence to remove are competent where they say they can give a fair and impartial verdict on the law and evidence.

12. Fla.—Denham v. State, 22 Fla. 664. La.—State v. Ford, 42 La. Ann. 255. Ore.—Kumli v. Southern Pac. Co., 21 Ore. 505, 28 Pac. 637, "it is now generally considered that if the juror's opinion will readily yield to the evidence presented in the case, he is not incompetent to sit upon the trial of the issue."

[a] Juror who states his opinion is not fixed; that it would yield readily to testimony; that he would decide solely on the sworn testimony; and that he did not think the opinion he had formed would have any effect upon him, but that he would give defendant a fair and impartial trial was competent. Brown v. State, 40 Fla. 459, 25 So. 63.

[b] Juror is competent who has not conversed with witnesses, but has formed and expressed an opinion from rumor and who states that his opinion would yield readily to evidence, though he would rather not go in the box having heard what he had. Andrews v. State, 21 Fla. 598.

13. Carson v. State, 50 Ala. 134; State v. Williams, 3 Stew. (Ala.) 454. See also Olive v. State, 34 Fla. 203, 15 So. 925, where the juror's statements clearly showed a willingness to follow the evidence.

14. State v. Frier, 45 La. Ann. 1434, 14 So. 296, following State v. Garig, 43 La. Ann. 365, 8 So. 934, where he said his opinion "would yield readily to evidence, provided he believed the testimony offered to counteract such opinion." And in State v. Hugel, 27 La. Ann. 375, a juror was found competent though he said it would require "strong evidence" to remove his impression and that he "does not consider weak evidence as evidence, but strong evidence he considers evidence."

[a] Newspaper Reports Requiring Evidence Stronger Than He Had Read. Though one has read in the newspapers accounts of the evidence at a former trial, from which he has formed what he called a decided opinion, to remove which it would require evidence stronger than that which he had read, he was competent where he said he felt it was his duty as a juror to discard his former opinion and that he could and would do so. State v. Baker, 33 W. Va. 319, 10 S. E. 639.

15. State v. Coleman, 27 La. Ann. 691.

[a] Juror Willing To Submit Own Case to Juror of Like Mind.—Juror was properly held competent who said he did not know any of the parties concerned; he had read of the case and discussed it with people as to the extent of whose knowledge of the facts he had no knowledge; had formed an opinion, but did not know that he had ever expressed it. He said it would take considerable evidence to remove his opinion but that if he were on the same trial, he would be willing to have one sit on the jury who was in the same frame of mind that he then was. He would give the defendant the presumption of innocence and try him that some evidence may be required, consider the juror incompetent if it will take strong evidence to remove his opinion.¹⁶

j. Source of Opinion.¹⁷ — (I.) In General. — If the opinion be in fact fixed, the source from which it was derived is of no importance; the juror is disqualified,¹⁸ on the other hand an opinion which is not fixed may leave the juror qualified despite its source.¹⁹ In other words it is the nature of the opinion and not merely the sources of the information which determines the qualification,²⁰ though some cases and impartially on the evidence adduced, disregarding the reports he had heard if different from the evidence, and laying aside his opinion. State v. Me-gorden, 49 Ore. 259, 88 Pac. 306, distinguishing State v. Miller, 46 Ore. 485, 81 Pac. 363.

16. Fugate v. State, 82 Miss. 189, 33 So. 942.

[a] "Light Impressions" and "Strong Impressions" Distinguished. Light impressions which may fairly be supposed to yield to the testimony that may be offered and which leave the mind open to a fair consideration of that testimony do not disqualify; but those strong and deep impressions which will close the mind against the testimony that may be offered in opposition to them, and which will resist or combat that testimony constitute a sufficient objection to the juror. White-head v. State, 97 Miss. 537, 52 So. 259; Gammons v. State, 85 Miss. 103, 37 So. 609; Fugate v. State, 82 Miss. 189, 33 So. 942.

[a] Source Immaterial if Opinion Fixed. — In Coughlin v. People, 144 Ill. 140, 33 N. E. 1, 19 L. R. A. 57, after an exhaustive review of all the Illinois cases, the court says, "taking them all together, it is plain that the rule in this state, except so far as it is modified by the statute, is perfectly well settled that, if a juror has made up a decided opinion upon the merits of the case, either from personal knowledge of the facts, or from the statements of witnesses, or from the relations of the parties, or from either of them, or from rumor, and that opinion is positive and not hypothetical, and is such as will probably prevent

[b] Under the statute the source of the information is unimportant if the opinion be fixed or "unqualified." The juror is incompetent. Leigh v. Territory, 10 Ariz. 129, 85 Pac. 948.

[e] Juror Who Will Not Presume Defendant Innocent. — A juror is incompetent who says that he cannot after what he has read "presume" the defendants to be innocent but only the "possibility" of their being so, though the source of his information was only newspaper accounts. Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1, 7 N. W. 444.

19. See supra, VII, F, 23, i, (I).

[a] An opinion no matter how formed, or upon what it may be based, that is not fixed and may be changed by the evidence, and will not bias the verdict, is not disqualifying. Beason v. State, 72 Ala. 191.

20. State v. Riley, 36 Wash. 441, 78

statutes practically make opinions received from certain sources disqualifying.²¹ If the opinion be a "qualified" one it then becomes necessary for the court to determine not only the strength of the opinion but the sources thereof.²² The courts are not agreed as to the knowledge upon which the opinion must rest in order to render the juror incompetent.²³ Under those statutes which name sources from which the opinion must originate, there can be no inquiry into his ability to lay aside his opinion and act impartially unless the opinion was founded upon some one or more of the sources stated,²⁴ and that it was so founded must affirmatively appear,²⁵ but where the juror's opinion is based on a non-disqualifying statutory source, he is not made incompetent by the fact that he supposes there is some other evidence.²⁶

(II.) Juror's Own Knowledge.²⁷ — Opinion based on juror's own knowledge is not necessarily disqualifying, according to some cases,²⁸ but

Stat., §2101, sub. div. 2) and concludes that the former discretionary power to determine the competency of the juror despite the sources of his information has been taken away. See also Dugle v. State, 100 Ind. 259. (2) But where the source of the information is not one of those mentioned in the statute the court's discretion as to whether the juror is competent remains the same, and its decision will not be disturbed unless the discretion be abused. Woods v.

[a] Juror is properly excluded on the challenge of prosecutor, where he says that he has formed and still has an opinion that the defendant is not guilty, which opinion is not based on public rumor, common notoriety nor statements of newspapers and would require considerable evidence to change, though he also says he will try to act impartially and thinks he can do so. *People v. other courts hold that it is,²⁹ and some statutes so provide.³⁰ Also personal knowledge of matters which are vital issues in the case may render one incompetent whose opinion is based on that knowledge.³¹

(III.) Conversations With Parties or Persons Interested. — Though the juror's opinion be based on statements made to him by a party he may still be found competent,³² but one who has heard a statement of a case from a party and believes it to be true must necessarily have an "unqualified opinion" according to some cases,³³ and it has also been held that jurors should be excluded who talked with persons directly interested though not actual parties.³⁴

(IV.) Rumor or Hearsay and Source Having Knowledge Distinguished.³⁵ If the opinion and expression thereof arises from hearsay as distinguished from a source purporting to speak from a knowledge of the facts, it is not alone disqualifying,³⁶ and a distinction has sometimes

33. Ruff v. Rader, 2 Mont. 211.

[a] A juror was properly rejected on the state's challenge, where he had talked with the defendant on the morning of the trial, about the case and who said he had to some extent formed an opinion but not from what the defendant had told him, and that their talk would not influence his verdict. Both jurymen and defendant were guilty of misconduct in holding the conversation. State v. Smith, 124 Iowa 334, 100 N. W. 40.

34. People v. Wells, 100 Cal. 227, 34 Pac. 718, it does not, however, support the inference that the opinion was upon common rumor or newspaper report.

[a] Talking With Members of Deceased's Family. — In Walsingham v. State, 61 Fla. 67, 56 So. 195, in a murder case reversal was had for the overruling of defendant's challenge for cause (after defendant's peremptories were exhausted) to a juror, based on his expressed opinion. The juror had talked with members of the deceased's family and on his direct examination, asked if he had "a fixed opinion," answered affirmatively. But on cross-examination, and on examination by the court stated he would decide on the testimony given before him. On his direct examination he also stated he had no bias or prejudice and would give defendant a fair trial.

[c] Must Be Witnesses to Gravamen of Offense.—This "peremptory disqualification" applies only to conversations with witnesses to the transaction constituting the gravamen of the offense, and not to opinions based upon conversations with witnesses to some merely incidental or collateral matter connected with the trial. Walker v. State, 102 Ind. 502, 1 N. E. 856.

witnesses themselves, or by others who have heard the witnesses relate the facts.⁴³ But under some statutes the mere fact that one has talked with a witness does not necessarily disqualify him,⁴⁴ even though they were eye witnesses of the act charged as a crime, if the juror's opinion did not become fixed thereby.⁴⁵ If the juror believes the statements as to the case made to him by persons who know or claim to know the facts, he is thereby disqualified,⁴⁶ and one whose opinion remained fixed after talking with a witness is incompetent though he did not know the person he talked with was a witness.⁴⁷

(V.) Former Trial of Same Case.⁴⁸ — The mere fact that the juror has heard of former trials and that the juries disagreed, does not disqualify him,⁴⁹ nor does the fact that he has heard some of the testimony on a former trial.⁵⁰ But under some statutes a juror whose opinion was deputy sheriff and formed his opinion from talking with the sheriff and other deputies and witnesses in the case was said to have "formed his opinion from original sources" and was hence incompetent. Keaton v. State, 40 Tex. Crim. 139, 49 S. W. 90.

[a] Witnesses Whom He Would "Likely Believe."—Though a juror had expressed an opinion after talking with persons about the case, and says he "would likely believe" what he had previously heard "if repeated by witnesses that I believe," he is competent where he says he will try the case fairly and without prejudice or bias and notwithstanding his previous opinion. *State v. [a] Effect on Juror's Mind as Controlling.—The mere circumstance that the persons with whom the juror talked were, or were not, witnesses would be immaterial, if the juror's opinion be not founded wholly or in part, on what such persons said. If he understood them to have only such information as he himself has obtained from his reading, their conversation amounts to public rumor so far as he is concerned. On the other hand a narration, even of pure fiction, by one whom the juror believed and who told the juror that he saw the crime committed and knew whereof he spoke, might make such a deep impression upon the juror's mind as to conduce to the formation of a strong opinion. People v. Loper, 159 Cal. 6, 112 Pac. 720, Ann. Cas. 1912B, 1193.

(VI.) Trial of Another Case.—A juror is not necessarily disqualified though he has read or heard all the evidence given on the trial of another for the same offense,⁵² or though he has expressed an opinion on evidence heard in another case and says he would convict defendant if the evidence is as strong as in the other case.⁵³ But if he has an unqualified opinion as to the main fact in issue, based on such evidence, he may be incompetent,⁵⁴ and a juror was held properly excluded whose

Both brothers were charged with being accessories before the fact, of the same principal. The court says it is "inconceivable that he could have been regarded as competent."

[b] One who had served as a juror in another case growing out of the same condemnation proceedings, was not competent although he declared he had no opinion as to the amount of damages sustained by this particular plaintiff, and that his opinion as to whether plaintiff was damaged at all was "only as a juror in the other

Nor did the statement by the juror that he could lay it aside and decide the case impartially remove the disqualification. But in many cases a hypothetical opinion or an impression derived from mere rumor or reading newspaper accounts, made the juror subject only to challenge to the favor, leaving the question of indifference one of fact for the triers. *Balbo v. Effect of juror's statement as to his ability to try case impartially, see infra, VII, F, 23, k.

[a] Under the statute if he has merely read newspaper reports, or heard rumors and his impression formed thereon will not interfere with his rendering a fair and impartial verdict upon the evidence and law of the case he is competent. *Bridges v. [a] Where a juror's conceptions are not fixed and settled, or warped by prejudice, but are only such as would naturally spring from rumor or newspaper report, and his mind is open to the impressions it may receive at the trial, so as to be convinced by the law and testimony, he is competent. O'Connor v. State, 9 Fla. 215, approved in Montague v. State, 17 Fla. 662, and Olive v. State, 34 Fla. 203, 15 So. 925.

[b] If the juror discloses that he is biased or prejudiced, or has a fixed and settled opinion as to the guilt or innocence of accused, the source of his information is of no importance and he is incompetent though he makes the statutory declaration of impartiality on his oath. Lucas v. State, 75 Neb. 11, 105 N. W. 976; Basye v. State, 45 Neb. 261, 63 N. W. 811. See supra, VII, F, 23, j, (I).

[c] Bias or Prejudice Taking Evidence To Remove.—Challenge should be sustained where the juror discloses a bias or prejudice either for or against the defendant and which it would take evidence to remove, though he says he can try impartially. Owens v. State, 32 Neb. 167, 49 N. W. 226; Miller v. State, 29 Neb. 437, 45 N. W. 451; Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1, 7 N. W. 444. See supra, VII, F, 23, i, (II).

[d] Opinion Not Fixed and No Malice or Ill-Will.—One who has heard common reports and has expressed opinions, which are not fixed and which do not show malice, ill-will or interest is not incompetent. State v. Howard, 17 N. H. 171.

[a] In State v. Cunningham, 100 Mo. 382, 12 S. W. 376, the court says of a juror, "His notions of the case were nothing more than such as any one would form from reading a newspaper report, and it is but common information that such reports have little or no influence upon a fair-minded man when he is called upon to determine the fact in the light of evidence given under oath. If such a juror is to be rejected it must be because he is an intelligent, honest, fair-minded man, and not because he has any opinion which would in the least sway his mind from an impartial consideration of the evidence." And in State v. Wilson, 85 Mo. 134, it was said to be rather "indicative of outspoken ingenuousness," than of prejudice or bias, that the juror stated in effect that the reading of the newspaper account made him "naturally suppose the defendant guilty."

[b] "The man who does not read and think and form opinions regarding such crimes as murders committed in his locality is better fitted to have lived in the Dark Ages than to serve on juries in the twentieth century." State v. Williams, 28 Nev. 395, 82 Pac. 353.

[c] Jurors Without Impression Desirable But Impossible.—"A broad-minded intelligent citizen who has never acquired any impression either directly or indirectly about the issue to be tried would be an ideal juror; but in these days, when the means of communication through the press and otherwise is so extensive among the people, it would be impracticable to attain to this high standard for jurors." State

v. Humphrey, 63 Ore. 540, 128 Pac. 824.

[d] Everyone receives impressions "which do not reach the dignity of opinions" and "If such impressions should be held to conclusively disqualify a juror the obstacles to securing jurors would, in this age of newspapers, be well nigh insuperable." Lindsey v. State, 69 Ohio St. 215, 69 N. E. 126.

[e] "Intelligent men take newspaper accounts as current news liable to qualification, explanation, or contradiction, and, when qualified, explained, or contradicted, they change their opinions or belief accordingly as a matter of course." Gentry v. State, 11 Okla. Crim. 355, 146 Pac. 719.

[f] The reason underlying the statute is that it would be impossible to administer justice if an opinion formed merely from reading newspaper accounts or hearing "the average neighborhood discussion" of the matter, of itself disqualified a juror. State v. Caseday, 58 Ore. 429, 115 Pac. 287.

See infra, VII, F, 23, k.

[a] Bias of Mind Controls.—The opinion which disqualifies must be an opinion upon the case, and not upon rumors and newspaper reports in regard to the truth of which the juror has no established belief either way. The information from newspapers or other sources may be so detailed, full and complete that the juror should be held disqualified where he has formed or expressed an opinion thereon. But is the bias of mind based upon substantial facts which the juror believes, and not the mere transitory opinion, that disqualifies. State v. Meaker, 54 Vt. 112, reviewing and distinguishing so far as they may seem to the contrary, State v. Hayden, 51 Vt. 296; State v.

impressions even where the juror says he does not know whether he could give the parties justice but supposes he could.⁶⁴

(VIII.) Evidence Reported in Papers.—Evidence, or what purports to be evidence, printed in a public newspaper is a "statement in a public journal" within the meaning of the statute, and one may be competent whose information is derived therefrom,⁶⁵ and the rule has been held to apply to a published report of the alleged confession of an accused,⁶⁶ or his accomplice.⁶⁷ But under some statutes a distinction is made between reading newspaper accounts, and newspaper reports of the transactions constituting the crime,⁶⁸ or between reading newspaper accounts and newspaper reports of the testimony taken at a former trial,⁶⁹ and some cases hold that there is no difference between hearing testimony delivered orally in a case, and reading the same testimony taken down and accurately published in some newspaper,⁷⁰

Phair, 48 Vt. 366; State v. Clark, 42 Vt. 629; Boardman v. Wood, 3 Vt. 570; State v. Godfrey, Brayt. (Vt.) 170. The same rule applies in both civil and criminal cases. State v. Meaker, 54 Vt. 112.

[b] Caution as to Extent of Rule. "While we remember this, we should not be unmindful of other important considerations, two of which are, that amid all this rapidity of thought and its transmission the constitution remains the same, and so does the mind of man. We can lay aside our opinions, our prejudices and our convictions with no more ease and certainty than our forefathers could one hundred years ago;" and the constitution still guarantees trial by an impartial jury. Rothschild v. McGonegal, 136 N. Y. 62, 32 N. E. 616, distinguishing Greenfield v. People, 74 N. Y. 277, 6 Abb. N. he made the statement.

See supra, VII, F, 23, j, (IV).

[a] If the juror has read newspaper accounts of what purports to be the statements of eye witnesses, believes the statement to be true, and has an opinion that the defendant is guilty, his examination shows a fixed belief or settled conviction, and he should be excluded notwithstanding his statement that he can try the case fairly, laying aside his opinion. *Turner v. 69. Flege v. State, 93 Neb. 610, 142 N. W. 276, 47 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1106, it appearing that the jurors have read in newspapers the reports of the testimony of witnesses taken at a former trial, they are wholly incompetent and the court had no discretion but its duty was to sustain the challenge. See McHugh v. State, 42 Ohio St. 154 (distinguishing McHugh v. State, 38 Ohio St. 153); Frazier v. State, 23 Ohio St. 551; *Cooper v. [a] Reports of Evidence Before Coroner's Jury.—One who has read the

a distinction being then drawn between reading or hearing extracts or partial reports of the testimony, and reading or hearing substantially all of it,⁷¹ and even conceding that the report as published was verbatim, the juror is not incompetent unless it appears he has read all of it.⁷² If what the juror hears or reads does not connect the defendant with the crime charged he is competent.⁷³ One has been held competent who remembered the opinion he had formed on reading the evidence of a former trial, but did not remember the evidence.⁷⁴

k. Oath or Statements of Juror as Affecting Competency.
(I.) In General. — If an opinion be such as necessarily disqualifies, no further inquiry is permissible as to whether the juror can lay aside that opinion and be guided by the evidence alone.⁷⁵ The statutes frequently provide that the juror's statement be considered.⁷⁶ They do not deny the principle that the jury must be free from bias which may influence their judgment.⁷⁷ They do not change the juror's essential qualifications, but only furnish a test by which those qualifications may be determined.⁷⁸ The statement must go directly to the question of opinion, and does not cure actual bias growing out of some collateral matter.⁷⁹ The statutes do not make the juror's statement conclusive of his impartiality,⁸⁰ and where jurors have fixed and unqualified report of the evidence taken before the coroner whether as written down by that official, or as published in the newspapers is incompetent. State v. Culler, 82 Mo. 623.

W. 733, as being cases where the juror had read all the testimony in preliminary proceedings or had been present at a former trial and heard the witnesses detail their evidence under oath); State v. Riddle, 179 Mo. 287, 78 S. W. 606. And see State v. Hunt, 141 Mo. 626, 43 S. W. 389, which similarly distinguishes State v. Culler, 82 Mo. 623, and State v. Taylor, 134 Mo. 109, 35 S. W. 92. 80. People v. McGonegal, 136 N. Y. 62, 32 N. E. 616.

[b] It is harmless error that the court deemed it his imperative duty to declare the juror competent on his statement that he could try fairly; if examination shows he was competent, opinions the mere fact that they have been led to say they will deal fairly and justly does not make them competent,⁸¹ nor can a juror be qualified by being led to say his opinion is based on rumor when in fact it is not,⁸² and while the declaration of the juror is to be considered it is not controlling,⁸³ for it is the duty of the court and not of the juror to determine his impartiality.⁸⁴ At the same time the court is justified in basing its holding that the juror is competent on the juror's statements alone, there being nothing else to show either the nature or character of the opinion.⁸⁵

The weight to be given the juror's declaration, and how far it shall have the effect of relieving him from the disqualification arising from his opinion is for the court to determine from all the facts and circumstances,⁸⁶ and the court may consider the juror's conduct, demeanor under the statute. Territory v. Bryson, 9 Mont. 32, 22 Pac. 147.

and bearing in court in determining whether he is qualified to serve, in view of his answers to the questions propounded,⁸⁷ and not merely upon the particular wording of the juror's statement,⁸⁸ nor upon his answer to one question,⁸⁹ especially where he explained subsequently take into consideration not only the juror's answers but all the other circumstances and the juror's demeanor. So it was proper to consider the fact that the juror had at first denied having made any statement, and it was not until the time, place, and person had been named that he recalled the conversation. Though that conversation was not of itself perhaps sufficient to disqualify, the juror's apparent unwillingness to mention it was a suspicious circumstance which the court might consider. Mason v. State, 15 Tex. App. 534.

[b] A juror whose whole examination shows that he has only an impression or qualified opinion, which he could disregard and which he did not believe would influence him, and which he had received from reading newspapers and talking with his neighbors, is competent. *State v. [b] No Fixed Rule Can Be Laid Down.—The trial judge is clothed with a large discretion and much must depend on the character of the juror as disclosed by his bearing, his relation to the parties, and many other things impossible to specify. Haugen v. Chicago,

M. & St. P. Ry. Co., 3 S. D. 394, 53 N. W. 769.

[c] The Intangible Elements of Personality.—“The court should take into consideration the demeanor of the proposed juror; his answers as indicating candor or a desire to evade the question or conceal the truth; the impression or opinion which has been formed or expressed; the extent of knowledge of the facts of the case; the sources from which the information came; and from these, and from the many intangible yet potent elements which constitute personality, decide upon the existence of bias or animus either for or against the accused.” *Gammans v. [a] Applying the rule that the whole examination should be considered, the mere fact that a juror by one answer to a question said his impression would be “a right hard thing to that he did not clearly comprehend the questions.⁹⁰ So no matter how positive the juror's declaration that he can try fairly, the court is to determine from the whole examination considering the source of information and determining its strength from all the circumstances,⁹¹ and it is not prejudicial error to refuse to take a juror after he has made the statement that he can be impartial.⁹² On the other hand the fact that selected portions of the juror's answers show that he has formed and expressed an opinion as to material facts, does not necessarily disqualify him if the whole examination shows him to be impartial,⁹³ nor does the fact that he says his opinion is fixed, control the get over," was not sufficient to make the juror incompetent. Hall v. Com., 89 Va. 171, 15 S. E. 517.

90. State v. Humphrey, 63 Ore. 540, 128 Pac. 824, questions were hypothetical.

91. United States v. Schneider, 10 Mack. (D. C.) 381.

[b] If he really has a fixed opinion, even (1) though based on rumor he is not competent to consider the evidence pro and con, or to make an unbiased application of the law, even though he thinks he can do so. Jackson v. State, 77 Ala. 18. See supra, VII, F, 23, i; VII, F, 23, j, (I). (2) A strong impression or opinion of a fixed or abiding character, based on information derived from witnesses or from those acquainted with the facts and deemed reliable, will disqualify although the juror himself may think and state that he can fairly try the case. State v. Morrison, 64 Kan. 669, 68 Pac. 48; State v. Otto, 61 Kan. 58, 58 Pac. 995. See supra, VII, F, 23, j, (I).

[c] Statement of juror that he can readily render a verdict according to the evidence will not alone render him competent, if it otherwise appears that his formed opinion is of such a fixed and settled nature as not readily to yield to the evidence. Olive v. State, 34 Fla. 203, 15 So. 925; Andrews v. State, 21 Fla. 598. See also Washington v. Com., 86 Va. 405, 10 S. E. 419; Dejarnette v. Com., 75 Va. 867; *Armistead v. [d] If from any cause the juror has such an opinion as will preclude a fair trial he is disqualified without regard to the causes enumerated in the statute. Scribner v. State, 3 Okla. Crim. 601, 108 Pac. 422, 35 L. R. A. (N. 93. State v. Roberts, 95 Kan. 280, 147 Pac. 828 (although they had read about the trial and conviction of the principal defendant and expressed an opinion as to his guilt); State v. Daugherty, 63 Kan. 473, 65 Pac. 695; State v. Bussey, 58 Kan. 679, 50 Pac. 891; State v. Lowe, 56 Kan. 594, 44 Pac. 20; State v. Bane, 1 Kan. App. 537, 42 Pac. 376.

[a] Though Juror Admits Prejudice. Even where one admits that what he has read and reports he has heard have prejudiced him against defendant, he may be held competent where from his whole examination it appears that he has heard no witness speak about the case and that he has no acquaintance with defendant, nor relationship with any witness and would try the case fairly on the evidence adduced. State v. Vickers, 209 Mo. 12, 106 S. W. 999.

[b] Burden on Defendant To Change Opinion.—A juror was properly held competent who said in effect that the "burden would be on defendant to change his opinion," where it appeared that all he knew was gained from newspaper reports, that he had not court where his whole examination shows that his opinion is not fixed within the rule,⁹⁴ particularly where his answer is given in response to a question suggesting the language used,⁹⁵ or where the answers to talked with any witness, and that he was entirely free to be governed by the evidence. State v. Brennan, 164 Mo. 487, 65 S. W. 325.

94. Ala.—Crickland v. State, 151 Ala. 31, 44 So. 90; Jarvis v. State, 138 Ala. 17, 34 So. 1025; Ragsdale v. State, 134 Ala. 24, 32 So. 674; Long v. State, 86 Ala. 36, 5 So. 443; Bales v. State, 63 Ala. 30, rule applied where juror said, "I can't help believing what I have heard." La.—State v. McGee, 36 La. Ann. 206, stating that in so far as State v. Ricks, 32 La. Ann. 1098, may seem to lay down a different rule it has been overruled by later cases. Ore.—State v. Ingram, 23 Ore. 434, 31 Pac. 1049. Pa.—Com. v. Eagan, 190 Pa. 10, 42 Atl. 374, the mere fact that a jurymen said he had a "fixed" opinion, and said, "I think I can," when asked if he could overcome it, does not render him incompetent. See also Curley v. Com., 84 Pa. 151.

[a] Though a juror in answer to a final direct question said he had "a fixed, unqualified, opinion," there was no error in permitting him to serve where from his entire testimony it clearly appeared his opinion was not of that character. Leigh v. Territory, 10 Ariz. 129, 85 Pac. 948.

[b] Juror who said he had an opinion "to a certain extent," and expressed an apprehension that he would go on the jury with a biased opinion, was competent where he said he could lay his opinion aside and decide solely on the evidence. His opinion was formed from newspaper reports. Long v. State, 86 Ala. 36, 5 So. 443.

[c] The mere fact that the juror may call his opinion a "decided opinion" does not necessarily disqualify him where it is clear that from the sources of his information his opinion is but hypothetical. Maile v. Com., 9 Leigh (36 Va.) 661.

95. Smith v. Com., 100 Ky. 133, 37 S. W. 586 (the answer was "sufficiently modified and restricted by the response given to the inquiry made by the court"); State v. Sykes, 191 Mo. 62, 89 S. W. 851.

expressions as that it would require "a good deal of evidence," or "pretty solid testimony" to overcome his opinion "must be read in the light of the examination then being prosecuted by the defendant's attorney, which was calculated to lead them to such an assertion." State v. Armstrong, 43 Ore. 207, 73 Pac. 1022. (2) So though in one part of his testimony the juror said, "No; I do not think I would," in answer to an inquiry as to whether he felt he would be a fair juror, he was not necessarily incompetent, and the court properly considered the source of his information, as well as his subsequent answers. State v. Savage, 36 Ore. 191, 60 Pac. 610, 61 Pac. 1128. (3) And though a juror answered affirmatively the question whether his opinion "was not a decided and pretty substantial one," the court found him competent, taking particular notice of the fact that his whole information was based on rumor. Wormeley v. Com., 10 Gratt. (51 Va.) 658.

[b] It is not to be determined from a mere "catch question" (1) which makes him say he has prejudice and bias which would take evidence to remove, when his whole examination shows he was referring to newspaper reports and that he had no bias at all. State v. Cunningham, 100 Mo. 382, 12 S. W. 376. (2) See also State v. Taylor, 134 Mo. 109, 35 S. W. 92, where the court says the trial court properly took into consideration, in determining the juror's competency, that the answers "were replies to adroitly put and complicated questions, which could scarcely be correctly answered by a simple negative or a simple affirmation."

[c] Reason for Rule.—"The shrewd lawyer . . . invariably puts the question as to the forming of an opinion, and the juror, having perhaps in reality but a casual impression respecting the case, is quite certain to dignify his state of mind by the adoption of the term used by the lawyer and call it an opinion." Lindsey v. State, 69 Ohio St. 215, 69 N. E. 126.

(II.) Positive Statements of Partiality.⁹⁷ — If a juror is conscious of his inability to render a verdict without being influenced by his previous impressions or opinions he should be excluded.⁹⁸ The fact that the juror says he has an opinion is not conclusive,⁹⁹ nor that he says he has "a belief" as to the merits of the case.¹ The mere fact that the juror states he would be influenced by his opinion does not necessarily require his rejection.²

(III.) Equivocal Statement of Impartiality. — Though it is said that the statement of impartiality must be made substantially in the form pre-is the voluntary information given by a juror which tests his suitability, rather than answers that are elicited by adroit and confusing questions." State v. Royse, 24 Wash. 440, 64 Pac. 742. See also State v. Straub, 16 Wash. 111, 47 Pac. 227.

97. That decision is based on whole examination and not on isolated answers, see supra, VII, F, 23, k, (I).

98. Lohman v. People, 1 N. Y. 379, 49 Am. Dec. 340, "although a man may think himself impartial when he is not, he cannot be a competent juror if conscious of an inability to render a verdict without being influenced by previous impressions."

[a] Juror in Sympathy With Accused.—State v. Punshon, 133 Mo. 44, 34 S. W. 25.

[b] A juror who states frankly that he cannot give the defendant the same fair trial that he could have given if he had not heard of the case is incompetent and should have been excused on defendant's challenge. Scribner v. State, 3 Okla. Crim. 601, 108 Pac. 422, 35 L. R. A. (N. S.) 985.

[b] The juror had formed what he called an opinion against the defendant which it would require some testimony to remove, but which was not against him unless he was one of the gang which committed the crime, and was based in part upon the fact that he was indicted with the others. Juror had heard and read about the trials of such others, but had not talked with any witness, or person claiming to be acquainted with the facts, nor had he read what purported to be the testimony of any witness. He stated that he could lay aside the fact that defendant was indicted, if instructed so to do, and that notwithstanding any bias, opinion or prejudice he could render an impartial verdict according to the law and evidence. The supreme court refused to say the trial court's ruling that the juror was competent was an abuse of its discretion. Lindsey v. State, 69 Ohio St. 215, 69 N. E. 126.

2. Minich v. People, 8 Colo. 440, 9 Pac. 4.

[a] That juror said he did not think he would make a fair juror may be attributed to his desire to evade jury duty by exaggeration. State v. Savage, 36 Ore. 191, 60 Pac. 610, 61 Pac. 1128. See also O'Mara v. Com., 75 Pa. 424, "the tendency is to exaggerate their opinions, to escape serving in capital cases."

scribed by the statute,³ and that the whole statement taken together must show an unequivocal declaration that the juror has an absolute belief that his opinion will not influence his verdict,⁴ some courts hold that the mere fact that the juror may be in doubt as to whether his opinion will affect his verdict does not disqualify him, if the trial court is satisfied of his impartiality from his whole examination,⁵ and

[a] Where there is hesitancy and doubt on the part of the juror and he will not say positively that he could try the case as though he had no opinion, he is not competent. Fugate v. State, 82 Miss. 189, 33 So. 942; McGuire v. State, 76 Miss. 504, 25 So. 495; Mabry v. State, 71 Miss. 716, 14 So. 267.

[b] Juror does not show doubt who says he has been thinking since he was called whether he can try impartially or not, and has concluded that he can, his further answers showing that he would try on the law and evidence uninfluenced by impressions. State v. Kellogg, 104 La. 580, 29 So. 285.

[c] Expressions Held Equivocal. (1) "I couldn't go into that jury box with that evidence on the stand and change my opinion from what I heard there." If that evidence was produced on the stand it would take pretty strong evidence to overcome it. The juror had heard detailed what purported to be all the facts by two persons from the town where the crime was committed. Morehead v. State (Okla.), 151 Pac. 1183. (2) A mere answer on direct examination, "Notwithstanding that opinion I could render a fair and impartial verdict upon the evidence as it shall be offered in this case" is not sufficient. Nor was it sufficient that the following questions and answers were put by the judge and answered by the juror, "Q. Could you, in this case, divest yourself of any opinion you entertain and render a fair and impartial verdict upon the evidence brought out on the trial here? A. I think I could. Q. Could you do it? A. Yes, sir." People v. Flaherty, 162 N. Y. 532, 57 N. E. 73. (3) Juror is properly excluded on state's challenge who says it is "very doubtful" whether he can give accused a fair and impartial trial. State v. Brooks, 92 Mo. 542, 5 S. W. 257, 330. (4) "I think I can." Miller v. State, 29 Neb. 437, 45 N. W. 451. See also Neb.—Curry v. State, 4 Neb. 545. S. C.—State v. Haines, 36 S. C. 504, 15 S. E. 555. W. Va.—State v. Johnson, 49 W. Va. 684, 39 S. E. 665. See also State v. Hatfield, 48 W. Va. 561, 37 S. E. 626.

[d] The fact that the juror is in doubt as to whether the opinion he has formed would yield to the testimony to be adduced on the trial, is sufficient to disqualify him, though he says he can give the prisoner a fair trial. Dejarnette v. Com., 75 Va. 867.

5. Territory v. Robello, 20 Hawaii 7.

[a] If the court from all his an-

the mere fact that the juror gives contradictory answers concerning his opinion does not necessarily disqualify him.⁶ Some cases say that the reviewing court will not interfere with the trial court's determination merely because some of the juror's answers seem inconsistent or incoherent,⁷ for in such case, in some jurisdictions, the complaining party should have the matter made more clear by a further examination,⁸ or there exists, by virtue of the conflicting statements of the juror, a conflict in the evidence which forbids review.⁹

1. Determination.—(I.) In General.—The result of the statutes is to make the question of the juror's competency as affected by his opinion, one of fact,¹⁰ or, as sometimes stated, it is a mixed one of law and fact.¹¹ The question is to be determined from all the facts and swers and all the evidence and circumstances is entirely satisfied that he would discharge his duties impartially. State v. Munchrath, 78 Iowa 268, 43 N. W. 211.

[b] That a juror cannot accurately define the word "qualified" as applied to his opinion, does not prove that he was not a proper juror. People v. Brown, 48 Cal. 253.

[c] In the absence of a statutory rule mere lack of positiveness does not disqualify. The court may rightly have concluded that this was "a mistrust of himself, proceeding from a sensitive conscience which would be his best equipment for the service required of him. United States v. Schneider, 10 Mack. (D. C.) 381.

[a] It is the province of the trial court to settle the contradictions and to determine upon the testimony whether the juror had disqualifying opinions and whether he was free from bias, prejudice, or interest. State v. Pearce, 87 Kan. 457, 124 Pac. 814, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 358.

[b] Distinction Between Challenge to Favor and for Principal Cause. Question as to formation of impression was proper under the old practice when challenge was to the favor but not if it was for principal cause. People v. Honeyman, 3 Denio (N. [d] The extent to which the court will go in the examination is a matter which rests in its discretion. Error cannot be predicated upon its rejection of a juror without examination into the sources on which the juror's opinion was based. Zimmerman v. State, 56 Md. 536.

[e] Under the Texas statute (1) reading "the juror shall first be asked whether, in his opinion, the conclusions so established will influence his verdict. If he answers in the affirmative he shall be discharged, if he answers in the negative he shall be further examined," etc., when the juror answers the first question affirmatively no further questioning is permitted and he must be discharged. *Shannon v. (2) Where jurors have admitted the forming or expressing of opinions it is sometimes necessary to examine into the details thereof; but when they emphatically deny that they have formed any conclusion the better practice is to cut off further inquiry. Arnold v. State, 38 Tex. Crim. 5, 40 S. W. 735. (3) But the court is not only not interdicted from asking questions, but the statute provides that he may ask questions to the end that the jurors may be fairly and intelligently interrogated as to their qualifications. King v. State (Tex. Crim.), 64 S. W. 245.

and they may be asked whether they have either formed or expressed an opinion,¹⁵ except in so far as under the practice of the particular jurisdiction this might tend to disgrace the juror.¹⁶ The juror may be questioned as to his opinion, even to an extent which would not be material on a challenge for cause, for the purpose of determining as to peremptories.¹⁷ Failure to permit a question which would disclose the source of information on which the juror had formed his opinion is clearly harmless where the court excused the juror because he had

15. Trout v. Williams, 29 Ind. 18, the rule as to the effect to be given to an expressed opinion does not go so far as to exclude the question.

16. State v. Madoil, 12 Fla. 151, the court says the matter was formerly much in doubt. (Citing common law and early United States cases.)

Questions as to matters going to dishonor or discredit of juror, see supra, VII, E, 4, i, (III), (C).

[a] Asking About Opinion as Tending To Disgrace.—In State v. Spencer, 21 N. J. L. 196, the court followed the common-law rule that the juror could not be asked whether he had formed or expressed an opinion, since that was no ground of challenge unless expressed in a manner evincing malice or ill-will and it would compel him to convict himself of disreputable conduct to answer. See also Clifford v. State, 61 N. J. L. 217, 39 Atl. 721; Moschell v. State, 53 N. J. L. 498, 22 Atl. 50; State v. Fox, 25 N. J. L. 566; State v. Zellers, 7 N. J. L. 220.

[b] Different Rule Where Malice and Ill-Will Rule Not Recognized. The mere formation of an opinion and the expression thereof is not "dishonor or disgrace" in a jurisdiction which does not hold to the malice and ill-will rule. People v. Christie, 2 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 256, 2 Park. Crim. 579. See also Pike County v. Griffin & W. P. Plank Road Co., 15 Ga. 39; Copenhagen v. State, 14 Ga. 22.

[c] The rule never applied to civil cases, and is changed by statute in this state, as to criminal cases. Maize v. Sewell, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 447.

[d] For a discussion at length of the reasons for holding that the juror could not be asked as to his opinion, see State v. Baldwin, 3 Brev. (S. C.) 309, 1 Treadw. Const. 289, followed in State v. Sims, 2 Bailey (S. C.) 29; State v. Crank, 2 Bailey (S. C.) 66, 23 Am. Dec. 117.

[e] The prisoner could not on voir dire ask whether the juror had formed or expressed an opinion. This was the rule prior to the adoption of the statute requiring the judge, on motion of either party, to examine along that line. The theory of the old rule was that the prisoner's peremptory challenges were a sufficient protection. State v. Coleman, 20 S. C. 441, citing State v. Baldwin, 1 Treadw. Const. (S. C.) 289, 3 Brev. 309; State v. Sims, 2 Bailey (S. C.) 29.

17. Basve v. State, 45 Neb. 261, 63 N. W. 811; Com. v. Grauman, 52 Pa. Super. 215. See generally as to examination in aid of exercise of peremptory challenges, supra, VII, E, 5, m, (I).

[a] Conceding the immateriality of answers to question as to the juror's opinion as to whether a burglary had been committed, which opinion was gained from being present part of the time while a co-indictee was being tried and hearing some of the evidence, the defendant was entitled to propound the questions for the purpose of determining his peremptory challenges. State v. King, 174 Mo. 647, 74 S. W. 627.

[b] Question Directed to Isolated Feature of Case.—"Have you any belief now as to whether (deceased) was killed or not," being directed to an isolated feature of the case, would tend only remotely to lay a foundation for a challenge for cause; but was a proper question as being possibly of value in exercising peremptory. Eyttinge v. Territory, 12 Ariz. 131, 100 Pac. 443.

[c] The juror having said that he had formed no opinion and that what he had heard was rumor, it was reversible error to refuse to permit counsel to interrogate him as to whether he had not conversed much about the case. Heath v. Com., 1 Rob. (40 Va.) 735.

formed and expressed an opinion,¹⁸ and it is harmless to refuse a question which could not have resulted in the juror's exclusion no matter how it was answered.¹⁹

(II.) Presumptions and Burden of Proof. — According to some cases as soon as it appears that the juror has formed or expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner, he is incompetent and the burden then shifts upon the party seeking to retain him to show that the opinion is not of a disqualifying nature,²⁰ but other cases hold that the challenging party must establish the disqualifying nature of the opinion.²¹ The question is to be determined by a preponderance of the testimony,²² but in all doubtful cases the better practice is for the court to resolve the doubt against the juror's ability to discard his opinion and to exclude him.²³

18. Martin v. Mitchell, 28 Ga. 382, this was on the assumption that the question was proper which the court doubts. It is suggested that the excused juror's opinion may have been adverse to appellant.

19. Gillespie v. State, 92 Md. 171, 48 Atl. 32.

20. Meyer v. State, 19 Ark. 156, after challenge by prisoner for cause, and the existence of the opinion is shown, the state must prove that the opinion is based on rumor, and that it is not such as to bias or prejudice the juror's mind.

[a] If the record simply shows that an opinion has been formed as to a material fact, and there is nothing to show that it was hypothetical, conditional, indefinite, or uncertain, it was reversible error not to allow the challenge. State v. Brown, 15 Kan. 400.

[b] That the juror says he supposes he has an opinion does not disqualify him where he does not say it was definite and fixed, or would require evidence to remove it; and no further questions are asked him that might have disclosed a state of mind rendering him incompetent. Tisdale v. State, 120 Ark. 470, 179 S. W. 650, citing McElvain v. State, 101 Ark. 443, 450, 142 S. W. 840; Collins v. State, 102 Ark. 180, 143 S. W. 1075; Jackson v. State, 103 Ark. 21, 145 S. W. 559; Hamer v. State, 104 Ark. 606, 150 S. W. 142.

436. See also Shields v. State, 149 Ind. 395, 49 N. E. 351.

[a] No Error Where Matter Should Have Been Further Investigated.—The juror said that he did not think himself impartial; his sympathies were with the prisoner but his prejudices were against him; it cannot be determined whether he was a competent juror or not. So no error can be predicated upon failure to excuse him for cause. The matter "should have been more thoroughly probed," but the prisoner having peremptorily challenged cannot complain. Johns v. State, 55 Md. 350.

22. State v. Miller, 46 Ore. 485, 81 Pac. 363, it is not like the consideration of a motion for nonsuit which requires that the case should not be taken from the jury if there is any evidence, inference or presumption reasonably tending to support plaintiff's theory.

23. People v. Ryan, 152 Cal. 364, 92 Pac. 853; People v. Ruef, 14 Cal. App. 576, 114 Pac. 48, 54; State v. Church, 6 S. D. 89, 60 N. W. 143. Compare supra, VII, F, 23, k, (III).

[b] The practical difficulty of determining the exact state of mind of the juror is so great, many jurors being unable to distinguish between their own qualified and unqualified opinion, and the court having before it the metaphysical inquiry as to whether the mind is merely impressed, and to what degree impressed, with the truth or falsity of a given proposition; the only safe rule is to reject the juror in every doubtful case. People v. Brotherton, 43 Cal. 530.

(III.) Conclusiveness of Ruling.—The decision of the question on the facts is one for the discretion of the trial court.²⁴ It is however a sound legal discretion which can be reviewed and the finding is not conclusive,²⁵ except that the rule that a challenge to the favor will not be reviewed²⁶ has been strictly applied in some cases.²⁷ Great weight is accorded to the opinion of the court before whom the veniremen are examined and questioned.²⁸ The usual holding is that the finding of the trial court is conclusive and not subject to review, except in case of gross abuse of discretion,²⁹ or a positive violation of

Where it appeared that the juror had both read an account of the case in a newspaper, and had received from the father of deceased a narrative of the circumstances of the homicide, and had at one time formed an opinion as to the guilt of the principal as whose accessory defendant was being tried; the supreme court said, "to admit him as a juror was an extreme application of the discretion permitted by the statute; yet, standing by itself, it is not such an abuse of that discretion as to warrant a reversal of the judgment on that ground alone." *Goins v. there be any evidence to support it,³⁴ and cannot be reversed unless there be manifest or palpable error.³⁵ Concealment of material facts has led to reversal of the judgment even after motion for new trial had been denied.³⁶

G. SPECIAL OR STRUCK JURY.—1. In General.—Historically, special juries date back to the earliest period of the common law.³⁷ Such a jury was one selected in a particular way by the parties.³⁸ At question of fact, "we could hardly justify ourselves in reversing the decision." State v. Church, 6 S. D. 89, 60 N. W. 143.

[b] The writ of error coram nobis cannot be invoked for the purpose of revoking the judgment by showing that jurors had formed or expressed opinions unfavorable to defendant. Fugate v. State, 85 Miss. 94, 37 So. 554, 107 Am. St. Rep. 268.

Overacker*, 20 Cal. App. 67, 127 Pac. 1059; People v. Maughs, 8 Cal. App. 107, 96 Pac. 407; People v. Collins, 6 Cal. App. 492, 92 Pac. 513.

[b] Applied as to Juror Near Border Line.—A juror having no personal knowledge of the facts nor acquaintance with the persons involved, who has formed an opinion from newspaper reports which it would take evidence to remove, and who is afraid he could not give the testimony the same weight as he could if he had not formed that opinion, but says he has no prejudice or bias and will lay aside his opinion and try the defendant solely on the evidence, is "very near if not upon the border line," but is not as a matter of law incompetent, and having been decided by the trial court to be competent, the supreme court will not reverse that finding of fact as being contrary to the evidence. Baker v. State, 88 Wis. 140, 59 N. W. 570.

[c] If the juror denies having formed or expressed any opinion, and this be controverted, it is for the trial court to determine after weighing all the evidence just as any other controverted fact, and will not be disturbed except in a case plainly erroneous. The trial court may reconcile the conflict. Holloway v. State, 53 Ind. 554; Clem v. State, 33 Ind. 418; Bradford v. State, 15 Ind. 347.

[a] So long as the power entrusted to the trial judge is fairly exercised his findings will not be disturbed, and the supreme court will intervene only in cases of palpable error, where injustice has been done or there is evident abuse of discretion. Gammons v. State, 85 Miss. 103, 37 So. 609.

36. Sheppie v. State, 79 Miss. 740, 31 So. 416; Jeffries v. State, 74 Miss. 675, 21 So. 526.

[a] But where there was no concealment on the juror's part, and he fairly and fully answered stating that he had formed and expressed an opinion, but defendant did not challenge him for cause, the supreme court refused to disturb the court's finding especially after a denial of a motion for a new trial heard on conflicting affidavits and statements. Schrader v. State, 84 Miss. 593, 36 So. 385.

The terms "struck jury" and "special jury" are used interchangeably by the courts;⁴² and statutes now provide for what is usually called a "struck jury," but which is in some respects the same as a common law "special jury."⁴³ At common law special or struck juries are allowed only in the discretion of the court,⁴⁴ but by statute they are sometimes demandable as a matter of right.⁴⁵ Where the allowance of such a jury is discretionary, the discretion is not arbitrary but a sound judicial discretion which is reviewable;⁴⁶ but there will be no

reversal for refusal to allow one where no injustice appears.⁴⁷ Generally the jury is not granted where an ordinary jury would do as well,⁴⁸ but only in cases of special difficulty or consequence.⁴⁹ The jury will be refused where the difficulty or intricacy arises out of a question of law and not of fact.⁵⁰ Under some statutes struck juries are allowed only in civil cases,⁵¹ but under others, the jury may be permitted in criminal as well as in civil cases,⁵² but is then sometimes confined to prosecutions for offenses not amounting to felonies.⁵³

2. Qualifications.⁵⁴ — At common law special or struck jurors were always selected from the freeholder's book;⁵⁵ but except where it is re-as discretionary a statute reading "any court, in a case where a jury is required, may allow a special jury."

47. Atlantic & D. R. Co. v. Peake, 87 Va. 130, 12 S. E. 348, even though the court might think a special jury ought to have been allowed.

48. Ives v. Ranger, 65 Hun 622, 20 N. Y. Supp. 32, 47 N. Y. St. 390; Walsh v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Robt. (N. Y.) 646, 17 Abb. Pr. 356, collecting many cases.

[a] It is clearly proper to refuse to grant the motion for a special jury where a fair and impartial trial will be more likely to be obtained with an ordinary jury. Nesmith v. Atlantic Ins. Co., 8 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 423, where in there had been a mistrial for misbehavior of one jury, a second jury has disagreed, but the court says that each juror's partiality can be discovered and he be excluded therefor.

[a] In New York under a statute permitting a struck jury when it appears to the court that the importance or intricacy of the case demands it, the jury is granted only in extreme cases. People v. McGuire, 43 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 67; Walsh v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 2 Rob. 646, 17 Abb. Pr. 356.

[b] Mere interest of the public is not sufficient. People v. McGuire, 43 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 67, approving and following Patchin v. Sands, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 570; Poucher v. Livingston, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 296, and Hartshorn v. Gelston, 3 Caines (N. Y.) 84, where it was suggested that the United States was interested.

[c] Mere difficulty of establishing the case to the satisfaction of an ordinary jury is not ground for a special jury. "With the aid of learned counsel, the ability of skillful witnesses, and a charge from a learned judge technical terms if employed by witnesses, can be made appreciable to the common understanding." Walsh v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 356, 2 Rob. 646.

quired for regular jurors,⁵⁶ the freehold requirement is not necessary in the case of a special or struck jury.⁵⁷ It is clear that they must have all the qualifications required of regular jurors.⁵⁸

3. Selection, Striking, etc.—The list of special or struck jurors is not usually made up by lot as in the case of ordinary juries, but the jurors are selected with reference to their supposed special fitness, by some officer designated by the statute, or by the court.⁵⁹ Who shall be selected is thus a matter of discretion in the court or officer making the selection;⁶⁰ but under some statutes, the list is merely drawn from the regular panels.⁶¹ The statutes sometimes provide for the selection to be in the presence of the parties or their attorneys,⁶² and failure so to do is ground for reversal.⁶³ If the person designated by the statute be disqualified to act, the court may select some other suitable person;⁶⁴ but it has been held that the proper officer's deputy cannot act merely because the officer is absent.⁶⁵ The number to be selected is fixed by local statutes.⁶⁶ If a sufficient number of talesmen do not appear the practice is to call talesmen to fill the panel,⁶⁷ as in ordinary

II. DISPOSING OF EXCESS JURORS.—Where because of the failure of either party to use all his strikes or peremptories, more than the full number necessary for a jury remain, some statutes require that the twelve be chosen by lot;⁸⁵ others that the first twelve drawn shall serve,⁸⁶ others that the court or some officer shall strike off the number in excess of the number required for the jury,⁸⁷ or that the opposite party may so strike.⁸⁸

84. Pool v. Gramling, 88 Ga. 653, 16 S. E. 52.

[a] Where the fact that the juror was on the list under a wrong name, was discovered as soon as the jury was completed, and the court thereupon offered to permit the juror to be stricken from the list, and the name of the last juror stricken from the list substituted, defendant waives the irregularity by refusing to consent to such substitution. *Mackey v. [b] Substantial Error To Take Others.—It is substantial error calling for a reversal for the court over defendant's objection to take other than the first twelve. [b] Formation or expression of opinion. Full Number Not Presented.—Though the better practice is to present a full panel of twenty-four from which to strike no prejudice can result where only eighteen were presented, but the appellant exercised his six strikes, and the remaining twelve were taken as the jury. Cohen v. Cohen, 140 Ga. 398, 78 S. E. 841.

87. See the statutes, and Wis. St., 1915, §2851.

[a] May Permit Prosecution To Strike.—After defendant struck off his last two names, the remaining jurors were sworn to try the case. It was then discovered that thirteen were on the jury. The court then properly permitted the prosecutor to strike off one more name notwithstanding defendant's objection. Lewis v. State, 10 Ala. App. 31, 64 So. 537.

the oath taken by the jury gives the measure of its duty.³ But in a civil case the swearing of the jury is not so essential to the validity of the verdict;⁴ and failure to object to the omission of swearing the jury or a juror will constitute a waiver thereof.⁵

B. TIME OF SWEARING.—The time and order of swearing in the jury varies in the different jurisdictions. Sometimes it is held to be a discretionary matter with the court;⁶ while some courts deem it the better practice to swear each juror as he is selected;⁷ other courts swear the jury when it is complete, so as to give the longest possible time for the exercise of peremptory challenges.⁸ Some courts follow the practice of swearing in at one time all jurors selected and accepted from each panel upon the exhaustion of such panel.⁹

For Each Case or for Term.—The oath may, in some jurisdictions, be administered for the term or week instead of for each individual case,¹⁰ but in criminal cases it is generally required that the jury be sworn for each case.¹¹

After Joinder of Issue. — In civil cases, the issues between the parties should be joined before the jury is sworn.¹²

C. MODE OF SWEARING. — 1. In General. — The swearing is always done orally in the presence of the court, the prisoner and his counsel.¹³ Where the statute does not expressly provide the manner in which the oath should be administered, the common law principle that it be administered to all persons according to their opinions and as most affects their consciences is applicable.¹⁴

2. Form of Oath. — a. In General. — Statutes as a general rule provide the form of the oath that is administered to the jury about to try the issues joined in a case.¹⁵ Under some statutes but one form of oath is given whether the case be a criminal or civil one.¹⁶

A substantial compliance with the legal or statutory form of oath required to be administered to the jury is generally sufficient;¹⁷ but in

[c] Presumption. — Where a jury was impeached for the trial of joint offenders, and the jurors put upon their oath at the same time that an order for separate trials was formally entered in the record, it will be deemed that the jury were sworn in the case proceeded with. *People v. some states only the oath as prescribed by statute can be given.¹⁸

b. In Civil Cases.—The customary form of oath in civil cases is, that the juror will well and truly try each and all of the issues submitted and a true verdict render according to the evidence.¹⁹ The word "issue" as used in the administration of the oath is used collectively;²⁰ and hence, where there are several issues an oath is not objectionable because it swears the jury to try the "issue" joined.²¹

In actions upon penal bonds, the jury should be sworn to inquire into the breaches and assess the damages.²²

In default cases the proper practice is to swear the jury "to assess the plaintiff's damages,"²³ and not to "try the issues."²⁴ In some jurisdictions, where the jury are sworn only to "try the issues" in a default case, the practice is to reverse the judgment;²⁵ but in other jurisdictions, the fact that the jury were so sworn does not vitiate the verdict.²⁶

Default of Several of Defendants.—Where there are several defendants, some of whom are in default and some of whom stand trial, the proper practice is to swear the jury to try the issues joined, and also to assess the damages as to the defaulting defendants.²⁷ Where issues have been joined, it is erroneous for the court to direct the jury to be sworn to inquire of damages only.²⁸

have not been changed after the trial began, no necessity exists for reswearing the jury;⁴¹ nor need the jury be resworn to try the remaining issues where some of the issues have been stricken out or withdrawn.⁴² Though considered better practice to do so,⁴³ the jury need not be resworn merely because the name of a party is stricken out or added to the pleadings,⁴⁴ or corrected therein.⁴⁵ But if the amendment changes the issues, or makes a new issue, the jury must be resworn before the trial is proceeded with.⁴⁶ So also, where the jury was improperly sworn, the court may upon objection thereto, reswear the jury.⁴⁷

"to well and truly try the matters at issue and a true verdict render," a general or special verdict may be returned, or special findings may be made in cases where general verdicts are rendered. Londoner v. People, 15 Colo. 557, 26 Pac. 135. (2) Such an oath gives the jury the right to assess the damages. Goggin v. O'Donnell, 62 Ill. 66.

[b] Time for Objection.—If a party wishes to reserve any alleged error in proceeding with a case after an amendment which did not change the issues was made, without reswearing the jury, he should object and except at the time. Knowles v. Rexroth, 67 Ind. 59; Hackney v. Williams, 46 Ind. 413; Sandford Tool, etc. Co. v. Mullen, 1 Ind. App. 204, 27 N. E. 448.

[b] Adding words descriptio personae of one of the parties does not necessitate a reswearing of the jury. Weikel v. Beekel, 4 Walk. (Pa.) 336.

45. State v. Holmes, 23 La. Ann. 604, an amendment correcting in an indictment for larceny, the name of the owner of the stolen property, does not necessitate the reswearing of the jury. 46. *Record v. [a] In Iowa (1) it seems that even though the amendment broadens the issue, the jury need not be resworn. Hinkle v. Davenport, 38 Iowa 355. (2) But if the oath administered to the jury did in its terms limit the consideration of the jury to the issue then formed, under such circumstances it would be proper to reswear the jury. Williams v. Miller, 10 Iowa 344.

[b] Effect of Filing Reply.—Where the jury were sworn to "well and truly try the matters submitted to them in the case in hearing, etc.," they need not be resworn if a reply is submitted thereafter. Grant v. Pendery, 15 Kan. 236.

[c] Changing Form of Action. Where the original writ and the narr. were amended by changing the form of action from assumpsit to covenant, it was not necessary to reswear the jury. Clagett v. Easterday, 42 Md. 617.

47. Leas v. Patterson, 38 Ind. 465.

Where one of several defendants is given a separate trial, a jury sworn to try all the defendants should be resworn to try the case of such defendant.⁴⁸ So also, where an incompetent juror is discharged after the jury is sworn, the proper practice is to reswear the jury after filling the vacancy.⁴⁹ If, after a trial has commenced, it is discovered that one juror did not take the oath because of conscientious scruples, it is proper for the court to affirm such juror, reswear the others and begin the trial anew.⁵⁰ Where a defendant, after a dismissal of the case, consents to go to trial before the same jury which had been duly sworn before such dismissal, the jury need not be resworn.⁵¹

E. WHAT RECORD MUST SHOW.—Since the jury must always be sworn in a criminal case,⁵² a judgment in such case will be reversed if the record fails to show that the jury was sworn;⁵³ but the record may

[a] If a juror has been sworn in chief, but is under the impression that he was sworn only upon the voir dire, he should be resworn. Com. v. Knapp, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 496, 20 Am. Dec. 491.

[b] Defendant by Wrong Name. (1) It is the proper practice to reswear a jury which had been sworn to try a defendant under an erroneous given name (Widmaier v. Mellert, 6 Phila. [Pa.] 515), (2) but it is not necessary to reswear a jury which had been sworn to try J. C. Clark, whose name was corrected to read Joseph Clark. Clark v. State, 45 Tex. Crim. 456, 76 S. W. 573.

48. Babcock v. People, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 347, not sufficient if jury is sworn to try the case of several defendants.

49. Keech v. State, 15 Fla. 591. See Jefferson v. State, 52 Miss. 767.

[a] But where after the jury was sworn, one of the jurors was held to be disqualified and was removed from the panel, and the defendants thereupon moved that the remaining eleven jurors "be sworn de novo to try the case," and the court overruled the motion for the reason that the jurors had already been sworn, it was held that the motion implied an acceptance of the eleven jurors, and that swearing them over again to try the case would have been an idle and useless ceremony. State v. Duvall, 135 La. 710, 65 So. 904.

[b] Under an early act in Tennessee, if a juror became sick and another was sworn in his place, the other eleven were not resworn. State v. Curtis, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 601; Garner v. State, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 160.

[a] It will not suffice if the record show that the jury "were elected according to law to well and truly try and true deliverance make;" it must show that the jury were sworn according to law. The word sworn is absolutely essential. State v. Moore, 57 W. Va. 146, 49 S. E. 1015.

[b] Presumption on Appeal.—(1) Where no issue is raised during the trial as to whether the jury was sworn, and the record recites that the jury was duly sworn, upon appeal it will be conclusively presumed that the jury was sworn. Lyons v. State (Tex. Crim.), 189 S. W. 269. (2) But where be amended so as to speak the truth in this respect.⁵⁴ But in civil cases, the record need not show that the jury were sworn,⁵⁵ unless the statute demands it.⁵⁶

Though the fact that the jury was sworn must appear from the record in criminal cases,⁵⁷ the form of the oath need not be shown thereby;⁵⁸ and it is the safer and better practice not to set out in the record the record of conviction was defective, in not showing that the jurors who tried the issue were sworn, the original entry on the minutes enumerating the jury, but not stating that they were sworn, it was held that this material fact could not be supplied in a criminal case by the presumption of omnia rite acta, but should appear upon the record. State v. Douglass, 28 La. Ann. 425; State v. Phillips, 28 La. Ann. 387; State v. Gates, 9 La. Ann. 94. (3) Compare Hobbs v. State, 121 Tenn. 413, 118 S. W. 262, wherein the court said: "The ground, however, on which it is earnestly insisted a reversal should be had, is that the minute entry showing the arraignment, trial and verdict failed to recite that the jury were sworn. This objection is made for the first time in this court. If the fact was that the jury were not sworn, and this had been called to the attention of the court below, there is no doubt a new trial would have been promptly granted. That this was not done raises at least a presumption that they were sworn, but by a clerical omission the fact was not made a part of the minute entry. In addition, the failure to swear the jury would have been so great a departure from orderly procedure that it is hardly possible for this at the time to have escaped the attention of the court and of counsel. This being so, with the presumption, which exists in this court, of the regularity of judicial proceedings of trial courts, nothing appearing in the record of an affirmative character to the contrary, we are satisfied that the omission pointed out does not authorize a reversal of this case. . . . Bass v. State, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 579, which seems to announce a contrary view, was overruled by this court at Nashville, December term, 1905, in the case of Pearson v. State, unreported, from Wayne County." [a] Presumption That Jury Was Sworn.—"It has been several times decided in this state that the record must show that the jury were sworn to try the issue; but these decisions will not be followed by this court, as they are not supported by reason. The law provides for the empanelling of petit juries and requires them to be sworn for the term. . . . As swearing the jury does not constitute any part of the proceedings of a particular case, but is a duty devolved on the court, it is not necessary that the record of the entry of a verdict should show that the jury were sworn; but, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the presumption will be indulged that the court performed its duty in having the petit jurors sworn for the term, and that the issue was tried by a jury thus lawfully empanelled and sworn, as the law directs." *Waddell v. [a] Thus where the recital is that the jury were "sworn to well and truly try the issue joined between the state of Alabama and the defendant" but that the jury had been sworn and acted under oath,⁶² it has been held that a recital in the record that the jury "were duly sworn,"⁶³ or "sworn according to law,"⁶⁴ or other similar expressions,⁶⁵ are sufficient.

fails to state that they were sworn to "a true verdict render according to the evidence; so help you God," it is fatally defective. Cary v. State, 76 Ala. 78; *Johnson v. ors were sworn or affirmed,⁶⁶ or that those jurors who were affirmed had conscientious scruples against taking the oath.⁶⁷

IX. CUSTODY, CONDUCT AND DELIBERATIONS OF JURY.

A. CUSTODY.—1. In General.—The jury selected and impanelled to try a case is sometimes placed in custody of an officer of the court during the trial of the case and not allowed to separate.⁶⁸ And generally after submission of a case to the jury, it is placed in custody and not allowed to separate during its deliberations.⁶⁹

2. Attention to Physical Wants.—a. In General.—The jury-room should be made comfortable and pleasant.⁷⁰ During prolonged deliberations, the jury may be removed from the regular juryroom to more comfortable and suitable quarters.⁷¹ The jurors should be given an opportunity to sleep at night.⁷² During a protracted trial and when the jury is not allowed to separate, a barber may be allowed to render the jurors services, in the presence of the sheriff;⁷³ but individual jurors should not be taken to a barber shop.⁷⁴ Necessary attentions to a sick juror by his relatives are not improper.⁷⁵ A physician may be called to attend a juror who has suddenly been taken ill during the deliberations of the jury,⁷⁶ even without an order of court being first

66. State v. Price, 11 N. J. L. 203. See McClure v. State, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 206, need not state that they were "then and there sworn." But see Younger v. State, 2 W. Va. 579, 93 Am. Dec. 791, must appear when and how the jury were sworn.

[a] Effect of Hardships.—The fact that the jury was taken to and confined in a small room and thereby suffered inconvenience does not of itself require a new trial. Newkirk v. State, 27 Ind. 1.

[b] A remark by the foreman, after the verdict had been returned and as the jury were about to separate that their room had been cold and that if it had been properly heated there would or might have been a different verdict, does not require that the verdict should be set aside. *Woods v. [a] Presumption.—Visits by jurors to a barber shop, unattended by an officer, are presumptively prejudicial. Westmoreland v. State, 45 Ga. 225, 282; State v. Prescott, 7 N. H. 287, 294.

obtained,⁷⁷ though that is the better practice.⁷⁸ Medicine may also be furnished a juror.⁷⁹ So also newspapers and magazines are properly furnished the jury,⁸⁰ but not newspapers containing accounts of the trial without an order of court.⁸¹ Changes of clothing may be sent for by the bailiff, at the request of the jurors.⁸²

b. Furnishing Food and Refreshment to Jurors.—(I.) In General. Under the common law, jurors were confined in rooms like prisoners, and kept without meat, drink, fire or candle, except by permission of the court, until they had agreed upon a verdict.⁸³ Under some later authorities, however, if the jury ate and drank at their own expense it was cause for fining them, but did not vitiate their verdict.⁸⁴ The modern practice, however, is to allow the jury all necessary food and refreshments,⁸⁵ under the express order and direction of the court.⁸⁶ Indeed, the modern statutes usually provide that the sheriff shall supply the jury with necessary food and lodging in all criminal cases;⁸⁷ of court was not first obtained. N. Y. People v. Buchanan, 145 N. Y. 1, 39 N. E. 846. Tex.—Chant v. State, 73 Tex. Crim. 345, 166 S. W. 513.

[a] The better way is for the court to select a suitable physician, and caution him not to enter into any conversation with any of the jury upon the case, or upon any matter except such as may be directly connected with the needed relief for the juror whom he is called upon to attend. Nichols v. Nichols, 136 Mass. 256.

Hobart*, 45 Fed. 542. And see State v. Summers, 4 La. Ann. 26, jury to be furnished refreshments at their own expense.

87. See generally the statutes.

and provision is also made for the feeding of jurors in civil cases.⁸⁸

Meals may be taken in the common dining room of a hotel or boarding house if the jury is assigned a table by itself and is properly guarded;⁸⁹ and it is usually considered simply a harmless irregularity for the jury to eat at the same table with other persons.⁹⁰ The jury should not be boarded at the home of any counsel engaged in the trial of the case,⁹¹ or at the home of the parties, their relatives, or friends, unless no other place is available.⁹²

(II.) Food Furnished by Either Party.—The furnishing of food or refreshments to jurors, by either party, is sometimes held to vitiate the verdict,⁹³ though where the act was committed by accident, without Officer furnishing refreshments, see infra, IX, B, 4, a.

[a] Effect of Failure To Furnish Food.—Where the sheriff was instructed by the court not to furnish the jury any supper and no food was furnished until next morning there was no error in the absence of a showing that the jury desired food or objected to the order. Templeton v. State, 5 Tex. App. 398.

[b] Invitation Before Acceptance as Juror.—Where an individual juror was requested to stay at the home of counsel before he was selected as a juror, it was held not to be reversible error for him to do so. Koester v. Ottumwa, 34 Iowa 41. See People v. Lyle, 66 Cal. xviii, 4 Pac. 977.

c. Lodging Jury.⁹⁵—Comfortable lodgings should be furnished the jury at places not conducted by counsel, parties to the suit, their relatives or friends,⁹⁶ although circumstances may sometimes justify a liberal application of this rule.⁹⁷ The jury may be kept at a public inn;⁹⁸ but, if possible, it should be lodged at a place removed from the center of business activities and gossip.⁹⁹ Jurors are not to be treated as prisoners, but are to be given as much freedom of action as, under all the surrounding conditions, is compatible with the necessity of keeping them separate and apart from the general public.¹

Where the jurors arrive at a verdict without leaving their seats or retiring from the court room, there is no necessity to place them in charge of an officer.¹⁸

[a] Office of the Judge.—"If it were possible to hold a continuous session, there would be no necessity of confiding the jury to any one but the judge. He is the high and responsible functionary entrusted with the conduct of criminal trials, and bound to preserve the purity of jury trial and place it beyond suspicion of all improper interference. . . . But it is not possible for him to discharge the functions at all times, hence has grown up the custom of committing the jury on the adjournment of the court for the day, to the sheriff sworn to 'keep them, and neither speak to them nor suffer any other person to speak to them touching any matter relative to the trial, until they return into court.' . . . At all times, in and out of court, the judge is constructively presiding over the jury and protecting their deliberations from all improper influence. . . . [a] The statute (1) is absolute in its requirement that the jury shall be in charge of a sworn officer. The oath provided by law is one of the means of protection which the legislature, in its wisdom, has guaranteed to one on trial for a crime. It is more than a mere matter of form; it is an essen-

defendant to object, at the time, that the special oath has not been administered is a waiver of the statutory requirement,³³ and that where no communication with the jury has in fact taken place, a new trial will not be granted.³⁴ Where the custodian of the jury is not a regular officer of the court a special oath must be administered to him,³⁵ and a failure to do so is ground for a new trial.³⁶

Presumption.—It will be presumed that the special oath required by statute was administered, nothing to the contrary appearing in the record.³⁷

Record.—The form of the oath administered need not be set out in the record.³⁸ A statement that the jury retired in charge of a sworn bailiff is sufficient.³⁹

Reswearing of officer is not necessary at every recess taken by the court.⁴⁰

b. Form and Sufficiency.—Where required to be given, the form of oath as set forth in the statute should be closely followed;⁴¹ but tial requisite to the due and safe administration of justice, and it cannot be dispensed with except with the defendant's consent. State v. Crafton, 89 Iowa 109, 56 N. W. 257. slight deviations from the statutory form will not affect the verdict.⁴² Where no form is prescribed by statute, the common-law form of oath should be adhered to.⁴³

The administration of the oath by the clerk, in the absence of the judge, is an irregularity,⁴⁴ but not prejudicial error.⁴⁵ The oath need not be administered until the jury is sworn to try the case.⁴⁶

4. Acts and Conduct of.—a. In General.—The officer in charge of the jury should not allow his personal feelings or belief in reference to the case on trial to become known to the jury.⁴⁷ It is misconduct for the bailiff to take to the jury, even at their request, books or papers introduced in evidence at the trial, without an order of the court,⁴⁸ to get for them the minutes of the evidence,⁴⁹ or to obtain information as to facts for the jury from extraneous sources.⁵⁰ Nor should he attempt to give them information as to the law applicable to the case,⁵¹ or furnish them with statutes or law books.⁵² The fact that he supplies them with light refreshments, at their request, during their deliberations, does not ordinarily affect the validity of their verdict, however.⁵³

A wager by the officer on the result of the jury's deliberations, made after the jury is selected, does not require the granting of a new

[a] Contempt of Court To Do So. In a case where the officer remarked to two jurors who were holding out against the others: "You must be hard headed. Your head is so hard you could break a brick wall with it," the court in reversing the judgment said: "This conduct was very reprehensible, and when the testimony was adduced the court would have been warranted in fining the deputy sheriff for contempt. It was an unwarranted if not a criminal, interference with the deliberations of the jury, which has never been countenanced, nor will not be recognized by this court. It matters not how obstinate a juror may be, he is entitled in the deliberations of the jury, to a free, full and fair discussion, and an untrammelled, continued expression of his views in reference to the guilt or innocence of the appellant then on trial, and any unwarranted intermeddling by the deputy sheriff or any other third party is a ruthless violation of the dignity of the court, and comes clearly within the rule of contempt of the court in that it interferes, or tends to interfere, with the due and orderly administration of justice in the courts of this state." *Booker v. [a] Statement by sheriff to the bail-

period of time, even in answer to their own inquiry.⁸⁹ The prejudicial effect of such remarks depends upon a consideration of all the surrounding circumstances, and frequently, the verdict will be allowed to stand in the face of such misconduct on his part.⁹⁰

d. Presence in the Jury Room.—The custodian of the jury should not enter or remain in the jury room during the deliberations⁹¹ of the iff in charge of the jury, and within their hearing, as to the time the jury would be kept together, is prejudicial. Shaw v. State, 79 Miss. 577, 31 So. 209.

[b] Effect Produced Is Immaterial.

"We need not speculate in regard to the effect of the communication so made. The statute expressly prohibits the bailiff from speaking to the jury unless by order of the court, or to ask them whether they have agreed upon their verdict. . . . In the case before us there was a flagrant violation of this rule, which was speedily followed by a startling change of opinion on the part of the jury. The statement of the bailiff to the foreman that the jury could not agree to disagree; that the judge would return between 6 and 7 o'clock to receive the verdict if they did agree, and if they had not he would receive it when they did agree, may well have been understood as a warning from the court that no disagreement would be permitted and that he would keep them together until they did agree. Coming from the judge himself in the courtroom, in the presence of the defendant and his counsel, such a statement would have been improper. Made by a bailiff, at the door of the juryroom, in the absence of court, defendant and counsel, and embellished by a contemptuous reference to the possibility of an honest disagreement, it cannot be too severely condemned." Coolman v. State, 163 Ind. 503, 72 N. E. 568.

[a] Such Inquiries Improper.—"It was improper, and therefore unlawful, in the first instance for the jurors to institute such an investigation and interview with the bailiff. An inquiry, how long the court would compel the jury to be kept together unless they agreed upon a verdict, had a direct bearing on the discharge of their duties as jurors. No communication with an outsider, whether officer or stranger, having such a bearing, is lawful. To hold such communication is misconduct on the part of the juror who does it, as well as the officer or stranger who engages in or tolerates it; and if the verdict is produced or affected by such misconduct, whether the improper influence which entered into it was justified by anything said or done by the officer or stranger, or not, the mischief effecting injustice to a party litigant has been accomplished, for the redress of which there is no remedy but to set aside the verdict." *Kansas City, M. & B. jury, especially where he has also been a witness in the case.⁹² His presence there will not, however, vitiate the verdict in all cases, since, although it constitutes an irregularity which is strongly condemned, the circumstances of each case will determine whether the verdict will be allowed to stand.⁹³ A few cases have considered the intrinsic danger of such misconduct to be so great as to require the verdict to be set aside on the mere showing that it has taken place,⁹⁴ and a new trial has been granted in such cases.⁹⁵

C. PRESENCE OF JURY DURING ARGUMENTS AND PROCEEDINGS.⁹⁷ — 1. In General.—In civil cases, questions of law are usually for the court and should be argued exclusively to it;⁹⁸ but there is no absolute rule of law which requires that the jury be sent out of the courtroom while such an argument is in progress, though the court may, in its discretion, do so.⁹⁹ A timely request by counsel that the jury be excused must always be preferred.¹ In criminal cases the same rule has been applied,² although in some jurisdictions it has been held that the jury should be present even where counsel was confining his argument to the law of the case.³

Where an argument takes place in the presence of the jury, they should be cautioned that they are not to be influenced by what they have heard, nor to draw inferences therefrom prejudicial to either party.⁴

Waiver of Rights.—The court should not call upon either party to waive a legal right in the presence of the jury.⁵

2. An offer to prove specific facts by a witness may, where the court fears that such offer might prove prejudicial to the adverse party, be required to be made only after the jury has retired;⁸ but ordinarily the jury will not be excused at such times.⁹

3. During Argument of Motion for Directed Verdict or Nonsuit. It is the better practice to excuse the jury during argument on a motion for a directed verdict, or nonsuit.¹⁰ The matter is, however, largely within the sound discretion of the court.¹¹

[a] Reason of the Rule.—"While the jury is a component part of the court, it is not a part of its duty to determine upon the competency of evidence, nor is it necessary that it should be present while the judge examines a witness to determine upon the competency of his testimony. The practice of retiring the jury in such cases is to be commended rather than condemned, since its effect is to keep the jury wholly uninformed as to extraneous matters which in no event should be considered by it in forming the verdict." Kraner v. State, 61 Miss. 158.

[b] Privilege.—Whether relation of attorney and client existed thus making offered testimony of a witness privileged was properly determined by the court after the jury was excused. McDonald v. McDonald, 142 Ind. 55, 74, 41 N. E. 336.

[c] Admissibility of Confessions.—"The argument that if the preliminary hearing is had in the presence of the jury they will ordinarily learn the nature of the confession and be influenced thereby in arriving at a verdict, although the court may refuse to admit it in evidence, is based upon an unwarranted assumption of the ignorance and incompetency of the jury. During such an examination they are but silent spectators, who necessarily understand that out of its results something may or may not come before them as evidence, and that until the court rules the question is for its consideration and not for theirs. In the judgment of the law juries are deemed capable of that amount of discrimination; it would be impossible to conduct a jury trial on any other principle." State v. Kelly, 28 Ore. 225, 42 Pac. 217, 52 Am. St. Rep. 777.

Authorized Separations.¹⁴—a. *Prior to Impaneling of Jury.*¹⁵—Jurors, who have been examined as a whole and passed for cause but not finally selected or sworn, may be allowed to separate by the court.¹⁶ And where a portion only of the jury has been selected, it is discretionary with the court to allow such jurors to separate during an adjournment of the court,¹⁷ especially where it is the practice not to swear the jurors until the full panel is selected,¹⁸ although it is sometimes said to be the better practice not to allow a separation,¹⁹ and in some jurisdictions it is not allowed, in capital cases,²⁰ even with the consent of the defendant,²¹ unless each and all of the jurors are placed in charge of an officer of the court.²²

b. During the Trial.—(I.) In Criminal Cases.—(A.) IN GENERAL. The early common-law rule was that when a jury was once charged with the trial of a prisoner, no separation would be allowed until a verdict had been returned.²⁴ This rule has been greatly relaxed under the modern practice, however, and a broad discretion is now usually vested in the trial court to determine the desirability of keeping the jury together during the trial.²⁵ In some jurisdictions a separation is allowed in any felony case not punishable by death or con-

The other purpose was to prevent them from having communication with any of the parties interested and from receiving any fresh evidence in private, and any violation of the rule in these latter respects vitiated the verdict." *State v. [a] The court is not required to yield to a request by either party, that the jury be kept together. State v. Nelson, 91 Minn. 143, 97 N. W. 652.

[b] Inherent Power of Court.—Where a statute allows a separation except where one party objects "it is in the sound discretion of the trial court on its own motion to require the jury to be kept together." State v. Garrity, 98 Iowa 101, 67 N. W. 92.

[c] A statute allowing a separation is not unconstitutional as being in conflict with the provision that "the right of a trial by jury shall be secured to all and remain inviolate." People v. Chaves, 122 Cal. 134, 54 Pac. 596; Burns v. State, 8 Okla. Crim. 554, 129 Pac. 657; Armstrong v. State, 2 Okla. Crim. 567, 103 Pac. 658.

[d] During prolonged deliberations some degree of separation is often inevitable. The trial court must deter-

finement in the penitentiary for more than a specified period of time.²⁶ In other jurisdiction a separation is permitted in misdemeanor but not in felony cases,²⁷ except with the consent of both parties.²⁸ Statutes requiring the consent of parties to a separation of the jury are mandatory in character.²⁹ Where a defendant consents to the separation of the jury on condition that an officer shall accompany the jurors, if the condition is not complied with, the separation will be treated as an unauthorized separation and the verdict set aside.³⁰

It is preferable that a request by either party that the jury be kept together should be made in writing,³¹ in open court.³² The court mine to what extent it shall be allowed. People v. Dunbar Contracting Co., 215 N. Y. 416, 426, 109 N. E. 554.

[e] During Recess of Court.—Allowing a juror to leave the courtroom for a few minutes during the trial but while proceedings were temporarily suspended, is not improper. People v. Witt, 170 Cal. 104, 148 Pac. 928.

[f] While a view is being taken, jurors should not be allowed to separate. People v. Hull, 86 Mich. 449, 49 N. W. 288. As to view generally, see the title "View;" and 13 ENCY. OF EV. 953, et seq.

[g] The discretionary power of the court is not exhausted upon its original exercise, however; it may thereafter make such new and different order as the circumstances may call for. Young Chung v. State, 15 Ariz. 79, 136 Pac. 631; Baker v. State, 88 Wis. 140, 59 N. W. 570. Compare People v. Maugh's, 149 Cal. 253, 264, 86 Pac. 187, where after the court had placed the jury in the custody of an officer it was held to be prejudicial error to allow some of the jurors to separate and visit their homes.

[a] Under such a statute, (1) where two felonies are being prosecuted in the same action, the punishment for both of which together may exceed ten years, the jury must not be allowed to separate. *Johnson v. should be careful not to indicate to the jury from which party such a request comes,³³ and it should not ask counsel in the presence of the jury whether they will consent to a separation.³⁴ Such an inquiry may constitute reversible error,³⁵ though this is not usually the case where the court has a discretionary power to allow or refuse to allow a separation.³⁶ An objection to such an inquiry by the court must, however, be made at the time.³⁷

An adjournment during which a separation is permitted may properly be taken not merely from one day to another but for longer periods of time, during the same term of court.³⁸

(B.) IN CAPITAL CASES.—Many authorities apply the same rule to capital as to other felonies, and leave to the discretion of the trial court the determination of the propriety of allowing the jury to separate during the trial.³⁹ As a general rule, however, that discretion should be exercised by refusing to allow the jury to separate in such cases;⁴⁰ and in some jurisdictions, a separation is never allowed,⁴¹ even though the defendant consents to it,⁴² though upon this latter proposition there are authorities to the contrary.⁴³

(II.) In Civil Cases.—While the court has inherent power in civil cases, to order the jury kept together during the trial, even in the absence of a statute, it is not customary to adopt this practice.⁴⁴ The matter is left very largely to the discretion of the court,⁴⁵ and the court need not accede to the request of either party that they be kept together.⁴⁶ The fact that an adjournment was taken for several days and the jury permitted to separate in the meantime, does not constitute an abuse of the court's discretion;⁴⁷ and the court may properly allow individual jurors to leave the others on a necessity therefor arising.⁴⁸ It is also discretionary with the court to allow the jury to separate, after the evidence is in, arguments concluded and instructions given, for needed rest or meals, prior to finally submitting the case to them.⁴⁹ Jurors who have been allowed to separate during an adjournment of court have complete freedom of action, save that they must do nothing which will interfere with their ability to render a fair and impartial judgment in the case.⁵⁰

c. After Submission of Case.—(I.) In Criminal Cases.—In some jurisdictions, no distinction is made between the right of the court in its discretion to authorize a separation before and after a submission of the case to the jury.⁵¹ The more prevalent practice is not to allow a separation after submission of the case,⁵² even with the consent of the defendant,⁵³ unless the sickness of a juror,⁵⁴ or some other unavoidable necessity makes it imperative.⁵⁵ It is sometimes allowed, with the consent of both parties, if all the jurors are placed in charge of officers.⁵⁶

this procedure;⁶⁵ and defects in the verdict may properly be cured by a resubmission of the case to them on their reassembling in court.⁶⁶ In some jurisdictions the practice is not favored, however,⁶⁷ and if allowed without the consent of the parties, a mistrial results.⁶⁸

c. *Separation in Charge of Officer.*⁶⁹ — (I.) In Criminal Cases. — Where the court has ordered a jury not to separate and placed it in charge of an officer, occasions may thereafter arise on which the presence of individual jurors at their homes, places of business or elsewhere is imperatively required; on such occasions, the court may allow the juror the privilege of attending such places in charge and custody of an officer.⁷⁰ It is improper to allow the juror to leave, unaccompanied by an officer, however.⁷¹ The court may also properly allow jurors to separate for short periods of time in charge of officers, for other necessary purposes.⁷²

[a] Reason of the Rule.—"When a verdict is rendered in open court and it does not cover the issues submitted, it is within the power of the judge to deliver further instructions to the jury and permit them to consider the case again and save the parties the expense of another trial. This right is lost to the parties after the jury has dispersed before the verdict is published. . . . When a verdict is rendered in open court, the losing party has the right to request the judge to permit the jury to be polled; and this right is lost if the jury disperse before the verdict is received." *Barfield v. (II.) In Civil Cases. — Either during the trial, or after the submission of the case, the court may, in its discretion allow one or more jurors to separate from the others, placing them in charge of an officer.⁷²

f. Prejudicial Effect. — Where the court allows jurors to separate, the burden is ordinarily upon the defendant to show that misconduct prejudicial to his rights has taken place;⁷⁴ and unless it appears that prejudice actually resulted, or the circumstances are such that it may reasonably be presumed to have resulted, the verdict will not be affected,⁷⁵ especially where the defendant consented to the separation.⁷⁶ But where the allowance of a separation was, under the circumstances and conditions of the case, improper, the verdict will be set aside in the absence of a showing of a want of prejudice by the state.⁷⁷ And in capital cases, improper separations have been held to require a reversal, irrespective of the existence of prejudice suffered by the accused,⁷⁸ especially where the separation was allowed after the case was submitted,⁷⁹ and this has been held even where the defendant has consented to it.⁸⁰ The same general rules have been applied to other felonies.⁸¹

as an acquittal:⁸² a prisoner cannot rely on a claim of former jeopardy for that reason.⁸³

Review. — The action of the trial court, in the exercise of its discretionary power, in allowing a jury to separate, will be reviewed on appeal, only in cases where an abuse of discretion appears.⁸⁴

g. Admonition to Jury.⁸⁵ — (I.) In Criminal Cases. — (A.) NECESSITY OF GIVING. — (1.) In General. — An admonition should always be given to the jury warning them against talking on any subject connected with the trial during a separation allowed by the court.⁸⁶ But a failure on the part of the court to admonish the jury is usually regarded as an irregularity which is waived if counsel does not call the court's attention to its omission at the time,⁸⁷ though where the statutory provisions are regarded as mandatory in character the rule is otherwise.⁸⁸ Such a failure is not of itself ground for a new trial, however,⁸⁹ though it has been held to raise a presumption that prejudice has followed from the omission of the court.⁹⁰

(2.) At Recesses. — Failure to admonish the jury not to converse about the case, during a short recess in the trial, is not ground for a new trial,⁹² especially where the jury had theretofore been properly admonished and told that the admonishment applied to all occasions on which they might be allowed to separate during the trial.⁹³ Where no recess is taken but a separation is allowed during a short suspension of the proceedings, no harm results from a failure to give the regular admonition.⁹⁴

[a] Reason for an Admonishment. "Formerly the jury were not allowed to separate at all, but remained in charge of an officer from the time they were impeached until the return of the verdict. By our statute, separation is permitted, but in lieu thereof this admonition from the court is required, and such admonition ought always to be given." State v. Stackhouse, 24 Kan. 445.

(B.) FORM. — The specific language of the statute need not be employed in giving the admonition; it is sufficient if language conveying the general import of the statutory admonition is used.⁹⁵

(II.) In Civil Cases. — Failure to properly admonish the jury on an adjournment of court has been held to constitute reversible error.⁹⁶ The admonishment need not be given immediately prior to the separation, however;⁹⁷ and where the jury has been previously admonished, failure to repeat the admonishment at each recess is not reversible error.⁹⁸

2. Unauthorized Separations.⁹⁹ — a. Casual and Necessary Separations Generally. — (I.) In Criminal Cases. — If a juror is all the time within sight of the court,¹ the officer in charge of the jury,² or his fellow jurors,³ no prejudicial separation occurs, although for some necessary and personal reason he leaves the immediate proximity of the remainder of the jury.⁴ Even when for a brief period of time he is out of sight, no harm results, where under the surrounding circumstances it is reasonable to assume that the juror has not misconducted taken to the juryroom,⁸ or while the jury, in charge of the officer is on the street,⁹ are usually disregarded. So also, a temporary separation resulting from unforeseen circumstances, is not usually regarded as an irregularity of substance.¹⁰ The rule is especially applicable to minor separations occurring on a view of the premises.¹¹ But where the circumstances are suspicious, where other persons had an opportunity to communicate with them, and no satisfactory explanation of the transaction is made, separations otherwise apparently trivial will justify the setting aside of the verdict,¹² or will at least cast upon the state the burden of proving a want of prejudice.¹³ Thus a voluntary separation by jurors, though no harm is intended by them, for a considerable period of time, will be treated as an actual, real, and irregular proceeding,¹⁴ especially where they mingle with people

c. Effect. — (I.) In General. — It is difficult to lay down any general rule as to the effect of an illegal and unauthorized separation on the part of the jurors. In criminal cases, other than capital cases,³⁴ the prevailing rule is that prejudice will not be presumed to have followed from the mere separation of jurors, but that it is incumbent on the defendant to show actual prejudice, or such circumstances as will justify the court in inferring that it is reasonably probable that injury followed,³⁵ though if from all the circumstances, it appears reasonably probable that injury may have resulted the verdict will be set aside and a new trial granted.³⁶ The rule that prejudice is presumed to have resulted in the first instance obtains in some jurisdictions, however,³⁷ especially where statutory provisions involved are construed to be mandatory in character.³⁸ And a few early authorities have held that prejudice was conclusively presumed to have resulted.³⁹

In capital cases, more stringent rules are sometimes applied. A few early cases held that the mere unauthorized separation of the jury required the reversal of a judgment of conviction.⁴⁰ And the prevailing view in such cases is that an unauthorized separation is presumptively harmful, and the verdict will be set aside unless it is made to appear affirmatively that no injury resulted to the defendant.⁴¹ Still other authorities recognize the general rule applicable to other

[a] "The object of this rule is apparent. . . . This protection is due to the defendant and the state should see that he receives it. It is not expected of him to employ some one to watch the jury, and report any misconduct on their part. Hence, when they separate, the burden is upon the state to show, by circumstances or directly, that the absent juror was not subjected to any injurious influence." Ferguson v. State, 95 Ark. 428, 430, 129 S. W. 813.

[b] The foundation of this rule in some states, at least, is that the "basis for the order of association of the jurors pending the trial is to be found in the statute, and not in the order of the court" and that the terms of the statute are mandatory. *State v. be reversed unless prejudice be shown. . . . Whatever the rule may be elsewhere, the people of this state have seen fit to say, through the legislative body, that a defendant shall have not only a fair trial, but the semblance of a fair trial, for the reason no doubt, that the danger of allowing a juror to pass upon his own delinquency would be quite as dangerous as the vice at which the statute is aimed. . . . granted,⁴⁴ though the circumstances surrounding the separation may be such as to rebut this presumption and lead to the conclusion that it may reasonably be assumed that prejudice actually followed.⁴⁵

The order of the lower court either granting or refusing a new trial on the ground of an illegal separation of the jury will be reviewed on appeal only for an abuse of discretion,⁴⁶ and unless the evidence considered on a motion for a new trial is embodied in the record, an appellate court will not consider the point.⁴⁷ Even where the judgment is set aside because of an unwarranted separation of the jurors, the action of the court does not operate as an acquittal and the defendant may be again tried over his plea of former jeopardy.⁴⁸ If the unauthorized separation of the jury is brought to the court's attention during the trial, he should at once investigate the matter and pass upon its prejudicial effect,⁴⁹ and a juror guilty of an unauthorized separation may be punished for contempt.⁵⁰

call the court's attention to an unauthorized separation and make complaint thereof,⁶⁹ will constitute a waiver of the alleged error, though where the statute applicable in such cases is mandatory in character, there is no waiver of its provisions by a failure to make an objection.⁷⁰

(VII.) In Civil Cases.⁷¹—(A.) PRIOR TO FINAL SUBMISSION OF THE CASE. An unauthorized separation prior to final submission of the case is harmless in the absence of a showing that the jury has been tampered with,⁷² especially in a case where the jury's verdict is advisory only and not binding on the court.⁷³

Whether a violation of an order of the trial court requiring the jury not to separate during the trial has been prejudicial is a matter lying peculiarly within its knowledge, and its order will not be reviewed save for an abuse of discretion.⁷⁴

(B.) AFTER FINAL SUBMISSION OF THE CASE.—An unauthorized separation after final submission of the case will not affect the verdict, unless it affirmatively appears that the defeated party suffered prejudice.⁷⁵

Parties litigant, even defendants in criminal cases, must deal fairly by the court. They are not permitted to withhold information of matters transpiring in the progress of a trial, whether prejudicial or otherwise, and thus, without objection, permit it to proceed to a conclusion and then take advantage of them.” *Polin v. (C.) SEPARATION AFTER VERDICT AGREED UPON. — For the jury to disperse after sealing a verdict, but without an order of court or the consent of the parties to such a practice, is an irregularity, not vitiating the verdict, however, according to some authorities.⁷⁷ Under other authorities, however, the power of the jury to return a sealed verdict, without a special order of the court, is denied.⁷⁸ Where a jury improperly separates after agreeing on only a part of the issues submitted to them, their verdict on such issues will be allowed to stand, if they are not closely connected with or related to the remaining issues in the case.⁷⁹

(D.) SEPARATION IN CHARGE OF OFFICER.⁸¹ — An unauthorized separation of jurors, who, however, are all the time in the custody of officers, is harmless.⁸²

(E.) FAILURE TO OBJECT.⁸³ — If a party makes no objection to the action of the court allowing the jury to separate,⁸⁴ or fails to promptly bring to the court's attention knowledge he has acquired of an unauthorized separation on the part of the jury, during the trial, or after the submission of the case to them,⁸⁵ he will be taken to have impliedly assented to it.

3. Proof of the Separation and Its Effect. — Affidavits used to establish a prejudicial separation of the jury should be definite and certain in their averments;⁸⁶ an affidavit which does not state who the jurors were who were separated from the others should be excluded for indefiniteness.⁸⁷ They should not be made on information and belief.⁸⁸

Use of Jurors. — The general rule that jurors will not be allowed to impeach their own verdict,⁸⁹ requires the exclusion of their testimony or affidavits tending to show that an improper separation of the jury took place,⁹⁰ unless such evidence is expressly rendered competent by statute, as is sometimes the case.⁹¹ The testimony or affidavits of jurors are, however, admissible to disprove or explain any separation of which complaint is made.⁹² But the uncorroborated

Affidavits of jurors, to rebut the charge of misconduct, should cover all phases of the transaction,⁹⁶ and should especially deny hearing any discussion of the case between other persons.⁹⁷

E. COMMUNICATIONS BETWEEN COURT AND JURY.⁹⁸—1. presence of the parties or their attorneys.¹³ The judge should not allow a juror to approach him in the courtroom and speak to him in a whisper.¹⁴

2. Visits by Judge to Juryroom.—a. In General.—The courts in some jurisdictions, while fully recognizing the impropriety and irregularity of the conduct,¹⁵ rely on the presumption that prejudice does not follow from a mere irregularity or technical error,¹⁶ and hold that in the absence of a showing of prejudice the verdict will not be set aside in a case because a judge visits the juryroom and there communicates with the jurors;¹⁷ a casual, temporary intrusion into the juryroom does not by these authorities call for a reversal of the judgment.¹⁸ By the weight of authority, however, such conduct on the part of the judge in the absence of counsel and without consent constitutes reversible error,¹⁹ and this, even though the visit was requested by the jury,²⁰ and apart from any question of prejudice resulting from the

[a] Statement of the Rule.—"In the present case, it cannot fairly be inferred that the plaintiff in error gave his consent, unless from the circumstances that he knew that the justice was going in to the jury, and did not object. But this is not enough. The practice is dangerous and improper, and ought to be guarded against; and the consent ought not to be matter of inference, as it may be liable to great abuse; it ought to appear affirmatively that it was done with the consent of parties." Taylor v. Betsford, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 486, the leading case.

[a] Commendable Object Is No Excuse.—A verdict was set aside even though the object of the court in visiting the jury "was to ascertain whether anyone was sick and unable to further deliberate, and also to find out whether they had agreed." State v. Murphy, 17 N. D. 48, 115 N. W. 84.

enters the juryroom under a misapprehension of the facts, believing that a verdict has been agreed upon.²⁵

Various principles have led to the adoption of this drastic rule. Public policy demands that juries should be free not only from the exercise of undue influence by the court,²⁶ but even from the suspicion of the existence of any such secret influence;²⁷ the judge by virtue of his position, and the importance attached to his every remark by the jury is, even unconsciously, in a position to unintentionally influence the jury.²⁸ Parties should not be subjected to the burden of an inquiry before the court in regard to the effect of such actions,²⁹ and a resort to the testimony of persons reluctant to testify as to their own wrongdoing, should not be required.³⁰ The necessity that parties have an opportunity to object and except to directions given the jury by the court is also frequently mentioned,³¹ as is the general principle that trials of cases must be conducted publicly and openly,³² and in criminal cases, the right of parties to be present, with counsel, during all stages of the trial.³³

Merely stepping into the doorway of the juryroom is a violation of this rule,³⁴ as is answering a knock on the door of the juryroom and conversing with the jurors in full view of counsel for both parties though beyond their range of hearing.³⁵

b. Subject-Matter of Communications. — (I.) In General. — A judgment has been reversed even where the judge said nothing at all to the jury during his visit, but merely listened to their request for information and then left them,³⁶ and where he refused to answer the inquiries of the jury and referred them to the instructions given by him.³⁷ Statements regarding the nature of the offense and the punishment³⁸ which could be inflicted, as to which party would bear the costs,³⁹ as to what was the testimony in the case,⁴⁰ informing the jury that the sheriff would take them to supper, with a caution as to their conduct at that time,⁴¹ urging the jury to reach an agreement upon a verdict,⁴² or stating the effect of the verdict,⁴³ have all been held to be communications which required the setting aside of the verdict and the granting of a new trial. So also, a reading of the pleadings to the jury upon such a visit has been held improper.⁴⁴

The fact that the inquiry of the jury was answered correctly from a legal point of view does not cure the error.⁴⁵ But inquiries by the court as to the comfort and welfare of the jury,⁴⁶ and a statement of where he could be found if the jury wanted him,⁴⁷ or an inquiry as to whether they had or were likely to be able to reach, an agreement,⁴⁸ or statements as to the form of verdict which might be returned,⁴⁹ or that the jury could not add anything to the plaintiff's demand,⁵⁰ and that he could not communicate with them in their room,⁵¹ are not considered a taking of evidence or a proceeding in the case in the absence of defendant and his counsel.⁵²

[a] Public policy (1) according to these cases requires that jury trials should be kept free from the suspicions that inevitably attach to secret communications by any person with the jury (Sargent v. Roberts, 1 Pick. [Mass.] 337), (2) and parties have a right to have all stages of the trial conducted in public (Goode v. Campbell, 14 Bush [Ky.] 75), (3) with full opportunity to object and except to all matters which take place. O'Connor v. Guthrie, 11 Iowa 80.

[a] Thus (1) a report by a foreman that the jury was unable to agree and awaited the directions of the court and the answer that the court was unwilling to discharge them at that time, has been held erroneous. Sargent v. Roberts, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 337. (2) So also, furnishing information upon a point of law (Goode v. Campbell, 14 Bush [Ky.] 75; State v. Patterson, 45 Vt. 308, 12 Am. Rep. 200 [as to degrees of manslaughter]), (3) even by a mere, general reference to instructions already given (State v. Alexander, 66 Mo. 148), (4) or by reciting a rule of law given in the charge (Greely v. Weaver [Me.], 5 Atl. 267), (5) or a statement of the amount claimed by the plaintiff to be due (*Kehrley v. [a] The answer of the court should not be argumentative and should be directly responsive to the question asked by the jury. See Reno v. State, 56 Tex. Crim. 229, 120 S. W. 429.

[b] Informing Counsel.—(1) It is the better practice to apprise counsel of any question asked by the jury that may affect the case before an answer is returned by the court. Buntin v. Danville, 93 Va. 200, 24 S. E. 830. (2) But the court may properly refuse to divulge to counsel the purport of a written communication from the jury to which he pays no attention and makes no reply. People v. Sauerbier, 173 Mich. 521, 139 N. W. 260.

[c] Communications (1) held proper include answers to inquiries as to the testimony given by witnesses (Reno v. State, 56 Tex. Crim. 229, 120 S. W. 429), (2) the kind or amount of the verdict which could properly be returned (Colo.—Tilley v. Montelius Piano Co., 15 Colo. App. 204, 61 Pac. 483 [answer sent orally through the bailiff]. *Kan. that no injury could have followed from the action of the court, a verdict will not be set aside on this ground.⁶⁰

4. Consent of Counsel.—The consent of counsel to written communications between the court and jury,⁶¹ or to visits by the court to the juryroom,⁶² constitutes a waiver of the irregularity, except in a capital case.⁶³ Such consent must be express;⁶⁴ mere knowledge by counsel of the intended action by the judge and failure to object to it is not a consent to it.⁶⁵ But failure to object promptly after knowledge of the irregularity is acquired, is a waiver of the manner of communication between court and jury,⁶⁶ or as to the communication itself.⁶⁷

5. Proof of Misconduct.⁶⁸—Where the question of misconduct by reason of communications between court and jury is raised on appeal, neither the minutes of the clerk of the court,⁶⁹ nor affidavits,⁷⁰ will be allowed to show misconduct of the judge in visiting the juryroom. The facts as certified in the bill of exceptions on statement settled by the court on appeal,⁷¹ or as incorporated by the judge in his return,⁷² must be accepted as true; but if the court refuses to certify the facts as they are claimed to exist, affidavits may then be employed.⁷³

F. INTERCOURSE BETWEEN JURORS AND OTHER PERSONS.—1. In General—The freedom of the jury from outside influences during the trial of the case and their deliberations thereon is a matter the importance of which is emphasized by all courts.⁷⁴ The mere opportunity for improper communication with the jury where no prejudicial communications are in fact shown, is insufficient to vitiate a verdict, however.⁷⁵ for the fact of misconduct must be clearly established.⁷⁶ Nor does the mere fact that communications passed between persons outside the juryroom and the jury while they were confined constitute prejudicial misconduct.⁷⁷

Jurors should promptly report any attempt to hold improper intercourse with them to the court.⁷⁸ An investigation of the alleged misconduct of other persons and jurors is properly made during the trial.⁷⁹

Failure of counsel to object to misconduct of this nature occurring during the trial and known at the time will be considered as a waiver thereof,⁸⁰ except that, under some authorities, where the misconduct

[a] Punishment of a party is not the basis of the rule. "The plaintiff, as he was unaware of these transactions, is not liable to punishment, but it does not follow from this that he can hold a verdict which is the result of a trial corrupted, though without his fault, by a shameful disregard of the familiar rules which are necessary to a decent administration of the law. The court set the verdict aside not as a punishment to anyone but in justice to themselves, as well as to the defendant, that the trial may be conducted fairly so that the verdict, when finally rendered, may be entitled case, are harmless, however;⁹⁵ and statements made to a juror in ignorance of his connection with the case, and not calculated to influence the jurors, although with a remote bearing upon it, are not ground for a new trial.⁹⁶ Intimate and improper association of such persons with the jurors is also condemned.⁹⁷ But the mere fact that a juror accepted the hospitality of a person interested in the action does not ordinarily require a new trial, no conversation about the case having taken place.⁹⁸

4. Between Counsel and Jurors.⁹⁹—A proper regard for the proprieties of their profession should lead attorneys to abstain, during the trial of cases, from any intercourse with jurors which would tend to bring them into a closer or more intimate relation than is called for by the interchange of the customary social greetings.¹ Such association as is merely conventional does not require the granting of to the respect of both parties and the confidence of the court as the result of a trial substantially according to law and upon the evidence in court." McDaniels v. McDaniels, 40 Vt. 363, 375, 94 Am. Dec. 408.

[a] Where Juror's Connection With Case Not Known.—(1) The fact that the person speaking with the juror did not know of his connection with the case is a circumstance tending to establish the harmless character of the misconduct. Cowles v. Merchants, 140 Mass. 377, 5 N. E. 288. (2) Conversely the fact that the juror did not know of the interest in the case of the person with whom he conversed or associated is a matter tending strongly to establish a want of prejudice. Davis v. Littlefield, 97 S. C. 171, 81 S. E. 487.

[b] Want of Misconduct on Part of Juror.—The fact that a conversation was not invited by the juror who was guilty of no misconduct on his part, is to be considered. Caswell v. Pitcher (Me.), 10 Atl. 453; Cowles v. Merchants, 140 Mass. 377, 5 N. E. 288. See also infra, IX, F, 7.

of which complaint is made,²⁶ unless the misconduct was of such a nature that it is reasonably probable that the jury was influenced thereby,²⁷ or the surrounding circumstances were of such character as of themselves to raise a presumption that the misconduct operated to the prejudice of the defeated party.²⁸ Occasionally aggravated instances of misconduct are held to be intrinsically prejudicial.²⁹

[c] Where the misconduct is all on the part of the juror, the court will endeavor to uphold the verdict. Yancey v. Downer, 5 Litt. (Ky.) 8, 15 Am. Dec. 35, holding that a party should not be punished for a juror's misconduct.

[d] Participation in the misconduct by the complaining party will justify a refusal of relief. United States v. Salentine, 8 Biss. 404, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,213; State v. Wilson, 42 Wash. 56, 84 Pac. 409.

[a] "A contrary rule would, in many cases, operate most unjustly. It would punish an innocent person for the offence of another. If a juror conducts improperly, and violates his duty and his oath, he ought to be answerable for it and not a party in the cause who was in no manner accessory to the misconduct. To deprive a party of a verdict, which he may have honestly obtained, after a protracted and expensive litigation, merely because a juror may have improperly spoken of the cause, when he could have received no benefit from that act of the juror, and his opponent no injury, would seem considered, but does not always require a holding that the intercourse was harmless.³⁴

An order granting or refusing a new trial for misconduct affecting the jury will not ordinarily be interfered with on appeal.³⁵

[a] "The reasons for refusing to interfere with the discretion of a Circuit Judge in matters involving the purity of the jurybox and the integrity of verdicts are peculiarly strong. He is in the atmosphere of the trial and has opportunity to estimate the character and intelligence of the jurors, as well as of the person charged with improper conversation or corrupt dealings with them. He has opportunity also to consider the verdict in the light of the evidence and the sources from which the evidence comes and determine whether the verdict has so little support as to indicate corrupt or improper influence. These and perhaps other things afford the trial judge such superior means of coming to a just conclusion, that before disturbing his order on such a subject an appellate court should require very clear evidence of abuse of discretion." McGill Bros. v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 75 S. C. 177, 55 S. E. 216.

7. Statements Concerning Case Made in Hearing of Jurors.³⁹ The fact that a case is commented on in the presence or hearing of a juror is frequently held to call for a reversal of the judgment.⁴⁰ But where it is not shown that the discussions were overheard by the jury, the verdict will not be affected.⁴¹ Even when the jury overheard the remarks, if it had already agreed upon a verdict, no prejudice results.⁴² So also, the verdict will be allowed to stand in such cases, unless from all the facts of the case, it appears to be reasonably probable that what was said and overheard actually affected the verdict.⁴³

Where the statements are made by a party to the suit, it is presumed that he intended that they would influence the jury and a new trial will be granted though it is not shown that the verdict was in fact influenced thereby.⁴⁴ Such remarks by counsel in the case are subject to especially strong criticism.⁴⁵

8. Benefits Received by Jurors.—The bribery of a juror, by a party, or in his behalf, is such misconduct as calls for the setting aside of the verdict.⁴⁶ Unsuccessful attempts at bribery of a juror are not always considered to be prejudicial, however,⁴⁷ especially where knowledge of the improper act is kept from the other jurors.⁴⁸ The patronizing by a party, of a place of business kept by a juror is condemned.⁴⁹ The treating of jurors by parties,⁵⁰ their relatives, or freshments of other kinds, should not be given to jurors;⁵⁶ nor should they be given cigars,⁵⁷ even though they are not informed as to the source of the gift,⁵⁸ though this fact should be considered in determining whether the irregularity was harmful in its effect.⁵⁹ But the mere treating of jurors, especially where participated in equally by both parties,⁶⁰ does not necessarily affect the verdict.⁶¹ If done after verdict, the action while criticized, will not require the granting of a new trial,⁶² unless the conduct is such as to raise the suspicion that

[b] No Qualifications of the Rule Exist.—"We prefer to follow the plain, simple rule of the common law. The rule, it is said, was adopted 'to prevent the jury from being tempted to find a verdict against their unbiased sense of the right of the case, by motives of gratitude or feeling for favors, however slight, conferred by either of the parties (4 Wash. C. C. 34), and therefore the rule applies to any treating, of any of the jury at any time after they are sworn, and before they agree upon their verdict; whether once or several times; by design or inadvertently, in the presence of the officer or in his absence; and whether we might deem it called or uncalled for by the proprieties of life.'" *Sacramento & Meredith Min. The danger is not in the use of the gift, the cigars in this case, but it lies in the probability that the attorney may have won the favor of the jury or created the impression that a measure of obligation existed because of the gift of the cigars, which may have created in their minds a feeling that they had received a favor and a desire to reciprocate." Steenburgh v. McRorie, 60 Misc. 510, 113 N. Y. Supp. 1118.

something other than the law and the evidence adduced, influenced the jury,⁶³ or the misconduct was so gross as to require punishment to prevent other cases from being affected.⁶⁴

Statutes in some states prohibit the "treating" of jurors by parties, either during the trial or after the verdict has been returned.⁶⁵

9. Presence of Outsiders in the Juryroom.—Outsiders have no right to be in the juryroom during the deliberations of the jury,⁶⁶ and their presence there,⁶⁷ especially in criminal cases,⁶⁸ may be a sufficient excuse for granting a new trial. But the mere temporary presence of outsiders has, in many cases, been held to have no adverse effect upon the verdict, where no prejudice resulted from the intrusion and it was apparent that it was the result⁶⁹ of an inadvertent

10. Letters Received or Sent by Jurors.—Written communications to jurors on necessary and personal matters, after being inspected by the court, may be given to them;⁷² but the receipt of uninspected letters is seldom held to be prejudicial.⁷³ In capital cases, however, the tendency is to limit the practice,⁷⁴ and the receipt of sealed letters, which are not inspected by the court, may constitute prejudicial misconduct.⁷⁵ The writing of letters by jurors to their families will not ordinarily be prejudicial.⁷⁶

11. Telephone Conversations.—Conversations by jurors with other persons over the telephone are peculiarly subject to suspicion and abuse;⁷⁷ they should be allowed to take place only in the presence of all the jurors and the officer in charge of them,⁷⁸ and should, of course,

[a] "If an improper separation of the jury is a just ground for setting aside a verdict in a criminal case, it seems to us for a much stronger reason, is the reception of uninspected and sealed letters. There is much better opportunity to detect any improper influence exerted upon a juror who leaves his fellows and goes into the street and among the people, than to detect the same or a worse influence exerted upon him by a sealed letter sent to the same juror through the postoffice or otherwise. We may guard against the former, but it seems impossible to guard against the latter. The reception of sealed letters by jurors during the trial of a prisoner, especially a capital case, renders the verdict vicious, and it should be set aside and a new trial granted the prisoner who has been convicted, although the jurors, in the absence of the letters swear that none of such letters so received in any manner related to the case on trial." *State v. not refer to the case under consideration.⁷⁹ Where an improper conversation takes place, the burden is upon the successful party to show the harmlessness of the action and its lack of prejudice to the defeated party.⁸⁰

12. Admonition by Court.⁸¹—The court should instruct the jury not to communicate with other persons while they are serving on the case;⁸² but failure to do so, no misconduct of the jurors being shown, is not ground for a new trial.⁸³ The court may properly call attention to reports of misconduct which have reached him and emphatically admonish them as to their duty.⁸⁴

G. CONDUCT OF JURORS. — 1. In General.—Misconduct of a single juror is sufficient to affect the verdict.⁸⁵ Deliberations of the jury continue in the eyes of the law until their verdict is returned in open court and until after they have been polled, if a poll be demanded, and misconduct may be predicated upon their conduct until that time.⁸⁶

Wagering on the nature of the verdict which will be returned is strongly condemned.⁸⁷ Playing cards among themselves,⁸⁸ or with the officer in charge of them,⁸⁹ prior to the final submission of the case is harmless; but after final submission, such is highly improper.⁹⁰ Persistence in rendering an improper verdict may be punished by the court.⁹¹ Conduct by jurors during the trial evincing an opinion favorable to one of the parties is not necessarily ground for a new trial.⁹²

2. Attention to Trial Proceedings.—It constitutes misconduct for a juror to sleep in the jurybox,⁹³ and may be ground for a new trial,⁹⁴ though it is usually held to be a harmless irregularity.⁹⁵ Jurors should listen attentively to the argument of counsel.⁹⁶

short time by a juror during the argument of counsel for the defendant in a criminal cause, does not of itself constitute a sufficient cause for a new trial." McClary v. State, 75 Ind. 260.

[b] Action of Trial Court Conclusively.—"The learned judge stated when this motion was before him that he had given particular attention to this juryman during the trial because of his age, and was able to say upon his own knowledge that he was awake and attentive except for a single instant, and that he lost nothing of the trial. It was idle to call witnesses to prove what the learned judge knew to be untrue." Com. v. Jongrass, 181 Pa. 172, 37 Atl. 207.

96. McAllister v. Sibley, 25 Me. 474.

[a] A statement by a juror to the effect that he had made up his mind and that what counsel said would make no difference while improper, is not prejudicial misconduct. "It is the duty of jurors to listen to the arguments of counsel touching the facts in issue. They are not supposed to have viewed the evidence in all the aspects, in which counsel may present it. The same facts often make a different impression upon the mind, after they have been placed in certain relations to each other, from that which was previously produced. But it would be strange if there were not many cases, wherein the minds of the jury were fully convinced before anything was said in argument; but it does not therefore follow, that they had resolved to turn a deaf ear to the remarks of counsel." McAllister v. Sibley, 25 Me. 474, 488.

4. Taking Notes.—Jurors may, with the consent of the court, make notes of the testimony given by the witnesses,⁹⁹ although the practice is not a favored one in all courts,¹ and the proceedings should not be delayed for that purpose.² Nor should the taking of notes be persisted in after the court has prohibited it.³

Without corrupt purpose his notes may be inaccurate, or meager, or careless, and loosely deficient, partial and altogether incomplete. With a corrupt purpose, they may be false in fact, entered for the purpose of misleading or deceiving his fellows when he comes to appeal to them. There is no protection against such dangers, except to forbid the practice." United States v. Davis, 103 Fed. 457.

[a] "It is always allowable and we think courts generally approve of jurors asking occasional questions of witnesses while giving their testimony. But it is manifestly improper for a juror to enter upon disputes, and call for the reading of minutes of testimony previously given, and to enter upon a discussion and controversy with counsel in the case as to the construction of written evidence." But the irregularity was held to have been cured by the instruction of the court.

of scars or wounds.⁵ It is not necessarily misconduct for a juror to confirm a statement by a witness,⁶ or to ask the court to allow a witness to tell his story in his own way.⁷ A juror may properly address pertinent questions to the court;⁸ but he should not attempt to discover how the jury stood on a former trial.⁹ Nor should he express his agreement with or disapprobation of statements by counsel.¹⁰ The expression of an intention not to consider certain material evidence is improper.¹¹ Urging haste in the conduct of the trial is harmless,¹² unless done in such a manner as to indicate partiality or prejudice on the part of the juror.¹³ A suggestion that a view of the premises be had by the jury is harmless, even though the court refuses their request.¹⁴ Conversing in the jurybox about matters other than those

"While it was improper for a juror to make a remark of that character and while the court might, with propriety, impose a small fine on a juror for a disregard of duty, yet we are not aware of any authority for reversing a judgment where an irregularity of that character has intervened on the trial of a cause." Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Holland, 122 Ill. 461, 13 N. E. 145.

[c] Expression of approval of an improper remark of counsel, unrebuked by the court was held to require a new trial, since "the comment of the juror indicated such prejudice as disqualified him in the proper performance of his duty. . . . [a] Psychology of the Rule.—"Now the human mind is constituted so that what one himself publicly declares touching any controversy is much more potent in biasing his judgment and confirming his predilections than similar declarations which he may hear uttered by other persons. When most men commit themselves publicly to any fact, theory, or judgment they are too apt to stand by their own public declarations, in defiance of evidence. This pride of opinion and of consistency belongs to human nature. Where, therefore, a juror talks outside the jury room about a case pending, and undecided before him, he gives the clearest evidence that he is not an impartial and unbiased juror." Pool v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 6 Fed. 844.

California Stage Co.*, 6 Cal. 228, 229.

[b] So a remark that a witness had to be given a rest because the attorneys worried him so and that it was an outrage, did not require a new trial. State v. Allen, 89 Iowa 49, 56 N. W. 261.

[c] A message given by a juror to a friend to be given the defendant that if he were not excused from the jury he would convict the defendant, was held not to require a new trial. State v. Robidou, 20 N. D. 518, 128 N. W. 1124, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 1015.

[d] "So long as the conversation was all by the jurors, and no answers were made to their questions, they were not advised of anything by reason of such conversation which they did not already know, and hence it is impossible that the plaintiffs could have been prejudiced thereby." *Foedisch v. [e] The substance of what was said by the juror must be shown to the not voluntarily listen to remarks concerning it made to them or in their presence,¹⁹ though the fact that they do so listen is not of itself a sufficient reason for setting aside the verdict.²⁰ Expressions of opinion,²¹ and, in general, comments on the weight and effect of evidence and the credibility of witnesses, are frequently not prejudicial.²² The expression, by a juror, of a fixed, formed opinion on the merits of the case, disqualifies him,²³ and a new trial will be granted court in order to enable it to determine whether the merits of the case had been discussed to the prejudice of the parties. Walker v. Dailey, 87 Iowa 375, 54 N. W. 344; Ridenour v. Clarinda, 65 Iowa 465, 21 N. W. 779.

they tend to commit the mind of the juror uttering them to a foregone conclusion. Nevertheless they are not always regarded as sufficient ground for new trial. . . . The truth seems to be, that there is no unvarying rule, but that courts, unless the misconduct is very gross or has been participated in by the successful party, exercise their discretion and grant or refuse a new trial as they think justice requires." Kaul v. Brown, 17 R. I. 14, 16, 20 Atl. 10.

[b] "Prejudging and giving an opinion on the statement of certain facts are very different things. The first implies a strong disposition to favor the one side or the other, a determination to find in one way, let the evidence be what it will. The last involves the truth of certain facts and propositions in the sentiments delivered; and impressions thus made may be effaced by the production of other evidence." *Goodright v. [a] "Absence of prejudice is not only a qualification precedent to the acceptance of a juror, but its maintenance throughout the trial is also essential to the continuance of the juror's qualification. To lose it during the course of proceeding would incapacitate in such a case,²⁴ as well as where the statement indicates an intention to exercise no judgment in agreeing upon a verdict.²⁵ Statements made after the verdict has been returned seldom call for the granting of a new trial.²⁶

b. Statements of Jurors to Each Other.—While it is the better practice for the jury not to discuss the evidence until the entire case is in and submitted to them, such conduct does not require a reversal.²⁷ Declarations of the jurors to each other, with reference to the case, are seldom held to affect the verdict rendered.²⁸ Statements

[a] "It is a well known rule, that where, during the progress of a trial and before the submission of the case, a juror has made statements outside the juryroom concerning the case, or evidence offered therein, indicating a fixed opinion, unfavorable to the moving party, or ill will towards him, it is ground for a new trial." Cooper v. Carr, 161 Mich. 405, 126 N. W. 468.

[b] Remarks "characterized by their intense personality in respect to this defendant, and [which] were uniformly directed to her personal appearance, her personal conduct, and her doom," require a new trial. State v. Carter, 11 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 123, 125.

[c] Illustration.—A new trial was granted because of a juror's statement that things were "going pretty well, Mrs. Willard is going to beat the doctor." This statement "amounts to an expression of opinion by the juror that Mrs. Willard was going to win and to an assertion that he should be pleased to have her win. This was to all intents and purposes the formation and the expression of an opinion on the merits of the case, for it is not to be assumed that the juror supposed she was going to win regardless of the merits. The formation of such an opinion by a juror, and its expression during the trial to anyone but his fellow jurors, disqualifies him as much as the formation and expression of such an opinion would before trial. It is the expression of the opinion that disqualifies, not the formation of it." Noreross v. Willard, 82 Vt. 185, 72 Atl. 820.
